INTRODUCTION

IN publishing this History and Genealogy of the Stebbins Family we have aimed to make it as complete and at the same time as simple as possible, embracing the desirable features of numerous other works of this kind hitherto published, as well as many new ones never before used.

Several thousand descendants of the Stebbins Family have been furnished with blanks to be filled out with data concerning their families, but many of these have failed to respond to our communications. The general characteristics of the family, as gleaned from the returns received, seem to include a deep religious sentiment, unobtrusive manners, thrift and frugality. While the majority of them have followed in the footsteps of their early ancestors, and have successfully tilled the soil, many have attained prominence as preachers, musicians, teachers and manufacturers, showing that there has not been a lack of education and mechanical genius among them.

Whenever it has been possible we have copied wills, records, commissions, etc., directly from the originals. Where members or descendants of a family have given different dates preference has been given to those which seem most plausible, according to the existing circumstances. In many cases where there were no means of determining which date was correct, the various dates have been given. When Bible records have differed from town records, the latter have been accepted as correct. Dates which have been copied from town records expressly for this work, and which are therefore authentic, are followed by the letters T. R. in brackets.

The work of collecting information regarding different members of the Stebbins Family has unfortunately not been made easier by previous genealogies and we have been obliged to rely on the co-operation of its members for a large portion of the information obtained. We have to thank the descendants generally for their kindness and readiness to assist us in many ways.

We desire to make special acknowledgment to Mr. Frederick Briggs Stebbins [No. 3792] and to Mr. Orramel Graves Stebbins [No. 3165] for data and photographs which they kindly furnished us; to Mr. Charles Joseph Stebbins [No. 4366] for the use of his father's manuscript book and for a number of interesting photographs of Colonial and Revolutionary Army Commissions; to Mr. William W. Foster [No. 2765] for personal researches in Springfield and Northampton, Mass., enabling us to reproduce a photograph of the cenotaph erected in Northampton cemetery in memory of Rowland Stebbins; and to Miss Ruth Edwards [No. 2720] for a large collection of photographs.

For data on the Deacon Edward Stebbins branch we are especially indebted to Mrs. Sallie Day Townsend, Oyster Bay, L. I., and to Mr. James Shepard, New Britain, Conn.

The use of the plates for the maps of home-lots of early settlers in Springfield and Longmeadow was kindly permitted by Mrs. Henry M. Burt of Springfield, Mass.

Every member of the Stebbins Family should feel indebted to Mr. J. Howard Stebbins [No. 5019] for his careful supervision of the half-tone work, by which much better results were secured than could otherwise have been obtained.

We wish to express our thanks to the Newberry and Chicago Public libraries for the many courtesies extended during the compilation of this work.

Our thanks are also due to Mr. Edward A. Claypool, Genealogist (Honorary Vice-President of the Old Northwest Genealogical Society), under whose personal supervision this work was compiled.

We crave the indulgence of the Stebbins Family for any inaccuracies, omissions or errors which may have occurred.

RALPH STEBBINS GREENLEE.

ROBERT LEMUEL GREENLEE.

EXPLANATORY

ya or yei for they.

wch for which.

Used in this connection the letter "y" represents the Saxon character for "th." These were used principally in written records or other writings of the time and are reproduced in printed copies of Colonial and other records, wills, etc.

Matter enclosed in brackets [ ] is not a part of the records, but explanations by the compilers, or supplied where the records are illegible.

To explain what may be misleading as to dates, it will be well to keep in mind that the new year, previous to 1752, began with the 25th of March, consequently when double dates appear, like 1651.2, the last figure represents the correct year, as we reckon at present [that is, Old Style 1651, New Style 1652]. While March 25th was the beginning of the new year, March was always considered as the first month, hence where "2nd mo." appears it stands for April.

[T. R.]—Town Records; [B. R.]—Bible Records. [G. S.]—gravestone. [Col. Rec.]—Colonial Records.

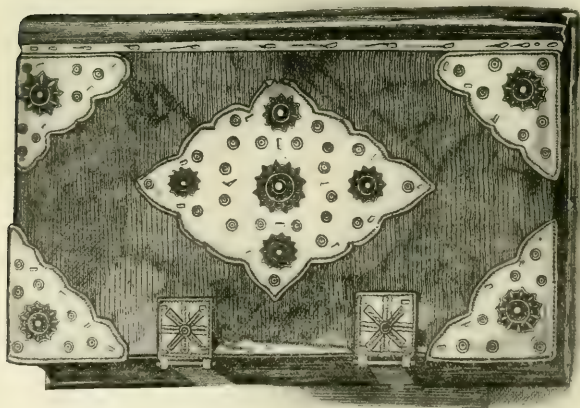

Each Stebbins descendant has an individual number which will be found in the following generation if carried out.

+ indicates that the family is carried forward and will be found in the next generation.

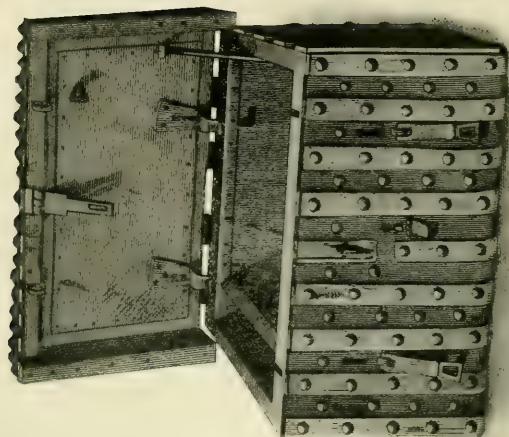

The number directly over the name in the Ancestral line (in braces), following the name in black-faced capitals, is the individual number of the parent, grandparent, etc.

The superior figure following a name indicates the generation. For example: John Stebbins<sup>6</sup> indicates that he is of the sixth generation.

DOMESDAY BOOK.

STEBBINS IN ENGLAND.

DOMESDAY BOOK.

The original Domesday Book (the name is of Saxon origin and signifies "the book of judicial verdict"), which is kept in the Chapter-house at Westminster, England, was begun by order of William the Conqueror, with the advice of his parliament, in the year of our Lord 1080 and completed in 1086.

"Commissioners (discreet and great persons but generally Normans) were sent into every county, and juries summoned and impanelled in each hundred, out of all orders of freemen, from barons down to the lowest farmers to give in upon oath to the Commissioners, by verdict or presentment, due information for the faithful and impartial execution of it."

"These inquisitions being taken, they were sent up to Winchester, and the substance of them was afterwards methodized and formed into the record we now call Domesday, and deposited at the King's Exchequer."

It comprises two volumes, the first of which is a large folio written on three hundred and eighty-two double pages of vellum, the second is a quarto written on four hundred and fifty double pages of vellum but in single column.

"The order generally observed in writing the survey is to set down in the first place at the head of every county, the King's name 'REX WILLIEMUS', and then a list of the bishops, religious houses, churches, and great men according to their rank, that held of the king in capite [tenant], in that County; likewise of his thanes, ministers, and servants", etc.

"The orthography of places in Domesday frequently varies from what we find them described by in the records soon after the conquest and their present appellation." [This may arise in part] "from the scribes and clerks who took down the names being Normans and those who gave in the information being Saxons", and from the names being since that time much corrupted and falsely spelt, the names of towns, as they are found in the survey, being, in the opinion of some, the real, true and old names as they were in the time of Edward the Confessor; and might have been taken from Alfred's Domesday, which was at that time extant." (King Alfred, about the year 900, composed a book of this nature which was extant at Winchester at the coming in of the Conqueror, but is since lost.)

"The description is generally thus: How many hides or carucates, the land is gelded or taxed at? Whose it was at the time of King Edward? [A. D. 1041-1066.] Who the present owner and the subtenants? What and how much arable land, meadow, pasture, and wood there is? How much in demense, how much in tenancy, and what number of ploughs it will keep? What mills and fishings, how many freemen, frockmen, co-liberti, cotarii, bordarii, radmanni, radchenistres, villans, maid-servants, and bondsmen there are? In some counties what young cattle, sheep, working horses, etc., are upon the land?

and how many hogs the woods will support? Sometimes what churches there are, and how many priests or parsons? What customary rents, prestations, and services, are to be paid and rendered out of the lands? What has been added to the manor, what withheld from it, & by whom? What land is waste, what the whole was let for in the time of King Edward? and what the net rent, whether it was too dear rented or whether it might be improved? But all entries in it are not alike, they being more or less exact and particular in some counties than others, according to the care, diligence, and industry of the commissioners and scribes."

Ellis' introduction to Domesday Book I pp. 359-360.

"In 1767 in consequence of an Address of the House of Lords, His Majesty [King George III] was graciously pleased to give directions for the publication, among other Records, of the Domesday Survey. In the following year, specimens, one executed with types, the other by engraving, were submitted by command of the Lords of His Majestys Treasury to the President and Council of the Society of Antiquaries for their opinion". * * * At the close of 1768 a resolution was taken to print it with metal types. A fac-simile type, uniform and regular, with tolerable exactness, though not with all the corresponding nicety of the original, was projected by Mr. John Nichols, and cut for the purpose by Mr. Joseph Jackson. The publication was entrusted to Mr. Abraham Farley, a gentleman of great experience in records, and in 1770 the printing was actually commenced. It was completed early in 1783, having been ten years in passing through the press. The cost of this edition is said to have been £38,000, so that the cost of a copy of this work was so great that very few persons could afford to purchase one. [The Newberry Library of Chicago has both volumes, also the photo-zincograph edition.] In 1808 the type with which it was executed was destroyed by fire which consumed Mr. Nichols' printing office.

In 1862 by command of Her Majesty Queen Victoria the whole of the original Domesday Book was reproduced in fac-simile by the photo-zincograph process. In subsequent pages we present our readers with reproductions from each edition, of the portions relating to STEBBING, which will be interesting not only to the Stebbins descendants, but to many antiquarians and genealogists who have not had access to this important work.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME STEBBINS.

Arthur's Dictionary of Names (1857) p. 240.

The name STEBBINS is a corruption or shortening of Stebbing which has been accounted for as deriving from STUB (Saxon STYBO, Latin STIPES), a stump, and ING, a field or meadow.

As it was first applied to the parish of STUBING or STIBING, it may well have been a "stumpy field". It is variously written in the records as Stabinge, Stebinge, Stebin, Stebings, Stebbinge, Stebbings, Stebbins, Stibing, Stibinga, Stibingham, Stobing, Stubing, Stubbing, and sometimes Stepping, as will be seen later, in various extracts from the old English records, the spelling being given in each case exactly as found.

Professor William Stubbs of Oxford University says, in his "Constitutional History of England" [I p. 81, edition of 1874] that "In England, it is probable that all the primitive villages in whose name the patronymic syllable "ing" occurs were originally colonized by communities united either really by blood or by the belief in a common descent."

The earliest mention we have found of the name is in the DOMESDAY BOOK, and was at that time (A. D. 1080 to 1086) applied to the villa of STIBING, which is believed by eminent scholars to have been the name in use at the time King Alfred's Domesday Book was compiled (A. D. 900).

STEBBING PARISH IN THE TIME OF WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

By the following reproductions from Domesday Book it will be seen that the parish of Stebbing was at that time (A. D. 1080 to 1086) claimed by Henry de Ferrers, Ralph Peverell, Count Eustace, and the Abbey of St. Mary de Torni.

This abbreviated mediaeval Latin although very complex, we have with the aid of Kelbam's "Domesday Book Illustrated" (edition of 1788) rendered into plain English, as follows:

LAND OF HENRY FERRERS.

In the Hundred of Hidingaforda [Hineford] Henry de Ferrers holds STEBBING in demesne as tenant [tenant of the King]. Siuward (a) formerly held this for a manor, paying taxes on two hides (b) and thirty acres [270 acres]. There were then and after two carucates (c) in the demesne now three. Formerly there were four carucates [480 acres] divided among the tenants, now there are six and one-half [780 acres]. Then there were six villani (d) now eight; then sixteen bordarii (e) now thirty-three. Then two Serfs (f) now one. There are woods enough for one hundred and fifty hogs; the pasture land is nine acres. When Henry received this place a half interest in a mill went with it, but not so now. A priest has always been on this place. Formerly there were seven animals [cows, oxen or cattle] and forty sheep, and sixty hogs, and one carthorse; now there are eighteen animals and one hundred and forty sheep, and eighty hogs and one carthorse. The valuation then was ten pounds (g) now twelve. In the time of King Edward the total value was likewise of so much value as when received.

(a) Siward the Thane: "The magnanimous earl of Northumberland, who, when he found he was near his end, got upon his legs, and causing his armor to be put on, expired in that posture, declaring it was a shameful thing for a brave man to die in his bed." He died at York in 1055.

(b) When the realm was first divided a hide of land was equal to one hundred and twenty acres and although it varies in different shires, the zincograph edition of Domesday (Essex p. III) says it is generally supposed to contain one hundred and twenty acres, hence two hides and thirty acres would equal two hundred and seventy acres.

(c) A carucate or plough-land contained one hundred and twenty acres. Eight ox-gangs make a carucate and every ox-gang contains fifteen acres.

(d) Villani-Villeins, "From Villa a county farm, where-unto they were deputed to do service. They are supposed to have been tenants of a superior degree to Servi, because they held some cottages and land, but their employment was mostly servile, and their persons and property at the disposal of the lord."

(e) Bordarii-Bordars. "These were distinct from the Servi and Villani, and seem to be those of a less servile condition who had a bord or cottage, with a small parcel of land allowed to them." "They were drudges, and performed vile services, which were reserved by the lord upon a poor little house, and a small parcel of land, and might perhaps be domestic works, such as grinding, threshing, drawing water, cutting wood, &c." "Tenants that paid poultry, and other provisions, for lord's board or table."

(f) Serfs, bondmen, servile tenants, servants in the house.

(g) Money is generally estimated at thirty times its present value.

LAND OF RALPH PEVERELL.

In the Hundred of Hidingford [Hineford] and at Stebbing, Ralph had in the demesne which was held in the time of King Edward the Conqueror [A. D. 1041-1066] by Siward ["Siward the Thane"], land for a Manor and three hundred and ninety acres of land.

At that time there was a carucate [one hundred and twenty acres] in the demesne and when received by Ralph there were six, now there are five. There were always eleven plough-lands held by the tenants. There were eighteen Villeins, now there are nineteen. Then and after there were fourteen bordars, now thirty-one. Then and after there were thirteen serfs, now eleven. There were woods for two hundred hogs and twenty-four acres of pasture. There was then one mill and when they took possession one and one-half furlongs of vineland, now four; only half bears fruit. Then there were five work horses, five cows, a hundred sheep, fifty hogs, five beehives of bees. Then valued at ten pounds, later twelve, now sixteen pounds. For this Manor the living was thirty-five acres and ten shillings. Its value the same as in the former valuation.

THE LAND OF COUNT EUSTACE.

In Stebins town (or villa) there are five virgates [150 to 200 acres] of land to tax, belonging to Sibestune [Stebbing villa]. There are now one hundred and twenty acres of arable land. Five villeins who use one plough-land and a half [one hundred and eighty acres] and five acres of pasture-land. This land is all held by Count Eustace of London.

Domesday.
Vol. I.
p. 205.

Land owned by the Abbey of Saint Mary of Torni. Normanercross Hundred. [This Abbey was situated in Huntingdonshire, but had possessions in other shires.]

In Stebbins-town there are one hundred and fifty to two hundred acres of taxable land belonging to Stebbing villa.

Of arable land there are one hundred and twenty acres.

There is a church and five tenants who use one plough-land and a half, [a plough-land was "as much land as may be tilled and laboured with one plough and the beasts belonging thereto in a year"] and five acres of pasture.

LOCATION.

In a reprint of "An Historical and Chorographical Description of the County of ESSEX, by John Norden", in 1594, we find the earliest map showing the location of the parish of STIBBING, accompanied by a list of "The hundreds, and how they are limited to repaire, for the more ease of the countrie, to certayne places, for the more spedie dispatche of ordinary causes." The hundred of Hinceforde, repairs to Castle Henningham and Braynetre [Braintree].

The division of a Hundred has been variously accounted for by antiquarians and historians, some claiming it referred to the quantity of land it contained, or the fiscal value, while others say it is understood to be of a hundred men. Blackstone says, "As ten families of freeholders made up a town or tithing, so ten tithings composed a superior division called a hundred, as consisting of ten times ten families."

The population of Essex County in 1086, as recorded in Domesday Book, was 16,060; but there are many facts which go to prove that these figures were not meant to represent the population farther than was necessary for ascertaining the geld or taxable property, for, in this Norman period, as can be proved from records, the whole of Essex was, in a manner, one continued forest; yet once only in that county is a forester mentioned.

STEBBING parish, in the hundred of Hinkford, is situated forty-four miles north by west of London, twelve miles north of Chelmsford, five miles west by north of Braintree, eleven miles north of Springfield, three and one quarter miles northeast by east from Great Dunmow, and two miles north of Felsted station on the Northern branch of the Great Eastern Railway.

It is bounded southward by Felsted; extends westward to the junction of the hundreds of Hineckford and Dunmow; eastward, to Pantfield and Rayne; and northward, to Little Saling. It is computed to be twenty-six miles in circumference, containing 4,383 acres of land and 6 acres of water. The situation is on high ground, and much of the soil light and fertile, its average annual produce per acre being wheat 25 bushels, barley 36, oats 32.

It is divided into districts, viz: Brand End, Duck End, Church End, STEBBING GREEN, and STEBBING FORD. [STEBBING GREEN is now (1901) an open park or field of twenty to thirty acres, about one-half mile from the village, open to the public. STEBBING FORD is crossed by a stone bridge which was built over a hundred years ago as evidenced by a tablet bearing the date.] The population in 1821 was 1,311; in 1831, 1,434; and in 1891, 994. The chief part of the population inhabits the village, which is situated close to the church and contains some good houses, a place of worship for dissenters of the denomination of Independents, a primitive Methodist chapel and a Friend's Meeting House.

There is an annual agricultural fair here for horses, cattle, fat calves and other farm products on the 10th of July. The village is being gradually depopulated by the exodus into towns. There are two mills and a brick kiln on the brook which flows through the parish toward Chelmsford, but the chief industry of the parish is the cultivation of the land, although, since the education act of 1870, and the beginning of the agricultural depression in 1879, husbandry has become increasingly unpopular among the young men. The school, a Board school, was started in 1876.

At STEBBING PARK, the present name of STEBBING MANOR, there is a mound entirely artificial, of some height, and covered with trees. It is moated, and traditionally said to have been the site of a castle, although there is no historical evidence of such. There are many such mounds in Essex, and they were probably constructed originally as places of sepulture, and used as defensive positions.

PORTERS HALL.

The manor house of PORTERS HALL is an ancient building, with a moat, still standing on the Braintree road, which was named from the family of Porter, who held it in the time of Edwards I and II. This estate formerly belonged to the Peverel family, at least the chief part of it. JOHN DE STEBBING, a younger branch of the Ferrers family, held it of the honour of Peverel, in the time of King John [1199-1216]; afterwards it was in possession of families surnamed Dunstavil, Umfravil, Porter and Badlesmere; and was ultimately incorporated into the estate belonging to the Essex family.

THE CHURCH.

The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is pleasantly situated on an eminence at the highest part of the village. It was probably built in the time of Edward III [1327-1377], and is a large and lofty building of the decorated style. The nave and chancel roofs are perpendicular and a clere-story has been added to the nave. It consists of nave, chancel, aisles, porch and tower. Its proportions are very good. The tower has five bells, one dated 1772, one 1799 and three 1839. There are the remains of an altar at the east end of both aisles. In the south aisle there also is the staircase of a roodloft. There is a chancel screen of three openings (decorated) of white stone, very beautiful in design. This has been very much mutilated. Probably the mischief was begun in the fifteenth century, to which date must be referred a roodloft, the existence of which is evidenced by the remains of its staircase in the north chancel wall. On the south side of the sacarium are sedilia, and connected with them and nearest the altar, a double piscina, above which is a credence. There was formerly a chantry, founded by Sir John Bultell, clerk, and endowed with lands and tenements in this parish. Also an obit, endowed by the founder, John Gunnock, with a tenement and sixteen acres of land. These were both of them granted to Thomas Golding, Esq.

Wright's Essex Co., Eng. p. 53.

The church was partially restored in 1884. It had undergone much devastation in times of persecution of the church. The stained glass, of which there had been abundance, except a few fragments, have perished. The following arms were painted on the windows of the church: Edmund Crouchback, earl of Lancaster; Bohun; Vere; Vernon; Warren; earl of Surrey; Fitzwalter; Louvain; Quiney; John Holland, duke of Exeter; and Umfraville.

Rev. A. R. B. Wright, Rector of Stebbing Parish (1900). Wright's Essex Co., Eng. p. 53.

The brasses have all lost their labels with inscriptions, and in many cases are themselves gone. In trenching up the nave, nothing was found except a few fragments of encaustic tiles. The foundations of a former church anterior to the aisles were visible. The old oak sittings had scarcely a trace left. There was some little carved work of the perpendicular style enclosed in the wood work of a huge pew. A west gallery of a very late date ran from north to south, across the tower arch. The church has three hundred and fifty-four sittings, but at the west end is room for many more. The font is composed of two parts—a base very early, and placed on it a font, apparently perpendicular. No entry in the Register is anterior to 1712. [In 1882 Mr. John Stebbins Lee, of St. Lawrence University, New York, was informed by the Episcopal Minister that the early church records of STEBBING PARISH were transferred to London "about one hundred years ago".] There are some parochial charities, originally in the management of the vicar and church-wardens, but now of trustees appointed by the Parish Council, the Vicar being retained as chairman. Their total value is very inconsiderable.

PRIOR'S (OR FRIAR'S) HALL.

Wright's Essex
p. 53.

The manor of PRIOR'S (or FRIAR'S) HALL, is so called from its having formerly belonged to the Prior of the hospital of St. John of Jerusalem. It is now called Parsonage Farm. The living was originally a rectory, annexed to the chief lordship of STEBBING, holden by the Ferrers family; and, in the time of King Henry the second [A. D. 1165], William de Ferrers, third Earl of Derby, gave this church to the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, the grant being confirmed by his son Robert, on which the rectorial great tithes were appropriated to their house, and a vicarage ordained, of which the hospitallers continued patrons until the dissolution of the order, when this rectory was given to the crown, and, in 1543, was granted, with the advowson of the vicarage, to Thomas Cornewall, whose descendant, Humphrey Cornewall, in 1567, sold them to William Tiffin, who, in 1575, sold them to William Fitch, Esq., from whom they passed, in 1585, to William and Bartholomew Brook, who, in 1601, conveyed them to John and Thomas Sorrel, in whose family they remained till John Sorrel, jointly with his mother Dorothy, sued a fine, and gave this family possession to John Lane of Norfolk, who gave it to his son Roger Lane, who dying unmarried, it came to his father and mother, for the term of their lives; and, after their decease, became the property of Roger, the son of Francis, second son of Henry Mansir, who sold this possession to Arthur Batt, merchant, of London, who, on his decease in 1731, left it to his brother, Christopher Batt, Esq., of Salisbury, whose descendant, Martha Batt, being left sole heiress, married Richard Bingham of Bingham's Melcombe Dorset, whose great-great grandson, the late Colonel R. H. Bingham of Bingham's Melcombe, sold the advowson to W. Fuller Maitland of Stansted Hall. The glebe land attached to the Rectory has passed also by sale to Mr. H. C. Hales, who occupies the farm. It is in the jurisdiction of the Commissary of Essex and Herts, concurrently with the consistorial Court of the Bishop of London, valued in the kings books at twelve pounds; net income two hundred and three pounds.

He was succeeded by his son

WILLIAM PEVEREL <sup>3</sup>, who was driven from the country on account of the murder of Ralph, earl of Chester. Dugdale (in 1675) says, "Of which William * * it is chiefly memorable: that, having poisoned Ranulph, Earl of CHESTER, about the later end of King Stephens Reign: and fearing the severity of King Henry the second for that foul crime, he fled to a Monastery of his own Patronage (which doubtless was LENTON) where he caused himself to be shorn a Monk; but being advertised of King Henries coming that way from YORK, he quitted his habit, and privily fled away: leaving all his Castles and possessions to the Kings Pleasure: some of which continued many years after in the Crown, as appears by the Sheriffs Accompts: and at length were given by King Henry the second, to John Earl of Moreton afterwards King. But some came to the Family of Ferrers in marriage with Margaret Daughter and Heir to this last mentioned William."

THE FERRERS FAMILY.

This ancient family, than which few can claim a higher or more illustrious descent, derives from Walchelín, a Norman, [Generally written "Gualche-line," "a noble Norman, from Ferriers, St. Hilary near Bernai (Normandy),"

The first of this eminent family that settled in England was HENRY DE FERRIERS [or "Henricus de Ferrariis", also spelled Ferieres, Ferreires, and Ferrieres], son of Gualchelina de Feriers. He is named in Domesday Book as a "Tenant in Capite", [i. e. One who held his lands immediately from the king.] He evidently was with William the Conqueror in the conquest of England which ended with the battle of Senlac, better known as the battle of Hastings, October 14, 1066.

He was one of the commissioners appointed by the Conqueror to make the great "Survey of the Relm" from which was compiled the Domesday Book.

"That he was a person of much eminency both for his knowledge and integrity there is no doubt; otherwise it is not likely he should have been trusted in so high and weighty an employment: neither of less Power and Wealth, as may seem by the Lands he then possessed, which were twenty Lordships in Berkshire, in Wiltshire three, in Essex five, in Oxfordshire seven, in Warwickshire six, in Lincolnshire two, in Buckinghamshire two, in Gloucestershire one, in Herefordshire two, in Hantshire three, in Nottinghamshire three, in Leicestershire thirty-five, in Derbyshire an hundred and fourteen; and in Staffordshire seven, besides the Castle and Burrough of Tutburie."

Thus we see his possessions amounted to two hundred and ten lordships, his chief seat being Tutbury Castle, near which he founded "a goodly Monastery for Clunie Monks, and amply endowed it with Lands and Revenues: Berta his wife first giving the whole Town of Dubbridge and afterwards the Mannor of Effanfort (or Esfanfort) thereto. He likewise gave to the Monks of Abendon in Berkshire the Tithes of Laking."

By BERTA his wife, he had issue:

This nobleman was also a liberal benefactor to the church. "Moreover he gave to the Knights Hospitalars the Churches of Turrok and Stebbing in Essex, with divers Lands in Passenham". His Lordship married MARGARET, daughter and heiress of WILLIAM PEVEREL, of Nottingham, by whom he had issue:

This nobleman rebelled against Henry II, and marching at the head of the Leicester men (19th Henry II. [1173]), upon Nottingham, then kept for the king by Reginald de Luci, got possession of the town, which he sacked, putting the greater part of the inhabitants to the sword, and taking the rest prisoners. He was soon afterwards, however, reduced to submission, and obliged to surrender to the crown his castles of Tutbury and Duffield, which were demolished by order of the king. This earl was also a benefactor to the church, having founded the priory of Woodham, commonly called Woodham-Ferrers, in Essex. His lordship married SIBILLA, daughter of William de Braose, Lord of Abergavenny and Brecknock, by whom he had:

WILLIAM DE FERRERS <sup>6</sup>, fifth Earl of Derby. This nobleman was ousted of his dignities of Derby and Nottingham by King Richard I, but they were soon after restored to him, and we find him accompanying the lion-hearted monarch to the Holy Land, where he lost his life at the siege of Acon [now known as Acre], anno 1191. His lordship, amongst other gifts to the church, gave, in the 1st Richard I. [A. D. 1189], for the health of his soul, and the soul of SIBEL his wife, to the monks of St. Denis, in France, one wax taper yearly, price thirteen pence; as also a stag and boar in their proper seasons, to be sent annually thither at the feast of St. Denis, by himself and heirs. He likewise gave to the Monks of Lenton, all his right to the church of Woodham-Ferrers in Essex.

He was succeeded by his son,

Burke's
Peerage
p. 197.

WILLIAM DE FERRERS <sup>7</sup>, sixth Earl of Derby. This nobleman, upon the return of King Richard from captivity, took arms in his behalf, and joining the Earl of Chester besieged Nottingham Castle [which with others had been seized by John, Earl of Moreton, the king's brother], which, after brief resistance, surrendered. For this and other acts of fidelity, he was chosen by the king to sit with the rest of the peers in the great council held at the said castle of Nottingham in the ensuing March. Moreover, at Richard's second coronation he was one of the four that carried the canopy over the king's head. Upon the accession of King John, his lordship, with the Earls of Clare and Chester, and other great men, swore fealty to the new monarch, but upon the condition that each person should have his right. His lordship was present at the coronation of King John [A. D. 1199], and on the seventh of June following, being solemnly created Earl of Derby by special charter, dated at Northampton, he was girt with a sword by the king's own hands (being the first of whom in any charter that expression was used). He had also a grant of the third penny of all the pleas before the sheriff throughout the whole county, whereof he was earl, to hold to him and his heirs as amply as any of his ancestors had enjoyed the same. Moreover, in consideration of two thousand marks, he obtained another charter from the king, of the manor of Higham-Ferrers, county Northampton, with the hundred and park: as also of the manors of Bliseworth and Newbottle, in the same shire; which were part of the lands of his great-great-grandfather, WILLIAM PEVEREL of Nottingham. King John also conferred upon him a mansion-house, situated in the parish of St. Margaret, within the city of London, which had belonged to Isaac, a Jew, at Norwich, to hold by the service of waiting upon the king (the earl and his heirs), at all festivals yearly, without any cap, but with a garland the breadth of his little finger upon his head. These liberal marks of royal favor were felt so gratefully by the earl, that in all the subsequent struggles between the king and the refractory barons, his lordship never once swerved from his allegiance, but remained true to the monarch; and after King John's decease, he adhered with the same unshaken loyalty to the interests of his son, King Henry III. During the reign of King John [1199-1216] the estate now known as Porters Hall, was held in honor of Peverel, by JOHN DE STEBBING, [John of Stebbing] a younger branch of the Ferrers family.

His lordship, the Earl of Derby, assisted at the coronation of the new monarch; [A. D. 1216] and immediately after the ensuing Easter he took part with the famous William Marshall (governor of the king and kingdom), the Earls of Chester and Albemarle, and many other great men in the siege of Mountsorell Castle, in Leicestershire, then held by Henry de Braybroke, and ten other stout knights; and the same year, was likewise with those noble persons at raising the siege of Lincoln, which place the rebellious barons with Louis, King of France, had invested. His lordship married AGNES, sister, and one of the co-heirs of Ranulph, Earl of Chester, by whom he had:

Thomas.

He died in 1246, and his countess died in the same year, after a union, according to some authorities, of seventy-five, and by others, of fifty-five years.

His lordship was succeeded by his elder son,

WILLIAM DE FERRERS <sup>8</sup>, seventh Earl of Derby. He married first, Sibil, daughter and co-heiress of William Mareschal, Earl of Pembroke, and had seven daughters. He married second, MARGARET, (who held the MANOR OF STEBBING with those of Woodham Ferrers and Fairsted, in dower), one of the daughters and co-heiresses of Roger de Quincy, earl of Winchester, and had:

ROBERT, his successor. +
WILLIAM, seated at Groby in Leicestershire. +
Joan, married to Thomas, Lord Berkley.

The Earl died in 1254, and was succeeded by his son, ROBERT DE FERRERS <sup>9</sup>, eighth and last Earl of Derby of the Ferrers family, who, joining the barons against Henry the third, was taken prisoner at Chesterfield, and by authority of the parliament, stripped of his vast possessions, which were given to Edmund, the king's second son. After suffering three years' imprisonment, his estates were restored on condition of his paying to Prince Edmund, on a certain day, fifty thousand pounds, which, not being able to do, his sureties made over these lands to the prince and his heirs forever.

In 1251, WILLIAM FERRERS <sup>9</sup> of Groby (brother of the said Robert, eighth Earl of Derby) received from his father the manors of Woodham, STUBING, and Fairsted, "with one message in chiche", whereby these estates were retained in the family, when the rest were confiscated to Prince Edmund. This WILLIAM FERRERS had also the manor of Groby in Leicestershire, the gift of his mother, Margaret, daughter and co-heiress of Roger de Quincy, Earl of Winchester. By his wife, JOAN, daughter of Hugh le Despencer, he had:

Anne, married to John, Lord Grey of Wilton.

HENRY DE FERRERS <sup>11</sup> of Groby, who, in 1338, obtained a charter for a market to be holden every Monday at his manor of STEBBING; and a fair on the eve and day of St. Peter and St. Paul, and two following days. He died in 1343, leaving by his wife ISABEL DE VERDON, as a successor, his son,

WILLIAM DE FERRERS <sup>12</sup> of Groby, who, by MARGARET, daughter and co-heiress of Robert de Ufford, Earl of Suffolk, had

HENRY, his successor.+

He died in 1371. MARGARET, his second wife, daughter of Henry de Percy, survived him and held the third part of the manor of STEBBING in dower till her decease.

He was succeeded by his son,

HENRY DE FERRERS <sup>13</sup>, who married JOAN, daughter of Sir Thomas Poynings, by whom he had:

WILLIAM, his successor.+

He died in 1388, and was succeeded by his son,

WILLIAM DE FERRERS <sup>14</sup>, who had sons:

HENRY.+

Thomas, who enjoyed all the lands which were entailed on the male heirs. From him are descended the lord Ferrers of Chartley and Tamworth.

Ann married to Sir Edward Hungerford.

Richard.

Their mother, Elizabeth, prostrating herself before King Edward the fourth, to petition his clemency in behalf of herself and children, by her appearance and demeanor so powerfully excited his sympathy and affection, that he made her his queen.

Her son,

THOMAS GREY <sup>18</sup>, was advanced to the dignity of Earl of Huntingdon and marquis of Dorset; but, in the reign of Richard the third, being attainted of high treason, he fled into Flanders, and attaching himself to Henry, Earl of Richmond, was by him, when he became King of England, restored to his estates and honors. He married CICELY, daughter and heiress of William lord Bonvil, by whom he had seven sons and eight daughters.

He was succeeded by his eldest son,

THOMAS GREY <sup>19</sup>, marquis of Dorset. By MARGARET, daughter of Sir Robert Wotton of Bocton in Kent, he had:

HENRY, his successor.+

John, of Pirgo, in Essex.

Thomas.

Leonard.

Elizabeth, married to Thomas lord Audley, of Walden.

Anne, married to Henry Willoughby, Esq., of Wollaton, in Norfolk.

The marquis died in 1530, possessed of the manors of STEBBING and Woodham Ferrers. He was succeeded by his son, HENRY GREY <sup>20</sup>, marquis of Dorset, who was created constable of England during the coronation of Edward the sixth, and, in right of his lady FRANCES, eldest daughter of Charles Brandon, duke of Suffolk, by the princess Mary, third daughter of king Henry the seventh, queen dowager of Louis the 12th, king of France, was created duke of Suffolk in 1551. (LADY JANE GREY, who married GUILFORD DUDLEY, fourth son of John, duke of Northumberland, and was proclaimed queen of England on the death of Edward the sixth, by which she and the duke lost their lives, was his daughter.) He was beheaded in 1544, for joining Sir Thomas Wyatt, previous to which he had conveyed the manor of STEBBING to SIR ROBERT SOUTHWELL, who, in 1545, sold it to KING HENRY THE EIGHTH, who exchanged it with SIR GILES CAPELL, of Rayne Hall, for lands in Hertfordshire, Middlesex, Cambridgeshire, and the moiety of Reves Hall, in the parish of East Mersey, in Essex. Thus it remained in the FERRERS family and its descendants for twenty generations, up to about 1544, covering a period of over four hundred and sixty years.

SIR GILES CAPELL "died 29th May 1555 possessed of the Maner of STEBBING and one park, with the appurtenances Stebbing, and 20 Mes-suages, 16 tosts, 40 gardens, 2 water-mills, 600 acres of arable, 200 acres of meadow, 500 acres of pasture, 160 acres of wood, and £10. of rent, with the appurtenances of Stebbing, holden of the Queen in capite, by the fortieth part of one knights fee. This shows how considerable an estate this was." This estate still continues in the Capell family and is now [1901] held by the Right Honourable George Devereaux de Vere Capell, Earl of Essex.

"WILLIAM, son of JOHN STEBBING, in the beginning of the reign of King Henry VII. was proprietor of the above (Kettleburgh Hall) as well as divers other lands in this parish. He had two sons, William and Thomas, and by his will, dated 1500, charged a close in Kettleburgh with the finding of a lamp in that parish, and Hoo chancels, called hence Lamp Close. WILLIAM STEBBING, his eldest son, increased the paternal estate, by the purchase of New Kettleburgh Hall of George de Tye of Easton, in the 18th, of King Henry VIII. He died about 1542, leaving two daughters, his co-heirs, namely Frances, who married Arthur Penning, and Elizabeth, who in 1560 sold her moiety of the estate, to the said Arthur Penning, her brother-in-law."

STEBBINS EMIGRANTS.

Although we have found no direct evidence as to the birthplace of ROWLAND STEBBINS, the ancestor of over ninety-five per cent of the Stebbins descendants in America, there is a strong probability that he was born in or near the parish of Stebbing, Essex County. While in England he is said to have been a friend of William Pyncheon, who was born at Springfield, Essex County (ten miles from Stebbing), in 1590, being only four years older than ROWLAND. William Pyncheon came to New England in 1629, and was the principal founder of Roxbury, Massachusetts, where ROWLAND settled upon his arrival in New England in 1634 or 1635. In 1636 William Pyncheon purchased Agawam [afterwards named Springfield] from the Indians. From 1636 to 1646 the settlers of Agawam were mostly young unmarried men, yet we find ROWLAND STEBBINS there in 1639 with his family. In his will, dated March 1, 1669-70, ROWLAND appoints as one of the overseers of his will, "my much honored friend Capt. John Pyncheon," who was a son of William Pyncheon, the founder of Springfield.

Whether the other Stebbins emigrants, who are treated under their respective heads after the descendants of Rowland, were related to Rowland is still a matter of conjecture. ROWLAND STEBBINS was born in 1594, and we assume that he came from Essex County, England.

DEACON EDWARD STEBBINS, of Cambridge, is supposed to have come from Braintree, Essex County, although from the fact of his having taken the oath of a freeman at Cambridge, Massachusetts, at the same time Rev. Thomas Hooker did, and joining his Connecticut Colony in 1636, we might infer that he was one of Rev. Hooker's parishioners at Chelmsford, Essex County [about two miles from Springfield], England. As he took the freeman's oath in 1634, he was born probably before 1611.

JOHN STEBBINS, of Roxbury, was born about 1611, and was made freeman of Roxbury, Massachusetts, in 1647.

MARTIN STEBBINS, of Roxbury, was born about 1589, and was in Roxbury, Massachusetts, in 1636.

JOHN STEBBINS, of Watertown, was born in 1601-5, and owned land in Watertown, Massachusetts, in 1634.

In the above extracts it will be noticed that Rowland Stebbins and his family took shipping "the last day of April 1634" but did not take the oath and clear the Custom House until the 12th of Nov. the same year.

They probably landed at Boston, Mass., in 1634 or early in 1635, and, according to the Genealogy published by Luke Stebbins in 1771, settled at Roxbury, the sixth town incorporated in Massachusetts.

ROWLAND STEBBINS is said to have been an intimate friend of William Pynchon, who was one of the founders of Roxbury, and who in 1636, with Mathew Mitchell, Henry Smith, Jehu Burr, William Blake, Edmund Wood, Thos. Ufford and John Cable, founded the town of Agawam, "afterwards named Springfield, in remembrance of the said Mr. Pynchon, who had his mansion house at a town of that name, near Chelmsford in Essex before he removed to New England." [Hubbard's Hist. New Eng. (1682), p. 308].

Soon after the deed to Agawam was signed by the Agawam Indians the Pequot Indians began to make trouble, which resulted in the declaration of "a war of extermination against the Pequots"; this, with the unsettled state of the country, was probably the reason ROWLAND STEBBINS did not remove to Springfield until 1639 [Burt's First Century of Springfield, pp. 40 & 41.] He first received land at the second division as follows: On Dec. 24, 1640, "It is ordered, that these persons underwritten shall have theyr lotts for ye 2nd division of plantinge grounde granted them according to ye number of acres and order of place as is underneath written, wch is to be measured out by ye first of Aprill next; P'vided that those yt have broken up ground there shall have allowance for it as 2 indifferent men shall judge equall. The house of Rev. George Moxon, their Minister, stood near the present Vernon St., and that of ROWLAND STEBBINS just north of Union St., a little less than a half-mile apart. [See map of the home lots, etc., of Springfield.] In a rate for "ye raysinge" of £30 for "ye purchas of ye land of ye Plantation of ye Indians" in 1646, which was rated "wholly on lands," appears the following:

These lots were given "on condition they continue 5 yeares in Towne or else to forfeit it."

The selectmen and the deacons, or a committee appointed by the selectmen, determined the order in which the seats in the meeting-houses in New England, in the early settlement, should be occupied. Ability and general regard, as well as wealth, had much to do with the order of selection. The women, as a rule, do not appear to have been assigned to particular seats, but occupied, in another part of the house, such as suited their own preferences. The lists still preserved, which give the order of seating the men & boys in Springfield, do not indicate any great regard for those having the largest possessions. At Northampton, "age & estate" determined the order, and to some extent that might have prevailed here. The first list, still of record, bears date of Dec. 23, 1659, and reads:

The "admitted inhabitant" was a freeholder who was able to pay a single

"country rate," a tax of ten shillings. He must be vouched for as orthodox in religion and a member of the church in good standing, twenty-four years of age, at the head of a family, and a householder settled within the jurisdiction of the town where he sought to be admitted.

To become a freeman, or "admitted inhabitant," he must present his desires to the General Court, asking for admittance to the freedom of the commonwealth, where his request was propounded to the court for acceptance to the freedom of the body politic. Those seeking admission from Springfield were propounded and vouched for as being of the required age, virtuous in their lives, and members of the church, by John Pynchon, who was frequently a member of the General Court.

We have been unable to find the exact date of ROWLAND STEBBINS' removal to Northampton, Massachusetts, but it will be seen by the fact that his name appeared in the list of townsmen of Springfield in February, 1664, that it was after that date. He made his will the "First day of the first month, 1669-70," at Northampton, where he was probably making his home with his son John.

ROWLAND STEBBINS died in Northampton Dec. 14, 1671, but no stone was erected to designate the exact spot of interment.

Dr. Daniel Stebbins, about the year 1806, had the early burial ground at Northampton, Massachusetts, examined to discover the precise spot where the remains of ROWLAND STEBBINS were buried, but, failing in this attempt, in 1840 he caused a granite cenotaph to be erected to his memory, in the center of his family square in the new burying ground, on the east side of which is the following inscription:

ROWLAND STEBBINS

The supposed ancestor of all the name in America, came from the west of England to Springfield with his sons
John & Thomas, about 1668
removed to Northampton & there died 1671.

DANIEL STEBBINS

of the 6 generation from

Thomas, was born Apr 2, 1766.

This inscription after sixty-two years' exposure to the weather has become almost illegible, so the year of his removal to Northampton is not positive.

The exact spot of his interment was accidentally discovered in 1850, some fifty rods north of the present cenotaph, the remains having been in it at that date, one hundred and seventy-nine years. A small marble slab has been placed at the head of the grave, with no inscription except the name ROWLAND STEBBINS.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF ROWLAND STEBBINS.

“John Stebbins of Northampton presented unto this Court the last Will and Testament of his dec'd father, ROWLAND STEBBINS, together with an inventory of his Estate, a copy whereof here follows, the originals being on file.

13. VIII. Hannah, born October 1, 1660; died aged 17 years.
14. IX. Rowland, born October 2, 1660; died April 24, 1661.

NOTE: The intermarriages in the Stebbins, Burt and Ball families have been of such a complex nature as to puzzle most writers, in fact so complex that scarcely any two have given the data alike, and none have given it correctly. We have given the subject special study, and with the assistance of Rev. Horace Edwin Hayden, M. A. (whose line of descent we give below), are enabled to make the following explanations:

ABIGAIL BURT, daughter of Henry Burt and Eulelia ———, born about 1623 in England; died November 23, 1707, at Springfield, Massachusetts; married 1644, at Springfield, Massachusetts, to FRANCIS BALL, who was drowned October 3, 1648, in the Connecticut river. She was married second, April 2, 1649, at Springfield, to BENJAMIN MUNN [of Hartford, Connecticut, in 1637, and removed to Springfield in 1649], who died in November, 1675, at Springfield. She married third December 14, 1676, LIEUT. THOMAS STEBBINS, son of Rowland Stebbins. Her children were:

- I. Jonathan Ball, born October 6, 1645; married Sarah Miller.
- II. Samuel Ball, born March 16, 1647; married Mary Graves. +
- III. Abigail Munn, born June 28, 1650; married Thomas Stebbins [No. 7] son of Lieut. Thomas Stebbins. +
- IV. John Munn, born February 8, 1652; married Abigail Parsons, daughter of Deacon Benjamin Parsons.
- V. Benjamin Munn, born 1654-5; settled at Brimfield.
- VI. James Munn, born 1655-6; married Mary (Moody) Patton.

- VII. Nathaniel Munn, born 1661; married Sarah Chapin, daughter of Japhet Chapin. She had no children by her third marriage.

SAMUEL BALL, son of Abigail Burt and Francis Ball, was born March 16, 1647, at Springfield, Massachusetts; died September 13, 1689, at Springfield, Massachusetts; married January 15, 1671, probably at Hatfield, Massachusetts, to MARY GRAVES, born about 1654, at Wethersfield, Connecticut, died May 21, 1727, at Springfield, Massachusetts, daughter of John Graves, of Hadley, Massachusetts, and Mary Smith. MARY GRAVES BALL was married second, March 11, 1690, [Graves Genealogy says September 10, 1690] at Springfield, Massachusetts, to [No. 12] BENJAMIN STEBBINS, born April 11, 1658, at Springfield, Massachusetts, died October 12, 1698, at Springfield, Massachusetts, son of [No. 2] Lieut. Thomas Stebbins and Hannah Wright. MARY GRAVES BALL STEBBINS was married third, December 29, 1704, to James Warriner.

CHILDREN of Samuel Ball:

- I. Mary Ball, born June 12, 1673; married Ensign John Hitchcock. Their son Samuel Hitchcock married Ruth Stebbins. [No. 300.]
- II. Francis Ball, born April 4, 1675; married Martha Blackman. [See Benjamin Stebbins No. 62.]
- III. Elizabeth Ball, born January 14, 1677; married Nathaniel Sikes.
- IV. Mercy Ball, born December 15, 1679; died September 14, 1683.
- V. Abigail Ball, born July 18, 1682; married Moses Parsons.+

SAMUEL BALL, when a young man of eighteen, was sentenced to the whipping post by the same court that fined another for "smoking on the Sabbath day." His great and unpardonable offence, for which he should have been hung according to the idea of justice held by our ungodly-godly forefathers, was abusing his stepfather, Benjamin Munn, by saying to him, "A father indeed, you are no better than an old Indian." This occurred at the same time that a young girl was hung in London for stealing a yard of silk ribbon. There were then one hundred and sixty offences against English law, which were punishable by "death without benefit of clergy." Samuel Ball had the option of paying fifty shillings in lieu of the lashes he was to receive, so like a man he went to the office and paid his money. This is an object lesson to posterity, showing how men as narrow as our ancestors, could still be honest men, and, as far as they knew, godly men. Genealogy proves the truth of John Wesley's statement to his young preachers, that "the Lord can live with a great many people that we can't live with."

REV. HORACE EDWIN HAYDEN is corresponding secretary of the Wyoming Historical and Geological Society at Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania. He is also a member of the Society of the Cincinnati, Sons of the Revolution, Society of Colonial Wars, Naval Order, Military Order of Foreign Wars, Society of the War of 1812, and of three Confederate State Societies on his record as a soldier.

THOMAS STEBBINS came to America with his father in 1634 and lived for a time in Roxbury, Massachusetts. In 1639 he removed to Springfield, Massachusetts.

On December 24, 1640, in "A list of ye Alotments of planting lotts as they were cast wth ye order how men doe face, beginninge at ye ends of ye 80 rod lotts yt face to ye greate River Mr. Moxon is to have ye first by consent of ye Plantation":

"THOS. STEBBINS	7 $\frac{3}{4}$
2 lott        "        "	7 $\frac{1}{2}$ "

This allotment was soon "disanulled agayne." In the "Lots cast for meddow grownd on Agawam side where is 2 pts of ye quantity to be divided," THOMAS STEBBINS received two lots, containing one and one-half acres, and one acre, respectively. In the division of the "Lotts on ye other side of ye greate river for meddow," he was given two lots.

In 1642, THOMAS STEBBINS purchased the estate which the town had bought from Goodman Gregory, and which was valued as follows:

"3 acres broken up .....	3
11 rod fencing at 2s 6d.....	1	7	6
29 rod fencing at 14d.....	1	14	0
ye house .....	3	00	0

A part of this lot is now Court [House?] Square.

In the rating of satisfaction granted to Mr. Pyncheon for the supplementary purchase of the land on the banks of the Agawam, from the Indians, which was recorded May 6, 1644, appears the name of "THO: STEBBINES 0£ 08s 09d."

On January 10, 1644-5, when the location of the first meeting-house was considered, it was voted to take forty rods of land from the lot of THOMAS STEBBINS; but later six rods square was deemed sufficient, and for the remainder of the forty rods, he was to allow a rod in breadth for a passage way to the training field. According to a report made to the town, February 26, 1644-5, William Pyncheon and Henry Smith, by order of the town, bargained with Francis Ball and THOMAS STEBBINS for two and one-half acres of land west of the meeting-house, on the banks of the Connecticut river, to be used for a burying ground and a training-field. The town took an acre of the Ball lot and an acre and a half of the STEBBINS lot, for which it gave in payment double the number of acres elsewhere.

"May the first 1645. It is agreed by ye Plantation yt THOMAS STEBBINS who is the P'sent owner of the lott w'ch was Henry Gregorys shall accordinge to ye order pr contra, allowe for ye meetinge house 6 rods square, & what is remayninge of ye 40 rod in yt order mentioned on ye other side he is to allowe a rod in breadth for a way to ye trayninge place lately purchased of him & ffrancis Ball, & what ground is overpluss he hath liberty to appropriate it to his owne p'per use." On the same day it was "alsoe voted yt mr Hollioike, Tho: mirack, ffrancis Ball THO: STEBBINS shall speedily take a view of ye long meddow & what other grounds they shall thinke meete and light to ye Plantation for future divisions."

At a town meeting in 1645, it was voted that THOMAS STEBBINS and Benjamin Munn should have use of the "trayning place for pasture for the term of ten years, for certayne, and for the term of their own personal living, if they live longer, upon condition that they keepe it cleare of offensive matter, as wood and brush, or the like and they are now to sow it with inglish grass seed."

p. 187.

It is recorded that, on November 3, 1646, "THOMAS STEBBINS and william warrener are chosen surveyors for this next yeare ensuinge, and till another be chosen in yr roome." After this date his name appears frequently on the town records, as an office holder, and as a member of important committees.

In the list of those taxed for the £30 due Mr. Pyncheon "for ye purchas of ye land of ye Plantation of ye Indians" in 1646, which was rated "wholly on lands," THOMAS STEBBINS was assessed on thirty-four acres, the amount of his assessment being nine shillings five pence.

November 7, 1643, it was agreed that "those who will joyne to make a cartway over ye meddow against Robert Ashley's shall have liberty to barr up ye Cartway, and to take 4 pence per load of any others that shall cart over said way, who have not Joyned in making of it." THOMAS STEBBINS was among "those who have given in their names to make ye cartway."

"ffebr 21th 1649. "There is granted to THOMAS STEBBINS 5 acres of meddow ground over Agawam river in ye 2d meddow on ye west side under the hill; p'vided he resigne into the Towns hands a meddow lott of 1 acre & halfe wch was formerly granted him, ordered that every person that hath Land in the side feilds, ground over agawam river lyinge at ye reare of a meddow lot of Rowland Stebbins over a little brooke there, w'th an acre & halfe of meddow ground that his brother Thomas [John] Stebbins hath resigned into ye Towns hands, P'vided he resigne his former 5 acres into the Towns hands." The above was endorsed "Not accepted."

On December 25, 1651, he and his brother John were granted "each of ym 3 acres, But if ye meddow hold out 7 acres & but 7 (Besides Rowlands & ffraunces [Rowland Stebbins and Francis Pepper] then to devide it between ym. In case it p've more than 7 then all above 6 acres to be at ye Towns dispose."

THOMAS STEBBINS' accounts with Mr. Pynchon indicate that he must have been a tailor. He did very little outdoor work for Pynchon, except occasionally in harvesting. His account with John Pynchon was opened in August, 1652, and by the following February it had amounted to £14. 10s. The credits given him from August to November of the following year amounted to £10. 17s. 6d. The first items of credit are:

- "By making 12 waste-coates, 8s;
- "By 10 doz. caps at 6s pr doz £3;
- "By 11 doz & 9 Wastecoates at 8s per Doz £4. 14s;
- "By making 3 doz & 1 coates £3. 2s;
- "By one doz stockens 5s;
- "2 days Taylering 2s;
- "mending my cloathes, 6d;
- "By 4 dayes harvesting work, 8s."

The following charge is also entered against him:

"Delivered to THOMAS STEBBINS 54 yds of white shag cotton for waste-coates, & stockens, & p'ee of Red tape, and 30 yds of cloth in Remnants."

Not long afterwards he delivered to Mr. Pynchon, seventeen dozen caps and over one hundred "wastecoates." The large purchases of thread indicate that the Stebbins family must have been exceedingly busy with the needle.

On February 10, 1652, "Ye Select men" agreed to include in the tax levy the amount due THOMAS STEBBINS "for cleaning ye meeting howse formerly," which amount was ten shillings.

THOMAS STEBBINS was chosen townsman, or selectman, November 2, 1652; and was again chosen for this office in 1653 and 1655.

He was one of the witnesses to the Indian deed, dated September 24, 1653, conveying the land of Nonotuck (now Northampton, Mass.) to John Pynchon of Springfield.

The planters began at once to arrange for the settlement and at a meeting on October 3, 1653, twenty persons signed the following agreement:

"It is agreed by the plant'rs of Nonotuck which Petition to the Court in the [Spring] or any that shall Joine with them that they shall bee resident there [and] dwell themselves and ther families by the next Spring come [ ] next ensueing the date hereof, or els every such p'rson as shall be deficient in that Kinde shall loose his mony paid for the purchase with the Charges that they have binn att unlesse hee shall give such [reason] to the Company designed for that worke that the said Company [Please to] give them more time." It is generally believed that THOMAS STEBBINS was the third signer to this agreement. The surname after Thomas has long been illegible. This view is strengthened by the following action of the town of Springfield, as an inducement for THOMAS to remain with them.

At a town meeting held in Springfield, January 30, 1655, he received a grant of "one acre of ye wet meddow next above Symon Sackett, to run ye whole length yt others do: & this upon condition he continue five yeares in Towne and further yt he shal not desire any more share in ye meddow if it come to be given out."

TURNER'S FALLS FIGHT.

Negotiations with the Indians for peace, entered upon by the Connecticut Council, were in progress, and in April, 1676, Indian envoys who were on their way to Hartford with an answer to the overtures of the English, arrived at Hadley. A dispatch was sent to Hartford advising the Council of the coming of the messengers. These savage emissaries returned with their reply about the first of May. Its purport was that a conference with the sachems should be held at Hadley, on the eighth of the month, and in preparation for that event, the Council ordered one hundred soldiers to march forthwith to that place.

Trumbull's

Mass., I,
pp. 326-

Having accomplished their object—to gain the time for fishing and planting—the Indians took no further notice of the last communication from the Connecticut Council. In vain the authorities waited for the delegation to arrive at Hadley. The proposed eight days lengthened into ten and twelve, but no Indians appeared.

The bad faith of the Indians in this matter, intensified the feeling against them, and the aggressive war spirit gained added strength in all the Hampshire settlements. This feeling was greatly augmented by a raid of the Indians, who went down on the night of May 13th, to Hatfield upper meadows and carried away from seventy to eighty head of cattle that had been turned out to pasture.

It was decided to make an attack on the Indian camp at the falls above Deerfield, since known as Turner's Falls. After some necessary delay in organizing the expedition, they were all assembled at Hatfield on May 18th, and after a short prayer by Chaplin Hope Atherton, they started on their hazardous march of twenty miles, under command of Captain William Turner. All night the dreary march continued. The Indians, prosperous in their fishing operations, and successful in their cattle thieving raid, spent the day preceding the attack, in feasting upon the beef and milk obtained from the recently stolen Hatfield stock. Completely surfeited by their debauch, they slept soundly, posting no sentinels and keeping no watch.

At break of day the assaulting party reached its position in the rear of and overlooking the hostile camp. Arranging his forces so that every shot would tell, Captain Turner hurled them upon the sleeping foe. So thorough was the surprise that the English thrust their guns into the wigwams before the enemy were aware of their presence. Astounded by the attack, the Indians rushed out in the greatest consternation, and made vain endeavors to escape.

The carnage was brief, but terrible. The camp was burned and everything in it destroyed. The work of destruction was complete, and up to this time the victory had been overwhelming; but the English lingered too long in the deserted camp.

The adjacent Indian camps sent reenforcements to the red men, and henceforth, it was, for the victors, but a race for life. When Captain Turner found that the savages were surrounding his little command with great numbers, he gave the order to retreat. After running the gauntlet of the swamp, the main body reached Green River. Here, while crossing the river near "Nash's Mills," Captain Turner was shot and fell dead from his horse. The command then devolved upon Captain Holyoke, who succeeded in making good his retreat, through Green River meadows, across Petty's Plain, Deerfield River and meadows, till he reached Hatfield. Throughout the remainder of the retrograde march, the English forces were hard pressed by a numerous and active foe, who followed them to the "Bars" on the road leading to Deerfield South Meadow.

This was by far the most severe fight that had occurred in the valley during King Philip's war. The bravery and hardihood manifested in undertaking an expedition of this kind in the face of such overwhelming numbers, were only equalled by the unflinching courage displayed during the disastrous retreat, when for more than ten miles, every inch of the ground was sharply contested with a foe outnumbering them more than three to one.

The name of "THOMAS STEBINS, Springfield" appears in "A List of ye Soldiers yt were in ye Fall Fight under Capt. Wm. Turner, approved off by ye Committee of ye Gen. Court," and in "A list of Soldiers and Desc'nd'ts of such as are Deceased that were in the fight called the falls fight above Deerfield who are intituled to the township granted by the Generall Court," we find "Luke Noble, Westfield, Des't of THOMAS STEBBINS."

THOMAS STEBBINS and his wife, Jonathan Stebbins, and others were "presented by ye Grandjury to ye Courte at Northampton March 26, 1676, some for wearing of silk & yt in a flouting manner & attire for Long haire & other extravagancies, Contrary to honest & Labor Order & Demeanor not Becoming a Wilderness State at Least ye Profession of Christianity & Religion."

In January, 1678, "Six pound was sett of with LEIFFTENANT STIBINGS for sweeping the meeting house the year 79 and 80"; and on February 4, 1678, it was "voted & agreed to allow LIEUT STEBBIN 20 shillings for his giveing entertainment to mr. Glover [the minister] for that tyme w'rin he so entertained him."

The General Court, in obedience to the Royal proclamation of April 27, 1678, ordering all subjects to take the oath of allegiance, directed the various magistrates to administer it forthwith. Accordingly John Pyncheon performed that duty to a number of the inhabitants of Springfield on December 3, 1678, and January 1, 1679. Among those who took the oath of allegiance, we find the name of LIEUTENANT THOMAS STEBBINS.

August 4, 1679, the town ordered that, "Whereas the Towne did formerly in their troublesome times breake their Towne Stock of powder, & part there with to various persons, as by account fro the Select men & officers appointed

At the same meeting, LIEUTENANT THOMAS STEBBINS was appointed one of a committee "fully impow'ed to mannage all the affaires of the townshipp alitle below Springfield at Freshwater Brooke." This committee was delegated "w'th ful power to admit inhabitants, to Grant free & undisputed Lands there, to such as are capaciated to go thither & dwel & improve the same & this said Committee are fully impowered to order and act for the settling it a Towne of it selfe." This committee held its first meeting December 31, 1679, at which a plan for granting out the lands was agreed upon. Although called a township, it seems to have been on probation until May 16, 1683, when the General Court again took up the matter. Their action on the matter was recorded as follows:

[For many years there was a controversy between Massachusetts and Connecticut in regard to their boundary line. When it was finally settled, in 1751, Enfield became a part of Connecticut.]

At a town meeting "february 9th 1679," it was voted that "we doe request LIFTENANT STEBINS to apoynt on of the guard to see to the youth there about that there be no disorderly practis by the youth."

"Springfeild the 3 of January 80. LIFTENANT STEBING hath payd the year 80, 3 Jan ffor the old meeting house which was set off in what should have bene payd him ffor his sweeping the new house."

The town, on December 31, 1681, ordered that three pounds should be paid to "LEIUT STEBBEIN for sweeping ye meeting house &c".

LIEUTENANT THOMAS STEBBINS left no will, his estate being settled as follows:

The first record we find of JOHN STEBBINS in Springfield, Massachusetts, is in 1646, when he was taxed 7 shillings 8 pence on twenty-seven and one-half acres of land, for the thirty pounds due Mr. Pyncheon "for ye purchase of ye land of ye Plantation of ye Indians." Green's Springfield, Mass. p. 77.

On February 21, 1649, there was "granted to JNO STEBBIN 2 acres of land at ye end of his ffather Stebbins 5 acre lot, in ye 2d division, w'ch is due to him in lue of soe much wanting in ye neck." Burt's First Cent. of Springfield, I p. 198.

At a town meeting November 5, 1650, he was chosen one of the "Surveyors of the high ways of the Towne for the yeare ensuinge." p. 217.

December 25, 1651. "There is granted to Tho: Stebbins & JNO: STEBBINS, each of ym 3 acres, But if ye meddow hold out 7 acres & but 7 (Besides Rowlands & ffraunces) [Rowland Stebbins and Francis Pepper] then to divide it between ym. In case it p've more than 7 then all above 6 acres to be at ye Towns dispose:" p. 220.

JOHN STEBBINS is mentioned as being of Roxbury, Massachusetts, in 1651; and the same year he bought a house in Springfield. Sheldon's Hist. of Deerfield, Mass. II p. 216.

At a town meeting in Springfield, February 10, 1652, there was "granted unto JOHN STEBIN on [one] quarter of the meeting howse chamber at the north side next to the Brook till the first day in november next ensuing the date here of and for this roome hee is to pay—7s 6d ether in merchandable wheat or merchandable wampum this pay to be brought in the first of october next." Later we find the entry: "Received of JOHN STEBBINS for Rentt of the chamber £00 07s 06d." On December 28, 1653, he received a grant of the "east end of the meetinge house chamber from the pillars to the end of the house and to injoy itt till the first tuesday in november next" p. 332.

and in consideration whereoff hee is to pay 6s in merchantable wheate or wampom by the first of november next ensuing."

- p. 239. It is recorded that, on January 30, 1655, "There is granted to JOHN STEBBINS (who desires to build beyound ye long meddow) a lott off five acres upon ye hill over ye bridge on ye most convenient place there, w'ch is to be 20 rod broad, & 40 rod long; and this is granted on condition he continue 5 yr in Towne elsè to resigne it to ye Towne". "There is also granted to JOHN STEBBINS five acres of land a little beyound ye long meddow, on ye lower side of the little miry brooke by some called Potbrooke, betwixt ye great river & swamp there & to come up to ye cartway, so yt ye way be not straightened by him & fro: thence downward ye five acres is to be made up: and this grant is upon condition he continue 5 y [years] in Springfield."

Thomas Cooper, Robert Ashley, and Benjamin Cooley were elected townsmen in 1655, and, refusing to serve, they were fined twenty shillings a piece, and George Colton, Thomas Stebbins, and JOHN STEBBINS were chosen to fill their places.

JOHN STEBBINS settled in Northampton, Mass., in 1656, and lived at the lower end of "Pudding Lane," now Hawley street. He owned a saw-mill which was situated within the bounds of Easthampton.

In March, 1657-8, the town voted that "Mr. Williams JOHN STEBBENS Joseph Root Joseph Jeanes shall cast lotts for ther proportion of Grasse Ground the first lot to ly next to Robert Haywart and soe successively downward in the Middle Meddowe".

- p. 66. A lively controversy was going on in the town, both in religious and secular matters. At the next session of the local court, which was held on March 29, 1659, at Springfield, the Northampton parties were at hand with their special grievances. At this court "Edward Elmer Samuell Wright senior Alexander Edwards & JOHN STEBBIN" appeared as plaintiffs "agt the Town of North Hampton Def'd't in an action of ye case concerninge their turninge out some of the freemen from beinge Selectmen to wch office they were chosen". When they brought their action against the town they were checkmated by the rejection of the Northampton commissioners on purely technical grounds, so that no court could be held. Under these circumstances, an appeal to the "Superior Powers" was the only way out of the difficulty; but it does not appear that the plaintiffs made any attempt to carry their case to a higher court.

- p. 71. The office of measurer of land seems to have been quite unpopular and difficult to fill. During the year 1659 the choice of measurers is three times recorded, each time giving new names. David Burt and JOHN STEBBINS consented to fill the office at the third choosing, which was in June, 1659. JOHN STEBBINS again filled this office in 1671.

- p. 90. In June, 1660, JOHN STEBBINS and Samuel Allen were chosen to "Joyne with the Selectmen to lay out high waies"; and this vote was reaffirmed in December. MR. STEBBINS was chosen jurymen March 26, 1661.

- p. 107. He signed the church covenant on June 18, 1661, and soon became identified with church affairs. On July 12, 1661, the town voted to "build a new meeting howse, of 42 foote square, and that they will lay out about 150£";

p. 120.

and JOHN STEBBINS was one of the committee "chosen and empowered to cary on and finish this worke".

On the 28th of January, 1664, "JOHN STEBBEN and Enos Kingslo were chosen Bayleus [bailiffs] for the Towne to cleare the meadows of all Cattle & Swine that are trespassers and Impound them that we may preserf our corne & grass".

In 1675 he was chosen to serve the town as selectman, and was again chosen for this duty in 1678.

p. 278.

The manner of his death was considered quite unusual, and the common belief was that he had been killed by witches. He was part owner of a saw-mill on Broad Brook or Manhan River, and the facts would seem to indicate that he came to his death by an accident at the mill. There is a tradition that "while sawing at his mill, the logs would roll over him, set in motion by witches, by which he was severely bruised". An inquest was held by a jury of twelve men, who returned a verdict, which, while it did not directly charge witchcraft, showed that they more than half believed it had something to do with his death. Two examinations were made of the remains, and two reports were handed in to the court. In the first one they declared that there was a "warmth and heate in his Body yt dead persons are not usual to have"; and that there were "fower places upon his brest yt seemed to have been Pintched, though the doctor informed ym that in his life time there was a swelling between the Pintches"; his neck was as flexible as that of a living person; upon his body were found "several hundred of spots," that looked as if "they had been shott with small shott," and when they were seraped there were holes under them. On the second examination, which must have been made soon after the first one, they found, as would very naturally follow, "the body somewhat more cold yn before, his joynts more limber," and several bruises on different parts of his person, which they had not previously discovered. The jury reported to the County Court in April, and Samuel Bartlett, brother-in-law to MR. STEBBINS, and who seems to have been witch-finder in general for the town, brought in all the testimony he could obtain. It was also stated that a large number of women were summoned by Joseph Hawley, to examine and touch him, intending in this way to discover the witch. Blood flowed when a certain woman touched him, but only one could see it, so nothing was done. This evidence, which cannot now be found, was sent to the Court of Assistants at Boston, but no further action was taken. Undoubtedly the testimony pointed to some suspected person, but no one was named on the records.

p. 222.

At court holden March 28 1682

Samuel Bartlett of Northampton appearing in Court and desiring to be freed from his administratorship to ye Estate of his Brother JOHN STEBBINS SENR dec'd and the Relict (wife) to JOHN STEBBINS aforesaid— and married to Jaddadie Strong of Northampton and he in his wifes right being a sustaining ye administratorship, she held to her aforesaid Husbands estate, and being willing to take the whole care of it into his own hands, both as to debts, Legacies and all things and accompts, relating to the childrens rights &c and therefore Samuel Bartlett is released as aforesaid.

p. 248.

Jadadiah Strong above named made application to the Court of March 31 1685 that Certain Lands in Deerfield belonging to the Estate of JOHN STEBBINS SENR dec'd should be divided, which was ordered to be done by the Dividers aforesaid & that it be divided in proportion as the Estate first divided.

p. 264.

Jadadiah Strong petitions Court for allowance of administrator by the court of March 1690 referred or continued that the Legatees & heirs have time to answer.

ABIGAIL (BARTLETT) STEBBINS STRONG fell from her horse while passing South Hadley Falls, and died soon after. She had started on October 10, 1710, from Northampton to visit her children by her first husband, who were then living in Coventry, Connecticut.

On page 32 in Book 4 of Record in an additional inventory of the Estate of JOHN STEBBINS Sen'r of Northampton taken Apr. 20th, 1720. "A parcel of land in Deerfield on the East side of the way over against Stebbins Meadow containing 4 acres appraised at 4. 0. 0. the east of the land having been appraised at that rate and as inasmuch as Mary the daughter of the deceased above named now Mary Strong alias Stebbins (as is said) not having rec'd her part or portion out of the Deerfield Land therefore I now order said 4 acres to be hers, as part of her portion. And I appoint Capt. Wells esq. Lieut. Wells and Deacon French to lay out said Land, and to deliver it to Thomas Strong or to his wife Mary."

"April 29, 1720 then we undersigned being appointed by the Hon. Col. Partridge Judge of Probate—went and delivered ye above 4 acres of land to Thomas Strong of Northampton by turf and twigg as four pounds and as part of his wifes portion who was a daughter of John Stebbins of Northampton deceased—which piece of land is Bounded by land of Judah Wright —North of John Stebbins Jun'r South abutting on the Common fence East on the County Road west.

Signed

Jonathan Wells

The first mention we find of SAMUEL STEBBINS in the town records is in 1657, when he and others were seated in the meeting house, "In yt seate in ye Gallery wch faces agt ye minister." In 1662 he occupied the same seat.

On December 8, 1664, the town granted "TO SAMUEL STEBBINS thirty acres his father engaging to satisfy charges as shall come on the Land till it be improved."

He soon became identified with town affairs. On February 9, 1673, he was chosen one of the "Viewers of ye fences of ye genr'll feilds" for Long-meadow; and held the same office in 1676.

It is recorded that on "February ye 26th 1673, SAMUELL STEBBINS hath graunted unto him Six acres of meddow at the great Meddow below Goodm: Coulton and Goodm: Cooleyes grants if soe much be there besides former graunts & on like condition as Nath: Burts graunt there wch is entered in page 179."

The town, at a meeting held February 5, 1677, fined SAMUEL STEBBINS <sup>p. 419.</sup> two shillings for being absent from the town meeting without leave from the moderator.

May 28, 1679, "It was further agreed to Lay out or order each particular <sup>p. 425.</sup> mans portion of fence upon this brooke by the way of casting of Lotts:"
* * * "To SAMLL STEBBIN, 6 [sixth portion]."

At the same meeting it was "further voted & concluded that ye Upland <sup>p. 426.</sup> fence belonging to the sd long meadow should be a new measured & laid out to each proprietor, as neer as may be, in the particular places, where they have al along made & maintained ye portions of fence there, And that Isaac Colton Samll Bliss Junr: & SAMLL STEBBIN shal be to measure this upland Fence."

He was chosen "Hayward" for Long Meadow, on February 4, 1678, and <sup>p. 140.</sup> again on February 7, 1681.

At a town meeting March 13, 1681-2, "SAMUEL STEBBIN did move for <sup>p. 260.</sup> to have the Pond yt lyes at the reer of [his] Lot or [to have a] house lot in Longmeadow."

On February 6, 1682, the town ordered to be paid to "SAMLL STEBBEIN <sup>p. 158.</sup> for 5 rod of 5 raile fence to fencing in ye meeting house yd [amount omitted in the list].

He was one of those who signed, on February 4, 1700-1, a petition to Lieu- <sup>History of</sup> tenant Governor Stoughton, for the settlement of a new Plantation, which <sup>Brimfield,</sup> afterwards was known as Brimfield. The petition was granted, but the <sup>Mass.</sup> Indian War interfered with the immediate settlement. <sup>p. 241.</sup>

On March 10, 1701-2, SAMUEL STEBBINS desired the Town of Spring- <sup>Burt's</sup> field to grant him "three or four acres of meadow on the east side of wachoge <sup>First</sup> Brook wch Lyeth partly ag't Daniel Cooleys & partly ag't Jonathan Burts <sup>Century</sup> grants or Lands wch Ly on the west side of said Brook." It is recorded on <sup>of</sup> May 3, 1703, that "SAMUEL STEBBINS his desire for the grant of three or <sup>Spring-</sup> four acres of meadow on the East side of watchoge brooke, ag't Dan'll Cool- <sup>field</sup> eys & Jonath Burt Junr yr Lands on the west side of the brooke, was now <sup>II</sup> granted to him, having moved for it at a former meeting." <sup>p. 300.</sup> <sup>p. 304</sup>

SAMUEL STEBBINS was one of the thirteen men who signed the petition <sup>p. 369.</sup> for the concession of lands from Pecowsie to Enfield, and from the "hil eastward to the Longmeadow halfe a mile further eastward into the woods." This was in 1703.

60. X. Son, born January 6, 1691; died February 15, 1691.

In his youth THOMAS STEBBINS seems to have been a practical joker. In the Record of John Pynchon, Justice of Peace, Springfield, we find the following:

"Feby. 6th, 1670, THOMAS STEBBINS, JR., being examined about publishing a marriage intended between Richard Barnard and Sarah Clarke wch was set up in ye Pyt in grate letters without order or knowledge of ye Ptys [parties] or Parents and was also underwrit in small letters wth a foolish and reproachful Rime casting reproach upon ye towne and ye maids in towne as by ye paper on file appears his offense being very grate beside sin against God abusing ye parent the partys profaning ye sabbath casting reproach on ye towne and on ye maids together with others—though at first he was a little saucy yet afterwards confessing all and being admonished and told the evil, he seemed very penitent and engaged to be more watchfull against such like disorder.

I therefore delt more gently with him by a small fine bearing testimony against such disorder and fine him 20d to ye county wch he engages to be paid unto the County Treasury."

It is recorded on February 12, 1668 that "THO STEBBING JUNR last wednesday in ye forenoon feircely Galloping, & running his Horse, in ye streete fro: Godm: Mirieks upward, & wch was seen by many p'sons & he acknowledged it before ye Select men, it being expr'sly agt ye Towne order, He was accordingly sentenced to pay 3s 4d."

February 6, 1671, the town granted him "Six acres of land for a wood lott, to lye at ye end of his father's wood lotts wch lye by or neere the further end of the high way wch ye new Cause'y over ye meddow above Robert Ashley leads to: & he is to have & enjoy the wood upon this lott any order seeming notwithstanding to restrayne the same:" and on February 12th of the same year he was granted "Six acres of land by or neere the grant of Danill Ball not to pr'judice highwayes the wood thereon reserved according to Towne Order in ffebr 7, 1670."

On February 2, 1674, it was "Ordered & voted by the Towne by reason that the high way wch hitherto hath lyen by the great riverside on the west side of the River is by floods in the river & by land floods much damnified & spoyled & made unpassable & likely to be worse yeerely, that therefore consideration thereof shall be had by a speciall Committee of Seaven Men what they shall judge convenient & necessary to be done in the case:" THOMAS STEBBINS was one of this committee which was to have "full power to determine the case & to order where the way shall lye."

He was chosen as one of the "Survaiors of fences for the homelots" in 1676; and in 1681 again performed the duties pertaining to this office.

December 31, 1678, THOMAS STEBBINS took the oath of allegiance.

THOMAS STEBBINS was the builder of the first school house in Springfield. The following record gives an interesting account of the events connected with that undertaking:

"At a town meeting, being a legal meeting, May 7th, 1679, it was voted & concluded, 1st, that there should be an house erected for that noble design & use of learning the youth in those necessary peices or parts of Learning Videl: reading & writing. & 2ly, That this house should be twenty & two foot in

The selectmen proceeded to carry into effect the vote of the town, and at a meeting June 2nd, of the same year, voted: "It having been formerly at a Town meeting propounded to ye Town that they should set up a school house for the Town, they concluded that such a school house should be erected, & appointed the Selectmen to bargain with any meet person to build such a house for such use: accordingly they have bargained with THOMAS STEBBIN JUNR. to get timber for such a building & frame it, whose length is to be 22 foot: & breadth 17 foot: & stud 8 foot half: & he the said THOMAS STEBBIN is to carry the frame to place & to nail the clap boards close on both sides & ends & to lath & shingle the roof, & to make three light spaces [windows] on one side & two lights on one end, & to set up a mantletree, & set up a rung chimney, & to daub it, & the said THOMAS is to have for his work so done fourteen pounds paid him by the Town, & in case it so prove that the said THOMAS have an hard bargaine it is hereby agreed that he shal have 10s more of the Town."

December 18th, 1679, at a town meeting "THOMAS STEBBIN JUNR: Charles Ferry Jno Harmon were chosen for to be the apprizers of the Towns stock:" At a meeting held on the 29th of this same month, THOMAS STEBBINS was voted ten pounds for his "worke about ye school house."

He was fined six pence for being absent from a Town meeting March 13, 1681-2.

He was chosen selectman in 1685, 1688, 1690, and 1692: and measurer of land in 1685, serving in the latter office eight consecutive years.

February 1, 1686, "Sam'll Ball & THO: STEBBINS desires ye grant of Ten acres of meadow or low land on the Southerly Branch of the Mill River, called 16 acres Branch, to begin at the end of that medow that was Charles Ferrys above ye new Saw Mil, & so to run up that brook to a little brooke that comes Into it, & yn to run up that little brooke forty or fifty Rods to the end of the meddow lying on that brooke." They received the grants desired, and later the land was laid out to them. At the same meeting "THOMAS STEBBINS David Morgan Joseph Ely & Nathanl Mun being desirous to improve their lots on the East side of the fence of the Plain feild where the county Rhode goes thorow their said Lots, Leading to Chickuppi, They do desire the Town would encourage them so to doe, by translating those high ways to ly from the Town fence Eastward up a long the South flanke of THOMAS STEBBINS his lot there, & then to ly at the Reer of their Lots there, being to run about Six score or seven score Rod at the sd Reer of their Lots, til it come cross the brook into the high wayes again or County Rhode againe." This request was granted providing certain conditions were complied with, and if it met the approval of the County Court.

I. p. 244.

At a town meeting February 6, 1676, JOSEPH STEBBINS was granted "about one Acre & a halfe lying upon the corner meddow brooke between his own Land, & ye Land of Benjamin Mun'".

On February 5, 1677, it was voted and concluded that something should be done towards the fortification of the new meeting house. Among the names of "such as do promise worke or pay for ye fortifying the new meeting house" is found the following: I p.
p. 136.

"JOSEPH STEBBEIN and Samll Ball 1 rod stuffe to place al wch stuffe is to be logs: ten foot & ½ in length: & between 10 & 12 inches in breadth."

The oath of allegiance was administered to him on December 31, 1678.

February 3, 1679, JOSEPH STEBBINS and others "propounded that the Town would give ym a smal Tract of Land, viz: about 5 or six acres of Land, at the falls at Sixteen acres, on the South branch of the mil River, for the setting up of a Saw mil, as also liberty of timber." This and also the "Stream for ye mill", were granted on February 1, 1680. N. E. H. &

He was chosen a "surveiorh for the County high way of this Town [Springfield] for the year ensuing", on February 3, 1679; and was reappointed to that office in 1685, and again in 1689. p. 143.

On September 4, 1680, "The vewers of fenses making presentments to the p. 431.

In 1681 he was chosen constable, and was appointed to the same office in 1694, and in 1708.

March 13, 1681-2, he was fined six pence for absenting himself from a town meeting.

At the town meeting May 11, 1691, he desired the town to "grant about four acres of Land by the side of his meadow called Duch meadow for conveniency". On January 26, 1693, he asked for another grant of "about an acre of Land adjoining to his Land or lot that Lyes above Nathan'll Muns homelot", which request was granted. At the same meeting he was chosen "Hayward for the plain".

In 1693, he was chosen selectman. He evidently proved a very acceptable incumbent of this office as he was chosen to perform the same service in 1694, 1699, 1700, 1703, 1705, 1712, 1716, 1717, 1721, and 1723. He also served the Town as treasurer in 1694, 1695, and 1696.

On February 5, 1694, it was "voted that ENS. JOSEPH STEBIN be impowered To se to it that the Select men & the constables of the Several yeeres, w'rin there are arrears of the Rates of the Revd. mr Pelati: Glover uncollected, do forthwith attend the Two acts or votes of the Town respecting said arrears in April 3: 1693 & in March 13: 1693-4 & that they finish yr collections". This is the first mention we find of him as ensign.

March 12, 1694-5 "mr Pelatiah Glover JOSEPH STEBBINS & David Morgan desire the Town would grant them halfe a mile square of Pine trees on the upper side of Three corner meadow brooke fro the Pine Plaine; also that on the South side of the upper branch of the Mil River agt James Dorchesters meadow, the quantity of halfe a mile one way, & three quarters of a mile another way".

The following is a copy of one of his commissions as ensign: "William Stoughton esq. Lieut Govenour & Commander in chief in and over his Mattys. Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England to JOSEPH STEBBINS—Greeting by virtue of the power & authority in & by his Ma'tys Royal Commission to me granted. It was voted by the town, on November 24, 1698, to give "ensine Joseph Stebbins on shilling on the pound for Colecting the Arears of the remainder of such rates committed to him to gather in he making up his account before next Towne meeting to such as counted them to him".

JOSEPH STEBBINS was Representative to the General Court in 1698, 1707, 1717, 1721,

He was one of the signers, on February 4, 1700-1, to Lient. Gov. Stoughton, for the settlement of a new Plantation, afterwards called Brimfield. The petition was granted and the settlement had been begun, when it was interrupted by the Indian War. A petition for extension of the time, which was presented to Gov. Dudley in 1709, was signed by Joseph Stebbins.

At a town meeting January 29, 1702-3, "JOSEPH STEBBINS SENR did move to the Town that they would take some effectual Course that he might be paid the four pounds & 2s thereabouts that he payed to mr Pelatiah Glover w'n sd STEBBINS was Town Treasurer, but wth his own money, that so he might hasten the takeing up of the bond the Town gave to sd mr Glover to pay him nine score pound or 180£".

December 23, 1707 "LEIUT JOSEPH STEBBINS" and others were chosen "Trustees who are to act according to the Act of the last Sessions of the Gen'l court respectively". This year he is first mentioned as Lieutenant and he was also chosen assessor during this year.

"JOSEPH STEBBINS SENR is by grant of the plantation posessed of 3 or foure acres of swamp land over agawam River against the necke if it be there to be had granted march 12th 1700 it being propounded at a former Towne meeting ffebruary 9: 70".

February 27, 1707-8, he was appointed on a "comitte to consider some way to regulate the drawing of Turpentine".

"JOSE: STEBBINS SENR & Pelatiah Blisse were chosen & appointed to Joine wth sd pr'sent Treasurer to examine the accounts of the old Treasurer who was mr Pelatiah Glover Senr.", on March 14, 1709-10,—

MR. STEBBINS performed a like duty in 1719.

"LIUTNT JOSEPH STEBBINS was Chosen Modderator" March 28, 1716, June 15, 1716, September 20, 1717, March 11, 1717-18, August 29, 1719, March 14, 1720-21, December 3, 1722, and May 3, 1723. The selection of JOSEPH STEBBINS as moderator was a notable break in this regard, a member of the Pynchon family having performed that office from the foundation of the town. He was quite a prominent man in local affairs, and seems to have been much trusted.

He was a member of the committee appointed May 7, 1718, "to prepare A Petition to ye General Court with Respect to their Conserving the Aunchent Bounds between this Town [Springfield] & ye Town of Enfield".

January 2, 1727-8, "JOSEPH STEBBINS desires that the Town would Grant him Liberty for the Erecting and Setting up a House for his Horses

It is now agreed that said Proprietors do fence the front Reers his meadow, so as to be in common for this year & this to be done sufficient in the judgment of the fence becomers under whom in particular & care we now put it in meadow. this fence to be perfected by the tenth of April next.

also it is agreed that when this meadow is fed after-mowing, that we do it by the consent of all the owners. & that then each owner do put in cows in a proportion according to his quantity of meadow
It is also agreed that every one do his part for the sufficient draining

EDWARD STEBBINS, early in the spring of 1676, was taken captive by the Indians at Longmeadow, while he was with Samuel Bliss, his brother-in-law; and was carried to the falls above Deerfield. With a youth named Gilbert, he made his escape from the Indians and gave information of their place of residence, whereupon the English made an attack on them, destroying three hundred or more of them.

On March 9, 1702-3, at a General Town Meeting for Election of Town Officers for Springfield, "EDWIN STEBBINS & Ebenezer Miller were chosen Packers". There seems to be no chance for doubt that this Edwin Stebbins was identical with EDWARD STEBBINS. On March 11, 1706-7, "Benjamin Brookes EDWARD STEBBINS Thomas Horton & David Chapin have granted to them forty acres of Land on the North side of Chickupi River from Schonungonuck path that goes out of ye River & so up the River & adjoining to the River, so ly & have ten acres a peece granted them they haveing desired it at the former meetings, especially at ye meeting ffebr. 28, 1706-7, savinge former grant & high wayes".

son of Thomas Stebbins and Hannah Wright, was born April 11, 1658, at Springfield, Massachusetts; died October 12, 1698, at Springfield, Massachusetts; married October 9, 1682, at Springfield, Massachusetts, to ABIGAIL DENTON, born probably at Jamaica, Long Island; died August 24, 1689, who was a daughter of Daniel Denton. He married second, March 11, 1690, [Graves Genealogy says September 10, 1690] at Springfield, Massachusetts, to MARY (GRAVES) BALL, widow of Samuel Ball, born about 1654, at Wethersfield, Connecticut; died May 21, 1727, at Springfield, Massachusetts, daughter of John Graves of Hadley, Massachusetts, and Mary Smith. ["Samuel Ball married Mary Graves January 15, 1671."] Resided at Springfield, Massachusetts. She married third, December 29, 1704, JAMES WAR-RINER, SR.

CHILDREN:

- 86. I. Abigail, born August 13, 1683; married Jonathan Ashley.+
- 87. II. Mercy, born October 29, 1685; married Ebenezer Parsons.+
- 88. III. Benjamin, born 1687; married Mary Ashley.+

BENJAMIN STEBBINS was made freeman on January 1, 1678.

He seems to have been somewhat of a hunter, as his name appears frequently in connection with others, as having killed wolves. February 3, 1681, "The Constable Joseph Stebbein Informs of Two wolves killed by BENJAMIN STEBBEIN & Jno. Mirrick"; on February 7, 1681, "one wolfe more was killed by BEN. STEBBEIN & Jno. Mirrick"; on February 10, 1682 "one wolfe more killed by BENJ. STEBBINS & Jno. Mirricke"; on March 28, 1682, "one wolfe more killed by BENJ. STEBBINS & Jno. Mirricke"; and in April, 1682, "one wolfe killed by BEN: STEBBEIN & Jno Hitchcocke".

He served from 1688 to 1698 in King William's War, and was in the gar-ison at Deerfield, being one of the number who pursued the Indians who had, on September 16, 1696, killed three members of the Belden family and captured the other three.

BENJAMIN STEBBINS was chosen constable at a town meeting held in Springfield, May 11, 1691; and in 1692 he was chosen collector "for ye £24,000 Rate", also performing the latter duty the following year.

On March 17, 1692-3, he was "chosen surveior for ye high wayes". He was chosen "viewer of fences for the Plain field", on March 13, 1693-4; and was chosen for the same office in 1710, 1715, and 1720.

At a town meeting, January 23, 1695, "BENJAMIN STEBBINS SENR moves that the Town would grant him a peice of medow about an acre & halfe Lying on the North east of Sixteen acres branch on a Spring that comes into the medow of Sam'l Bliss". This request was granted at a meeting held March 8, 1697.

He was chosen tithing-man March 10, 1695-6, and was called on to fill the same office on March 9, 1713-14.

In 1698 he again appears active in military life, as a trooper in the Pomeroy pursuit.

His will is dated at Springfield. The inventory, taken October 13, 1698, amounts to 393 pounds, ten shillings. The will is recorded in Book 3, pages 51-55.

Widow Anne Munden Sarah _____

son of John Stebbins and Anna Munden, was born January 28, 1647, at Springfield, Massachusetts; died December 19, 1724 (T. R.) at Deerfield, Massachusetts; married about 1683 at Boston, Massachusetts, to DORTHY ALEXANDER, born 1660, was living at Newton in 1733, who was a daughter of John Alexander and Beatrice ———. Occupation, carpenter. Resided at Deerfield, Massachusetts.

CHILDREN:

89. I. John, born about 1686-7; married first, Mary —————; married second, Hannah Allen. +
90. II. Abigail, born January 4, 1684; married Jaques Desnoions or De Noyan +
91. III. Samuel, born December 25, 1688 (T. R.)
92. IV. Thankful, born September 5, 1691 (T. R.); married Adrien L. Grain—Lavallee.
93. V. Ebenezer, born December 5, 1694 (T. R.); remained in Canada.
94. VI. Joseph (or Josiah), born April 12, 1699 (T. R.); married Mary Sanssoucy +
- [Entered in the Town Records of Deerfield as Josiah; named in his fathers will as Joseph.]

The following is taken from the record of JOHN PYNCHON, Justice of the Peace, Springfield, Massachusetts:

"May 2, 1655. JOHN STEBBINS being taken notice for misbehaving himself toward his aged ffather calling him old foole, uttering those unseemly words toward him, was this day aforesaid examined thereof, the matter beinge not ripe for a fynall issue the said JOHN STEBBINS did before the commissioners bynd himself in the sune of fforty pounds to appear before authority here established to make answer for the said misbehaving himself to his ffather when he shall be thereunto required."

"This matter beinge further considered there was not found full proof of such evil carriage, whereof he was released and discharged of his bond above mentioned."

In 1667, JOHN'S brother, Benoni, and a comrade, were induced by a young Indian, to run away to the French camp in Canada. At a court held in March of the next year, JOHN acknowledged that he had been privy to the plot of his brother Benoni and comrade to run away; and the court, because he had concealed his knowledge of it, sentenced him to be "whipt on the naked body with ten stripes or else to pay 40s to the County Treasurer." The fine was paid by his father and he was released.

On May 10, 1670, among "The names of the pr'sent propriators with the number of Common Rights, and number of Lotts in succession as they wer drawn," we find the following:

No of lot as drawn	No. of Cow Commons.	No. of Lots
		1".

In a "list of houselots drawn by the Committee this 14—3, 71: [May 14, 1671]" we find:

	No. Lot	Cow Com.	Sheep Com.	Acres	Roods	Rods
"JOHN STEBBINS	13	20	0	7	—	10."

Lot number thirteen is supposed to have been situated where Lincoln Wells lived in 1895, in Deerfield.

JOHN STEBBINS was a soldier under Captain Lothrop; and was the only man known to have escaped unhurt from the Bloody Brook massacre, which occurred on September 18, 1675. The second day after the massacre, he enlisted under the gallant Captain Samuel Moseley, and probably served with him through King Philip's War. After remaining a few years in the vicinity of Boston, he went to Deerfield at the permanent settlement, and resided on lot number thirty-five.

The oath of allegiance was administered to him on the 8th of February, 1678.

The evidence of his escape from Bloody Brook massacre is found in the following petition:

"To the much Honoured counsel now sitting in Boston, the Humble petition of JOHN STEBBENS (of muddy River), Most Humbly sheweth, your pore petitioner, hath bene a souldier, in the service of the countrey (about a year & half) & was under the comand of captain Lathrope & with him when he and his company were destroyed, & under the comand of captain

On February 29, 1703-4, when the Deerfield massacre occurred, his house <sup>p. 317.</sup> was burned and he and his entire family were taken captives by the Indians. He, his wife, and son John are the only ones that are known to have come back. The others were taken to Canada. In "Fitz John Winthrop's Table of Losses at the Destruction of Df'd, 1703-4" is the following:

	"Captivite or Burnt	Slain	Alive at home	Estate lost
JOHN STEBBINS	7 himself wife & 5 children	0	0	100 house burnt & Estate in it."

[The figure 100 in the last column probably represents English pounds, which was the current money of New England.]

In 1723-4, JOHN STEBBINS and his son John sold to Ensign Janothan Wells, lot Number 38.

The will of JOHN STEBBINS is dated July 31, 1723, at Deerfield. His wife, Dorothy, his son John, and Thomas Wells were appointed executors. Among other bequests, he left one-eighth of his lands to each of his children then in Canada, viz.: Samuel, Ebenezer, Joseph, Abigail, and Thankful, provided they would return to New England to live. The share of each, if he died in New England, was to descend to his heirs; otherwise, to revert to those who remained in New England. It then continues: "Those that will not live in New England shall have five shillings apiece, and no more * * * Yet be it forever understood that if my daughter Abigail come not and tarry as above said, then Aaron Denieur [Desnoions], her son, shall be my Heir in her Room and Stead, provided Said Aaron Continue in this Country then After my decease and my wife's decease Said Aaron shall enter upon that which should have been his mothers part and possess it until his mother comes, but if she come not and fulfill the above said Conditions and Aaron stays in New England and doth them, then the said eighth part of my lands to descend to said Aarons heirs forever" * * * "And if some of my children now in Canada, shall come and fulfill the conditions * * * though the rest come not * * * then my lands shall be divided between my son John and Aaron, and those that do come s. John having three times as much as one of the rest".

On the 29th of June, 1707, EBENEZER STEBBINS, son of JOHN STEBBINS, who was then living with his sister Abigail in Canada, was baptised in the Catholic church, receiving the name of JACQUES CHARLES from his godfather, Jacques Charles de Sabrevois, who was captain of a detachment of marines.

Hoyt, in Antiquarian Researches, says:

"A gentleman who recently resided in Montreal stated that at the lake of the Two Mountains, near the mouth of Grand River, he saw a French girl who informed him that her grandmother was THANKFUL STEBBINS, who was one of the captives taken from Deerfield in 1704.

Her father, JOHN STEBBINS, who died in 1723, made provision in his will for five children then in Canada, provided they returned and remained in New England. Samuel alone returned. Their ages ranged from four to seventeen.

When he was twelve years old, BENONI STEBBINS and other Northampton lads, having been entertained by Juanguelatt, a friendly Indian, with romantic stories of the jolly camp life of the French up the river, of the gay trappings of the officers, and of the merry dances with pretty maidens, concluded to run away to the French in Canada. They stole "twenty-four shillings in silver, and seven shillings in wampum," to pay Juanguelatt for helping them to carry out their plans. The theft and plot being discovered, Juanguelatt was whipped and forced to give up the money. Nims, the ring-leader, received fifteen lashes on the naked back. BENONI and his other comrade received eleven lashes each, which was probably sufficient to subdue their romantic propensities.

He was in the Turner Falls fight, May 19, 1676.

BENONI having married Mary Broughton Bennett, was attempting to prepare a dwelling place for his bride, on his father's lot in Deerfield, when he was taken prisoner by the Indians on September 19, 1677, in the "Ashpelon Raid."

After gathering such plunder as they could carry, the savages withdrew and joined the Hatfield captives on the east side of Deerfield mountain, where they camped for the night, and in the morning took up their painful march northward.

The party that captured Hatfield numbered twenty-six Indians under the command of the Chief Ashpelon. When Ashpelon left Canada, a party of Nipmunks were in his company. At some point on the road they parted from him, apparently fixing upon Nashua Ponds as a rendezvous. Ashpelon sent messengers to notify the Nipmunks to come to him on the Connecticut; with these went BENONI STEBBINS. He escaped about October 2nd, from a point near Templeton, and reached Hadley on the 4th. As a consequence of this act, the English prisoners were all in danger of torture, and it was only through the kindness and policy of Ashpelon that this fate was averted.

One of the captives related that, after the escape of BENONI, the remaining captives were bound and that "one of the Indians, a Captain among them, and always our great Friend, met me coming in, and told me STEBBINS was run away; and the Indians spake of burning us; some of only burning and biting off our fingers by and by. He said there would be a Court, and all would speak their minds, but he would speak last, and would say that the Indian that let STEBBINS run away was only in fault, and so no hurt should be done us, fear not; so it proved accordingly".

The news of the Hatfield raid spread rapidly through the Colony; and when BENONI STEBBINS returned with intelligence from the captives, interest in the rescue of the prisoners was greatly increased. STEBBINS brought definite information. The Indians under Ashpelon were, he said, "Norwoolucks"—river Indians that had fled to Canada after the late war.

Major John Pyncheon promptly wrote the following letter to Captain Sylvester Salisbury:

out of all doubt, God in his P'vidence hath sent in one of 8 capitivated men, BENONI STEBBINGS by name wch is Ye occasion of these lines to yrselſe by Post, to give you an accot thereof & desire you to put ye Maquas vpon psueing their & our Enymys there being greate likelyhood of ye Maquas overtaking ym. BENONI STEBBINGS came into Hadly last night in ye night, whose relation was sent to me wch being but an houre since I had it, I psently resolved vpon sending Post to you. Take his relation as followeth. The company of Indians was twenty only about sixe or 7 squas made 26 in all. They were this country Indians belonging to Nalwotogg all of ym but one a Narriganset. They came free Canada 3 Months agoe & had bin Hunting & were doubtfull whether to fall on Northampton or Hatfield, at last resolved on Hatfield & caryed away from Hatfield 17 psons & 3 from Deerfield, besides ys man that is com in, so yet they haue 20 captives with ym 3 of ym being men & all well as he says when they took ym at Deerfield, after the Noise and whoops were over at Deerefield, their first Inquiry was whether there were any Maquas there abouts & vpon information yt some had been there, & were supposed not to be farr off, they were all husht, & startled & greatly afraid & goeing silently away forth wth; they took up their Lodging at Deerefield River mouth & next day crossed ye greate River vizt Conecticot to ye east side of it, the next day crossed ye River againe, afterwards they Passed ye River many tymes having cannoes wherein they caryed ye women & children being about 2 days Journey above Squakheag (Springfield) they sent a company of ym about half of ym to Nashaway, to call of some Indians yt haue bin there all this time of ye war, & took BENONI STEBBINGS along with ym thither. Coming to Nashaway ponds, there were 3 Indian men & about halfe a score of squaws with there children there they went too to take along with ym having travelled from ye company they left 2 days to Squakheag, & then from Squakheag somewhat more than thirty miles to ym Indians neere Nashaway who Pluckt up their stakes having plenty of fish especially eeles, & many dried huckleberrys but no corne: This BENONI being sent with 2 women to carry Hucle berrys Ran away from them, & was psently psued by some men & at one tyme was but a swamp betweent ym but night comeing on he escaped from his psuers: He says yt one of ye Indians yt they had from about Nashaway Ponds, semes to be a counsellor & wth him they consulted much & spake of sending to ye English, but at last resolved for Canada, yet talkt of making a forte a greate way up the River & abiding there this winter, talked also of carying the captives to ye French & selling ym to ye French which he concludes they resolved on, but make but slow Passage, having so many women and children: He concluded it would be, It may be, 20 days er they get to ye Lake hunting by ye way. It was Tuesday morning last that he escaped from ye pty wch caryed him with them nere Nashaway, & they had above 30 miles to goe back to Squakheag; and then neere 2 d. Journey more to ye rest above Squakheag: Ye way he says vp this River is vnpassable for English men & their goeing is by Barken cannoes much of ye way & then to ye best side of ye River men foote it leaving ye worst way: The unpassableness of ye way renders it vnpossible for us to pfue or doe any good: But ye conveying speedy word to ye Maquas gives not only a Possibility of their overtaking ym weh Deare Sr is ye end of these lines to you: To request you (if none of ye Maqua Sachems be at Albany) to send at our chnage to ye Chiefe of ye Maquas & give ym an accot of matters, & desire their speedy psueing these Bloody Villians & enemys of ym & forthwith & without any delay, by which means I hope this Barbarous Crew (who are enemys to Religion Civility & all humanity & haue so deeply imbrued their hands in most Innocent Blood) may be met with in their returne, before they come to ye Lake or at ye Lake & so our captives Recovered for weh we shall give ye Maquas suitable rewards. • • •

Wth my endeared Love & Respects to you commending you to ye ptection of ye Almighty God I remaine Sr.

Yor very loving ffriend & servant

Statement of BENONI STEBBINS.

"BENONI STEBBINS which was taken captive by the Indians at Deerfield 12 miles from Hatfield related as followeth: That the Indians that took him weare al Norwooluck Indians saue only one which was a Naraganset. They were 26 in al 18 of them fighting men the rest 2 squas old men & boys. They told him that they had liued at the French & intended to return there again to sel the captiues to them weh had Incouraged them that they should haue eight pound peece for them and the french Indians did intend to come wth them the next time either in the spring or in the winter if they had suces this time.

The manner of his escape was thus when they came 2 days Journey above Squakheag they sent part of their company to Wotehuset hills to fetch away 2 smal compeny of Indians that had liued there al this war time with whom they sent this captiue he being sent with 2 squas and a mare to fetch some hucleberies a little way from the company when he got vpon the mare and rid till he tired the mare & then run on foot, & so escaped to Hadly, being 2 days & ½ wthout victuals. This relation was taken from his mouth at Northampton 6th Instant.

BENONI STEBBINS took the oath of allegiance February 8, 1678.

At the permanent settlement of Deerfield, BENONI STEBBINS built a house on lot Number 13, which was then owned by his father.

The following from the court records of Mar. 26, 1678, gives a glimpse of the life of MRS. STEBBINS, and that of the times, worth preserving.

"MARY STEBBINS, first wife of Benoni Stebbins, being presented to this Court for wearing silk contrary to Law, & for that she Agravated it, by persisting in it when she was once presented before: This Considering the agravation, & how unfit such things are in this day of trouble, did judge her to pay a fine to the County of 10 shillings: As also, BENONI STEBBINS openly affronting the Court in saying he would not pay the money due for fees to the Clerk of the court, it being a rising up against the Law of the Country: this Court adjudged him to pay as a fine to the County 10 sh. forthwith & Committed him to the constable for the payment of the aforesaid fines."

It is to be feared that poor BENONI, between his indignation towards

When cow commons in the meadow fell short of measure, "wanting lands" p. 266. were located elsewhere; but the rule was to assess the fence on the original number of commons. Votes like the following illustrate this practice. After granting sixteen acres to John and BENONI STEBBINS, "for want of 8 acres of measure in the meadow, yt is to say, in the whole 36 cow-com'oms (formerly John Stebbins' sen'r), ye s'd Jno. & BENONY making com'on fence, & paying Rates for the whole 36 com'ons forever."

BENONI STEBBINS also owned land in the Common Field with the p. 196 amount of fence set on the basis of "two Rhods to ye common, or eleven foot to ye aere."

During the attack on Deerfield, Feb. 29, 1703-4, by the French and Indians, p. 312. the house of BENONI STEBBINS, which stood about eight rods southwest of Ensign Sheldon's, was occupied by SERGT. STEBBINS, his wife and five children; David Hoyt, his wife and child; and probably Joseph Catlin, with his wife and child; and Benjamin Church, a soldier. There were besides, three other men, and perhaps other women and children. This house being "attaqued later than some," the inmates were aroused, made ready to defend themselves; and the assailants were driven back with loss. It was again beset by a strong force of three hundred men, but the little garrison was a match for that. Again, later in the morning, nearly the whole army surrounded the house, pouring bullets upon it from every quarter. The fire was bravely returned, and several of the enemy fell before the sharp shooters:

among them, a French lieutenant, the second in command of the expedition. Desperate attempts were now made to set the house on fire, which cost the lives of a Maqua chief and several of his men. The fury of the assailants increased with their losses, but they were forced to leave the field and take shelter in the Sheldon house and the meeting-house. From these covers, they continued to shower their bullets upon the heroic garrison, which, however, kept them at bay until relieved by reinforcements from Hatfield. SERGT. STEBBINS was killed. Mrs. Hoyt was wounded, and also a soldier, probably Church.

At the time of the arrival of the Hatfield and Hadley men, the main body of the enemy had drawn off with their captives and booty, across the river. Scattered bands were engaged in wanton destruction of animals and property; but a considerable body was still besieging the house of BENONI STEBBINS. These flew towards the main body, like chaff from the threshing floor, before the charge of the infuriated men from below. Observing this charge, de Rouville hastily threw his army into an ambuscade. The reckless daring of the pursuers, led doubtless by Sergeant Benjamin Waite, carried them into the trap. Overpowered ten to one, our men retreated, fighting inch by inch; and reached the fort, with the loss of eleven of their number.

An account from an old record is as follows: "One house, viz: BENONI STEBBINS', they attacked Later than some others, yt those in it were well awakened, being 7 men, besides women and children, who stood stoutly to yir Armes, firing upon ye Enemy and ye Enemy upon ym, causing sevl of the Enemy to fall, of wch was one frentchman, a Gentile man to appearance. EBENEZER STEBBINS, son of Benoni, was a dragoon in the band of troopers that pursued the Indians, July 14, 1698. This was known as the "Pomeroy Pursuit," for a full description of which see No. 63.

JOSIAH STEBBINS and William Holton were the noted weavers in Northfield, Massachusetts, in 1721. JOSIAH STEBBINS also belonged to the company of garrison soldiers stationed in Northfield from December 1, 1721 to July 24, 1722. His name also appears on Captain Barnard's muster roll, among the men raised for the defense of Springfield and Northfield, in 1722. In a list of "Men under Capt. Joseph Kellogg in Northfield & Deerfield from Nov. 20, 1723 to May 30, 1724", is found the name of "SERGT. JOSIAH STEBBINS, Northampton". This company was raised for the protection of Northfield, Deerfield, and Sunderland.

July 9, 1725. Administration on estate of JOSIAH STEBBINS of Northfield was taken by Joseph Stebbins and Asahel Stebbins brethren to the deceased.

In the Inventory taken July 20, 1725 and Returned am't'g to £116. 16. 6 (it appears that there was no will & he a bachelor) the heirs his brothers and sisters entered into an agreement and divided the Estate on [among] John Hannum & Elizabeth his wife, mother to the deceased, Thomas Stebbins Joseph Stebbins and Asahel Stebbins brothers to the deceased, William Wait & Elizabeth his wife, Samuel King & Hannah his wife, Experience and Mary Stebbins.

On the 13th of May, 1704 (old style), the Indians attacked the village of Paskhomuck. Ten Indians went to the lower farms, where there was but one house, in which Captain Wright lived, at the place afterwards owned by Mr. Elias Lyman. Captain Wright refused to surrender, and shot one of the Indians and broke his arm. They then attempted to burn the house by shooting spiked arrows, dipped in brimstone, upon the roof; but THOMAS STEBBINS, JR., then fifteen years old, wrapped himself in a feather bed, drew water from the well, and put out the fire. The lad was visiting at his uncle's house, and bravely risked his life to save the property of his relative. On March 9, 1713-14, he was chosen "Fence Veiwer." He afterwards lived in Southampton.

	Abigail Bartlett

daughter of John Stebbins and Abigail Bartlett, was born July 8, 1664, at Northampton, Massachusetts, killed by French and Indians, February 29, 1704, at Deerfield, Massachusetts; married November 5, 1679 (T. R.) at Northampton, Massachusetts, to CAPTAIN JOHN SHELDON, born December 5, 1658, at Northampton, Massachusetts, died about 1734, at Hartford, Connecticut, who was a son of Isaac Sheldon and Mary Woodford. He married second, Widow Elizabeth Pratt.

CHILDREN, first two born at Northampton, balance at Deerfield:

127. I. John Sheldon, born September 19, 1681; married December 3, 1703, Hannah Chapin. He died June 26, 1713.

I,
p. 410.

Among the companions of JOHN SHELDON of Deerfield, during his childhood, were John and Benoni Stebbins, sons of John Stebbins of Northampton. While yet lacking a month of his majority, he married their sister, HANNAH STEBBINS, she being then but little over fifteen years of age. The boy husband and his child wife remained in Northampton until after the birth of their first two children; but the pioneer spirit was born in them; and we soon find him with his young family, among the founders of a frontier settlement, as her father and grandfather had been before him.

JOHN SHELDON was among the first permanent settlers at Deerfield, where he received a grant of eight acres "on the Fort Hill, which lies at the east end of the meadow land, over Eagle Brook and without the meadow fence."

P. V. M. A.
I p. 410.

He is first mentioned in the town records of Deerfield, in 1686, when he was chosen on a committee "to lay out all the woodlands". The same year he was chosen on the first board of Selectmen, and served in that capacity almost continuously until 1704. The legislative and executive powers of this board were then very great. The selectmen generally served as assessors also, until the Revolution.

Sheldon's
Deerfield
II, p. 868.

In a list of commissioned officers who served between the years 1686 and 1886, we find the name of JOHN SHELDON, who was commissioned Captain.

Sheldon's
Deerfield,
I, p. 22.

JOHN SHELDON was Ensign in the Military Company for the defense of Deerfield, Massachusetts, in King William's War, 1689-90 to 1696; and in Queen Anne's War, 1702-1713.

I, p. 605.

In 1689, upon the alarm occasioned by the burning of Schnecktady, the town voted to provide "habitations within the fortifications" for such as were not able to do it for themselves. JOHN SHELDON, Benoni Stebbins and Edward Allen were chosen "to appoint where every person's house or cellar shall stand, with ye bigness ya shall be, yt is, such houses or cellars as are to be built by ye town."

p. 212.

Sir Edmond Andros, who was put at the head of all the New England colonies, was very tyrannical and oppressive in his administration and aroused much opposition. On the 18th of April, 1689, he was seized by the people and imprisoned. The government was assumed by a Committee of Safety, which on the 2d of May, issued a call for the towns to choose representatives to meet in Boston on the 9th. There is no record of any meeting held in Deerfield in response to this call; but the people were ripe for revolt, and the Selectmen assuming the grave responsibility, drew up the following:

"We the Town of Deerfield, May 17, 1689, complying with the desire of the present Counsell of Safety, to choose one among us as a representative to send down to signify our minds and concurrence with the Counsell for establishing of the government, have chosen and deputed Lieutenant Thomas Wells, and signified to him our minds for the proceeding to the settlement of the government, as hath been signified to us, from the Honorable Counsell of Safety, and those other representatives.

JOHN SHELDON,	} Selectmen.
Benj. Hastings, Benoni Stebbins,
Thomas French,

In 1691 he was one of the "Chief Sergeants" of Deerfield. Before the close of 1692, he was made Ensign. p. 223.
p. 226.

The following will show the condition of affairs at Deerfield at that time :

"Feb ye 8, 1692-3. To His Excellency, Sr Wm Phipps, Knt, Govr of ye Massachusetts, with ye Honr Counsell & Assembly in ye Great & General Court convened in Boston:— Hist.

p. 228.

The Inhabitants of ye town of Deref'd, in the County of Hampshire, Humbly petition this Hon'd Courts considerarion of their present afflictive estate & condition as followeth: Having for a long time Been Much exercised, & at great expenses in purchasing & setlinge our place anew, & by reason of feares and Hazzard of the approaching of enemies, improving a great part of our time in Watchings, Wardings, & Scoutings & Making of fortifications, beside the inevitable losses & mishaps we now meet with in oure labors, both by ye hand of God, & the inconveniences of improving our lands or labors in these times of fears and hazzard as aforsd to any measure of advantage for support of our families and ye necessary expenses of our Town and Church, and reliefe of such amongst us as we are bound in contience to relieve: whereby we have been exposed to many straits and are brought very low & in a likely way to come to extremity, so that it becomes a question amongst us, whether we have not a call to apply ourselves to this Honorable Court, for an order to depart ye place, we being already convinced that if we should let our whole accommodations to pay ye charge, and take no other rent, we should be gainers as at present things are circumstanced, besides ye more eminent hazzards we are in of ye excursions of ye enemy, being 13 mile distant northward from any other of ye towns in this County, and a little handful more in ye mouths of ye enemy aforsd being but about 50 men.

Upon the considerations aforsd, and many more too large here to number up, we humbly entreate that we may have such creedence from your Honors, and such helps and reliefe as our nesessities if not extreme difficulties call for; and being heartily wiling to serve ye King & Queen's majesties and your Honors as Good and Loyal and obedient subjects, and especially Christ and his interests in this place, satisfing ourselves in your special care and readiness to relieve such, (thinking with allowance to hold it here a Little longer.) places as are mostly exposed as aforsd, Humbly propose that we might have a grant from your Honors out of their Maiesties treasury in this province, a suitable supply of amunition, we having no Town Stock; as also an abatement of those taxes that are now called for in ye year 92, and those yet to be called for, till such time, (if ever it be,) we may recover our-selves from this low estate we are now in, ye granting of wich will much oblige your poor p'titioners, and for your Honors ever to pray.

The following was the result of this petition:

p. 241.

"In answer to the Inhabitants of Deerfield this House doe judge it Meete and Requisite that a Committee be chosen out of the Towns Adjacent to be joined with some meet persons of Said Town of Deerfield, who shall manage that affair, and sett men to worke for the Repairing their fortifications for the Security of the said Town, and that something be allowed them for supply of Amunition, all wch to be paid out of the Treasury of the province not exceeding the sune of _____ that the place may be mainetained and not deserted".

March 11, 1692-3, the town voted "that the meeting hous shall be new seated: that Deacon David Hoyt & Deacon JNO SHELDON shall be 2 of ye persons to doe it and Beno Stebins to be wth ym in sd work".

At a town meeting held Sept. 9, 1693, it was voted "That yr shall be a man sent to Boston on Town acct to act & doe for ye Town such business as shall be committed to him: that ye Town shall find money to bear his charges and pay for his time for his Journey &c.

II, p. 855.

He was moderator of town meetings nine times, his first year being 1694 and the last one 1703. I, p. 204.

He was chosen to "seat ye meeting house" in 1696, and again in 1701.

On March 3, 1700-1, "ENS. JNO SHELDON was Chosen Com'issioner for Assessments for ye year ensuing"; and at the same meeting he was chosen Assessor for the "Country Taxes". I, p. 275.

The "Old Indian House" was built by JOHN SHELDON about the year 1696, and stood at the north end of the training field, facing the south. Its frame was largely of oak. It was twenty-one by forty-two feet two stories, with a steep pitch roof. In front the second story projected about two feet, at the ends the cross beams were supported by ornamental oak brackets. A lean-to thirteen and a half feet wide, ran the whole length of the north side, its roof being a continuation of that on the main building. The ground floor was thus thirty-four and a half by forty-two feet. Near the centre was the chimney, about ten feet square at the base, with fire-places on the sides and rear. South of it was the front entry, which, including the stairway, was eight by twelve feet. The lower floor was laid under the sill, which projecting beyond the wall, formed a ledge around the bottom of the rooms, a tempting seat for the children. Stepping over the sill into the front entry, doors on either hand opened into the front rooms: stairs on the right led by two square landings, and two turns to the left, to a passage over the entry, from which at the right and left doors led to the chambers. In the rear of the chimney was a small, dark room, with stairs to the garret. Including the garret, there were five rooms in the main structure, each of them lighted by two windows with diamond panes set in lead. The kitchen was in the central part of the lean-to, with windows in the rear; east of this was a bedroom, and west, the buttery and back entry. The fireplace was a deep cavern, the jambs and back at right angles to each other and to the floor. Here, hanging on nails driven into a piece of wood built into the structure for the purpose, hung the branding iron, the pot-hook, the long-handled frying pan, the iron peel or oven slice, the scooped fireshovel with stout tongs standing by. In one end was the oven, its mouth flush with the back of the fireplace. In this nook, when the oven was not in use, stood a wooden bench, on which the children could sit and study the catechism and spelling book by firelight, or watch the stars through the square tower above their heads, the view interrupted only by the black, shiny lug-pole, and its great trammels; or in the season, its burden of hams and fitches of pork or venison, hanging to be cured in the smoke. The mantletree was a huge beam of oak, protected from the blaze only by the current of cold air constantly ascending. The fire-places in the front rooms were of the same pattern, but smaller than that in the kitchen. Fires were seldom built there except on state occasions. The furniture for the most part was home-made, rude and unpainted, a few stools, benches and I, p. 277.

splint-bottomed chairs, a table or two, plain chests, rude low bedsteads, with home-made ticks, filled with straw or pine needles. The floors were sprinkled with fine white sand, which, on particular occasions, was brushed into fanciful patterns with a birch broom, or bundle of twigs. The partitions and walls of the "Old Indian House" were of panel-work, with mouldings about the doors and windows. These mouldings were all cut by hand from solid wood. No finer lumber is found than that with which this old house was finished.

Lulled by frequent false alarms into a fatal sense of security, JOHN SHELTON and his neighbors slept soundly on the night of the 29th of February, 1703-4. The night was well nigh spent, and the guard lay heavy in his first sleep, when "the enemy came in like a flood". Roused by their hideous yells, the sleepers awoke bewildered, to find themselves surrounded by dusky faces fiendish with fresh war paint.

The stout door of ENSIGN JOHN SHELTON'S house resisted the efforts to break it down. It was cut partly through with axes, and bullets fired through the place at random, one of which killed Mrs. Sheldon as she was sitting on a bed in the east room. Entrance was finally effected at the back door, which, according to family traditions, was left open by a lad who sought safety in flight. Most of the family were captured. The house was set fire, but was saved, and stood until 1849. The ENSIGN being second in command of the garrison, was away from home. In the efforts for the recovery and redemption of the captives from Canada, ENSIGN JOHN SHELDON was a central figure. To his tenderness of heart, his unflagging faith, his indomitable will, his muscles of iron, and his nerves of steel, is due in a large measure the success which followed his resolution to risk his life in a visit to his distressed children and friends in Canada. He could no longer endure the uncertainty hanging over their fate. Dec. 13, 1704, Governor Dudley informed the Council that "JOHN SHELDON and John Wells of Deerfield, who both had relations in captivity, were now attending him, and very urgent to have license to travel thither". On the 19th he announced that Capt. John Livingstone of Albany, who was acquainted with the route by the lakes, was in town, and was willing to go with SHELDON and Wells for £100 and his expenses. The Council advised his being employed, and the next day the three Johns, with credentials from the Governor and letters to Marquis de Vaudreuil, took the Bay path for Hatfield, where they were fitted out for the journey by Colonel Partridge. Their route was over the Hoosac Mountain to Albany, and thence northwards through the wilderness. By their persistent endeavors, the envoys secured the release of Hannah Sheldon, and one other of the Ensign's children, and three others; and early in May the whole party set out for home by the way of Albany. In January, 1706, he made another trip to Canada to secure the release of the other captives; and on the 30th of May, he embarked for Boston with forty-four captives on board, arriving at their destination August 2, 1706, after considerable delay on the journey. On January 14, 1707, the government sent him on a third expedition to Canada for the remaining captives.

"At a legal town Meeting in Deerfield November 30, 1706, the town then unanimously made choice of Captain Jonathan Wells, ENS. JNO. SHELDON and Thomas French, to go down to ye bay for them, and in thair be half to act and treat with thair pastor the reverend mr. jno. Williams, in regard to his resett'g with them againe in ye work of ye ministry; as also to take advice and counsel of ye Elders in our County for the management of that work; as also to put up a petition to ye generall court or counsel, for a grant of money for ye encouragement of ye reverant mr. jno. Williams in his resettlement in said work with ym; and in all these particulars to act and doe according to ye best of thair diseration". The desired grant was voted by the General Court, six days later, and Mr. Williams was soon reestablished in his chosen work.

On his return from Canada, JOHN SHELDON presented his bill of expenses incurred on his trip, accompanying the bill with the following petition: "Aug. 8, 1706.

p. 355.

To his Excellency, Joseph Dudley, &c, &c, &c,

The Petition of JOHN SHELDON in behalfe of himself, Joseph Bradley, & John Wells, humbly sheweth

That your Petitioner with the afore mentioned Bradley & Wells were Sent by your Excellency & Council the last winter by Land to Canada to Obtain the Return of the Captives wherein they have so far succeeded, as that on the 2d instant They Arrived here with forty-four of the Captives. Your Petitioner entered upon the said service on the 15th day of Janu'ry last, the said Bradley on the 20th day & sd Wells on the 25th day of the same month.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly Pray your Excellency & this Hon'ble Court to Take into your Consideration their service aforesaid and the extraordinary Difficulties, Hazzards and Hardships they have undergone & the time spent therein, and Order Them such Allowance & Consideration for the same as in your wisdom you Shall think meet. And your Petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray.

Oct. 17, 1707, a town meeting was held at which "It was voted to send a petition to ye generall Cort for a grant of money towards ye maintenance of ye revarant Mr Jno Williams in ye work of ye ministry in Deerfield. it was also voted yt Colonall partrig and ENSIN JNO SHELDON should be implied to manage yt affaire: Att ye same meeting, ye town made choise of Capt Jonathan Weals and ENSIN JNO SHELDON for to git a petition drawn to send to ye generall Cort and allso impowered them to Sine it in the towns behalf:

In their petition the committee say:

"We, Labouring Still under many Difficulties & Streights, being but a Smal handfull of us & most of us very low in the World, are at Considerable charges among ourselves, in Building a House and providing other Necessarys & Conveniencys for the Resettlement of our Rev'd Pastor, not here to be named, & Many who Deserted ye Place quickly after ye Desolation, By our Rev. Pastor's return and giveing hopes of Settleing again amongst us has encouraged their Return, with many other who Returned out of Captivity, who Instead of helping in such charges, have rather need of help to build Houses for themselves, & providing other Necessarys for their Subsistance. Our Necessities putting us upon it & being Imboldened by former favors & Incouragements, Wee humbly crave your help for the maintenance & Incouragement of our Worthy Pastor amongst us. You were pleased to do considerable ye last year that way. Our necessities being still very great, we Pray you would consider us in that Regard: We have devolved this our Concern into ye hands of ye Worshipfull Col. Sam'll Partridge, Esq., & CAPT. JOHN SHELDEN, to manage for us, hoping your Honors will consider your Poor Petitioners & for your Honors we shall ever pray.

Lot No. 4 in Deerfield was owned in 1708 by ENSIGN JOHN SHELDON, and it has continued in the family ever since, being handed down from father to son. p. 598.

He removed to Hartford, where, in 1708, he married a second time. ENSIGN JOHN SHELDON kept a tavern in the "Old Indian House" before 1704, and perhaps after. In 1723 John, his eldest son, being dead, he gave the place to his second son, EBENEZER. By him the lot was sold in 1744 to Jonathan Hoyt, whose son David had married the daughter of Ebenezer the year before. P. V.

In "An account of the Draughts of the 1st & second division in Brimfield [Mass.] as they were drawn for by the grantees & the names of Each grantee as the Lotts came forth," we find "DEAC'N JOHN STEBBINS Lott 44."

In 1722 there was some dissatisfaction in regard to some lots having been granted without any conditions of settlement. A committee was appointed to adjust matters, and on September 9, 1730, made their report to the General Court. Among other items of the report was the following: "They Setled on JOHN STEBBINS, Wm. Nelson, & John Charles (who had each of them two grants of 120 Acres) 90 Acre Lotts. These persons seem'd contented also when & since the settlement was made."

In 1729, JOHN STEBBINS, Robert Moulton, & David Shaw were chosen "to goe to the General Court & Elsewhere to manage in Behalf of sd town in all Respects, with respect to the great Difficulties yt sd town was then laboring under" etc. They requested the town of Brimfield "to allow grant & order that all money that has Ben Expended by us in the Publick Service & consens of the Proprietors of the sd town of Brimfield from time to time according as is hereafter discribed yt the same may be repaid to each and every of us severally according to our disbursements by the sd proprietors

JOHN STEBBINS and others petitioned the General Court, in February, 1730-1, asking that they might be quieted in the possession of their original grants at Brimfield. After numerous petitions and remonstrances of which JOHN STEBBINS was one of the signers, the matter was finally settled, and at the first town meeting of Brimfield, which was held March 16, 1730-1, "JOHN STEBBENS [was] Choose a selectman for said town of Brimfield. It was also "voted that JOHN STEBBENS be town trausor [treasurer] for the said town of Brimfield." At the second town meeting which was held May 4, 1731.

"First JOHN STEBBINS chosen moderator for the day."

"Secondly Voted that three men be choose to goe to the General Court to manage affirs their for the town of Brimfield."

JOHN STEBBINS served as one of the selectmen of Brimfield in 1731, 1732, 1734, 1736, 1738, 1740, 1742, 1744, 1748, and 1749. He was moderator of the annual meetings of Brimfield in 1732, 1734, and 1735; and in 1744 was assessor.

In the seating of the meeting house September 12, 1757, JOHN STEBBINS p. 304.
was assigned to "the fore seat below the Pulpit."

                                  { Abigail Brooks      Hannah Wright      Sarah ————— }

daughter of Samuel Stebbins and Abigail Brooks, was born November 30, 1695, probably at Longmeadow, Massachusetts; died after October 7, 1777, probably at Springfield, Massachusetts; married August 1, 1717, probably at Springfield, Massachusetts, to JOHN HITCHCOCK, born December 14, 1692, at Springfield, Massachusetts; will dated March 14, 1774, probated October 7, 1777, at Springfield, Massachusetts, who was a son of Ensign John Hitchcock and Mary Ball. Resided at Springfield, Massachusetts.

197.	I.	Abigail Hitchcock, born June 1, 1718; married David Hoar of Brimfield.
198.	II.	Miriam Hitchcock, born July 14, 1720; married Jedediah Bliss.
199.	III.	John Hitchcock, born April 21, 1722; married Thankful Burt.
200.	IV.	Reuben Hitchcock, born December 20, 1723; died 1745.
201.	V.	Josiah Hitchcock, born November 29, 1726; married Martha Hitchcock.
202.	VI.	Simeon Hitchcock, born July 22, 1728; married Rachel Chi- chester of Cornwall.
203.	VII.	Benjamin Hitchcock, born September 2, 1730; died January 5, 1780.
204.	VIII.	Isaac Hitchcock, born June 7, 1732; died July 30, 1781.
205.	IX.	Levi Hitchcock, born March 20, 1734; married Lucy Adams.

JOHN HITCHCOCK was one of the one hundred and twenty-five persons for whom the town of Springfield laid out the east end of their town—four miles wide, east and west, and twelve miles long, north and south—in three divisions, each person to have a lot in each division. The widest lot, Mr. Pyncheon's, was one hundred and thirty rods wide, and four miles long; the narrowest being eight feet. They called sixteen feet a rod.

Mention is made in his will, which was signed March 14, 1774, and presented to the Probate court "First Tuesday in October being seventh day of s'd month 1777", of all his children except Miriam and Reuben. He gave to his son, John, all his land at Wilbraham, "being my lot in ye outward commons on the east side of the Great river, being about thirty rods in breadth and four miles in length."

Her husband's residence was about half a mile east of Westfield green, on the farm owned and occupied, in 1852, by his grandson, Charles Noble. He was chosen selectman in 1738, 1740, 1741, 1744, 1751, 1760 and 1761, and moderator of town meeting, in 1740. On the 6th of March, 1741, he was appointed, in connection with others, to inform Mr. John Ballantine that the town had invited him to be their minister, and to receive his answer. In 1757 he was representative to the General Court. In deeds, he is styled, in 1745, tanner; in 1754, saddler; and in 1759, cordwainer. His will was dated Dec. 20, 1770, and proved Sept. 3, 1771.

The monument erected to his memory bears the following inscription:

"Ensign

In "An account of the Draughts of the 1st & second division in Brimfield as they were drawn for by the grantees & the names of Each grantee as the Lotts came forth", we find:

"THOMAS STEBBINS

Lott 21".

p. 247.

In 1722 there appears to have been some dissatisfaction in regard to some lots having been granted without any conditions of settlement, and a statement of this and other grievances was made to the Governor and the General Court, among the signers of which is found the name THOMAS STEBBINS.

p. 258.

A committee was appointed to adjust matters, and on September 9, 1730, made their report to the General Court. The following is an extract from the said report:

"They setld on John Lumbard, David Lumbard, Samuel Hubbard, Peter Haynes, Joseph Haynes, Peter Montague, Henry Burt, THOMAS STEBBINS, Wm. Nichols' heirs & Micah Towsley, to each of them an 80 Acre Lott. These persons were Esteemed by this Com'tee to deserve the next Regard to Brooks and Danl Hubbard of any that had single Grants and they all seemd to be well satisfied with the settlement made."

In February, 1730-1, JOHN STEBBINS and others petitioned the General Court, asking that they might be quieted in the possession of their original grants at Brimfield. After numerous petitions and remonstrances, which were signed by both JOHN and THOMAS STEBBINS, the matter was finally settled, and at the first town meeting of Brimfield, which was held March 16, 1730-1, "JOHN STEBBENS [was] Choose a selectman for said town of Brimfield"; and it was also "voted that JOHN STEBBENS be town trausor for the said town of Brimfield". At the second town meeting of Brimfield, held May 4, 1731, "First JOHN STEBBINS chosen moderator for the day". "Secondly Voted that three men be choose to goe to the General Court to manage affairs there for the town of Brimfield".

"Thirdly JOHN STEBBINS choose to goe to the Court for one of the men to manage the affairs".

At a town meeting held November 9, 1731, it was "1stly Voted that consern of the nails to finish the meeting house which the Court ordered Capt Colton to provid according to the Court be left with the selectmen of Brimfield chose for the year 1731 to manage that affare and see that the nails are provided 2dly Voted That the floor of the meeting house be laid and the body of seats be maid and also the gice [joists] of the gallarys put in as soon as may be and also bords to lay on the gice be procured and also matereals sutable to make the pulpit bords and slet worke sutable for the same.

3dly Voted that Mr John Russell, THOMAS STABBINS Henery Burt be a committee to over see the work that it be done according to the vote of the town of Brimfield concerning the meeting house".

THOMAS STEBBINS was a partner in the Land Bank of 1740. His name is found in the list of 920 names of subscribers, February 29, 1739-40, with the amount of assessments in cash; [Mass. Archives 102 p. 44]; in the Bristol Registry returns January 27, 1741; in "List of Partners who paid their Assessments"; in "Alphabetical list of Bank Subscribers"; and in "The News Letter" November 15, 1744. The Land Bank was an organization which attempted to issue currency based on real estate, but the scheme was suppressed.

Just before sunset, on July 14, 1698, a party of four Indians suddenly appeared in the upper side of Hatfield North Meadow, and fired upon a number of men and boys who were busy hilling corn. They killed two, and two boys were taken prisoners. The Indians then took to their canoes, which had been concealed nearby, and started up the river with the captives.

The news of this outrage was carried to Deerfield "early in the night", just as a band of troopers, weary and worn from a two days' scout in the woods, were coming in for rest and refreshment. Snatching a hasty meal, and mounting fresh horses, three of these scouts—Corporal Benjamin Wright, BENJAMIN STEBBINS, and Jonathan Taylor—together with Thomas Wells, Benoni Moore, Ebenezer Stebbins, Nathaniel Pomeroy, dragoons, and several garrison soldiers, started for the north, with the intention of intercepting the Indians. Before dawn, after a ride of twenty miles through the woods, the rescuers reached the Great bend, opposite the mouth of the Ashuelet river. Here they halted and concealed their horses. In the early dawn they discovered two canoes in the distance, rapidly ascending along the eastern bank. Selecting a position on some broken land close to the water, they waited till the canoes appeared above the island, and opposite where they stood, when, taking careful aim, they fired. One of the Indians was mortally wounded; but with the other three and one of the lads, he leaped into the stream and made for the shore. One lad remained in the canoe, and the other quickly turned to rejoin him. An Indian, noticing the movement, attempted to shoot him; but his gun missed fire, and he rushed upon the boy with uplifted hatchet. In this act he exposed himself so that he received a mortal shot from the party on the west bank. The boys, both unhurt, quickly paddled across to their deliverers. This was known as the "Pomeroy pursuit" and BENJAMIN STEBBINS was one of the guards who accompanied Joseph Hawley and Joseph Parsons to Albany to give a particular account of it to the General Court.

BENJAMIN STEBBINS was chosen "Surveior for the high wayes" on March 9, 1702-3, and was chosen to fill the same office, March 10, 1718-19, and March 14, 1726-7.

On the petition of BENJAMIN STEBBINS, about 1713-4, for the grant of a saw-mill privilege, he was given "a Liberty of the Stream at the foot of the mountain in the old Cart Road for A Saw mill (that is the Towne Right)". This location was at Pascommuck, on the brook at the base of Mt. Tom, west of that mountain. The significance of this grant lies in the conditions attached to it, viz:

Trum-

"(1) that he shall take no partners out of the Towne. 2. that he shall not damnifie the Road or highway, that some times is Ocationally used. 3. that he shall sell bords to Any of the Inhabitants of this Towne for their own use shall bee at twenty Shilling per Thousand for the time of four years from the time the mill was first set up". MR. STEBBINS accepted the grant with these conditions; and, in 1714, sold one-half of the right to Joseph Parsons, they agreeing to build the mill that spring. The mill was erected on Broad Brook, a short distance from the main road, and was in use for many years.

BENJAMIN STEBBINS was chosen "fence viewer and ffield driver", on March 13, 1715-16, and was again chosen for the same office on January 3, 1720-1. He held the office of tithingman in 1722-3, 1731-2, and 1733-4.

In 1728, he bought one hundred acres of land, of Lamb & Company, in what was known as "The Elbow Tract", now Palmer, Massachusetts; but it seems that he never took possession. This may have been on account of the defective title of Lamb & Company to the land. The committee appointed by General Court, November 28, 1732, to adjust matters, decided "That Peter Backus Hold the Hundred acre Lot only that was formerly laid out to BENJAMIN STEBBINS".

Now Joseph Williston guardian to John Williston Apl. 9 1734 comes into court and represents that sd John Williston a minor & of the half blood and prays that he be considered equally entitled with the sister to the estate of the deceased, Ichabod Bliss the husband of Mehatable appeared, and both parties support and probably her husband Joseph Williston being fully heard altho the Law of the Province doth not determine who are next of kin in equal degree, yet by the common Law which determined that Brothers of the half blood are of kin in equal degree with Brothers and Sisters of the whole blood (when a man died intestate leaving neither wife nor child, the estate real & personal shall be distributed to next of kin) But now the Court decree that said John Williston brother of the half blood to the sd intestate is an heir equally intitled and be so divided with him & the sisters of the whole Blood.

Therefore Oct. 8, 1734 Ichabod Bliss & Mehatable Bliss entered their appeal to Gov'r & Council.

Dec. 12, 1734 the above appeal was made and the parties heard order that the decree of the Judge of Probate be confirmed and that John Williston be equal with the sisters of the whole Blood.

BENJAMIN STEBBINS bought the old Bascom homestead in Northampton, Massachusetts, on March 18, 1718-19.

"In the next place is an a Count of the divideing of that tear of lots on the west side of the high way or street And Number begins from 1 and the first lot is bounded by Sam'll Ball Southerly and is in width twenty Rods &

In length Eighty Rods And is to BENJAMIN STEBBINS Quantity ten acres and Then a high way twenty Rods wide." This "a Count" bears date of "Jan'y ye 21 1720-21".

He removed from Northampton, to Belchertown, Massachusetts, in 1727, and is said to have been the first person to make a permanent residence in that place. He received from Governor Belcher, five hundred acres of land, as an inducement for him to settle there, and he spent the remainder of his life on this grant. Portions of the house which he built there are still standing. It was occupied successively by his son, Captain Gideon Stebbins, his grandson, Colonel Zenas Stebbins, and his greatgrandson, Ely Warriner Stebbins. When the latter died he left it in possession of his family.

In 1733 BENJAMIN STEBBINS sold to Samuel Bascom, two hundred acres of land in Cold Spring, now Belchertown.

p. 458. On December 11, 1728, in an account of "what was promised to be lent unto ye town and by whom", we find that JOHN STEBBINS loaned five pounds.

p. 505. In 1743 another division of land was made. The tract divided covers Petty's Plain and Wisdom above the meadows, and Hoosac to the Long Hill wood lots, and is described on the records as "all the ungranted and undivided Land lying between the Division of Land up the Long Hill on the South, and the west line of the Seven Miles Square on the West, and the Divided and Granted Lands on the Green River on ye North, and on the Divided and Granted land, and on ye Country Road on ye East". In this division, JOHN STEBBINS received No. 22, containing seventy-five acres, and No. 11, containing ninety-three acres.

JACQUES DESNOIONS, a bushranger, discontented with his government and seeking a new home, went to Deerfield, Massachusetts. That he was thirty-six years old and unmarried, favors the theory that he had led a roving life. Flattered by the preference of the stranger, a man so much older than himself, ABIGAIL STEBBINS, the sober-minded Puritan girl was attracted by the gay carelessness of such a character. His vivacity and intelligence, his ardent temperament, his reckless courage, his songs and tales of wild adventure, captivated her, and under promise that "her people should be his people, her God his God," she married him. Suddenly, in a most unexpected manner, JACQUES DESNOIONS was restored to his native land. Perhaps his presence on that fateful night of the Deerfield Massacre, Feb. 29, 1704, saved his wife's whole family from the tomahawk.

JACQUES DESNOIONS, (or "JAMES DENYO", according to the record of his marriage in Deerfield to "ABIGAIL STEBBINS") and his bride, with her father, mother, brothers, and sisters, were captured and taken to Canada.

On a blustering March day in 1704, at the dispersion of the captives at Montreal, JACQUES and his young bride wended their way to his old home at Boucherville. John Stebbins, his wife, Dorothy, and their sons, John and Samuel, returned to Deerfield. ABIGAIL and her husband, her sister Thank- full, and her brothers Ebenezer and Joseph, remained in Canada.

On his return to Boucherville, JACQUES probably found his mother and her three youngest children living on the old spot. The surprise with which the family greeted the returned outlaw, with his English bride and her relatives, can well be imagined.

Though we may object to the methods of Father Meriel, we cannot but admire his persistent efforts to save the souls of those whom he regarded as heretics. According to his light, he befriended the captives and there can be no doubt of his sincerity. His unflagging zeal met with success, as is shown by the following record on the Baptismal Register.

"On Monday, the 28th of May, 1708, the rites of baptism have been administered by me the undersigned Priest, to an English woman, named in her own country ABIGAIL STEBBENS, who was born at Dearfield in New England, the 4th of January 1684 (N. S.) of the marriage of John Stebbins an inhabitant of that place, and Dorothy Alexander, both Independents, having been baptised by the minister of that place some years after and married the 14th of February 1704 to JACQUES DESNOIONS now Sergeant of Mr. de Tonti's company, came with him to Canada, towards the end of the following March, and lives with him at Boucherville. Her name of ABIGAIL has been changed to that of MARGUERITE. She has had for her godfather the High and Mighty Seigneur Philippe de Riguad, Marquis de Poor ABIGAIL seems to have given out, overpowered by the presence of the haughty Governor-General.

"Both Independents"! how it stirs the dissenting blood in one's veins to read this of old John Stebbins and his wife Dorothy. Here we have for the first time the real name and occupation of ABIGAIL'S husband, JACQUES DESNOIONS,—“now Sergeant in Mr. de Tonti's Company”. It is noticeable that ABIGAIL STEBBINS is not spoken of as the others have been, as “captured Feb. 29th, 1704 and brought to Canada”, but as having “come with her husband to Canada” and living with him in Boucherville.

On the parish records of the church of Sainte-Famille at Boucherville, Father de la Saudray, on the 28th of December, 1704, baptized “Rene de Noyons born the 26th of the same month, son of JACQUES de NOYONS and GABRIELLE STEBBINS, his wife, living in this parish.”

In Gabrielle we recognize an attempt to construe in French the name of ABIGAIL.

Before the birth of their son Francois, who was baptised July 7, 1710, JACQUES DESNOIONS had removed his family to the Cote St. Joseph, another part of the parish of Boucherville.

It is supposed that JACQUES and ABIGAIL heard at intervals from their son, Rene, and that he informed his mother of the death of his grandfather, with whom he had been living. After her father's death, she accompanied her brother Samuel, to Deerfield. It was certainly no mercenary motive that led her to undertake such a journey under the circumstances. But her heart yearned for the boy from whom she had been separated for years. She longed to revisit the home of her childhood and to see her old mother once more before she died. How or when the journey was performed, how long the visit lasted, and what was her escort on her return to Canada, is not known, except that in Deerfield, on the 27th of Feb., 1726, her thirteenth and last child was born.

RENE DESNOIONS, when about ten years of age, was sent with a party of French and Indian traders, to visit his grandparents in Deerfield. His grandfather Stebbins induced him to stay, and, when the hunters were ready to go back, RENE could not be found. Not understanding the boy's pronunciation of his name, or wishing him to bear a more godly appellation, his grandfather called him AARON, so RENE DESNOIONS grew up in Deerfield as AARON DENIO, and became the founder of the Denio family of New England. He became a noted tavern keeper in Greenfield, was prominent in public affairs, and in later years was a soldier.

BENJAMIN STEBBINS was one of the earliest settlers of Ridgefield, Connecticut, and in 1770 was its Representative to the General Assembly.

He built and resided in the house which in 1896 was standing on an eminence at the head of the village. From this house he witnessed the repulse of the British, by Benedict Arnold and his men.

The STEBBINS house was one of the oldest in the town, having been built in 1733, soon after the settlement was made. Its withered boards and shingles, dun and weather-stained by the sunshine and frosts of innumerable seasons, shaded by lofty trees and overhanging vines, spoke of times now almost forgotten and of vague traditions of the past. Here it was that on April 27, 1777, Arnold awaited the enemy's approach, fearless and undaunted, although the odds against him were overwhelming. The following graphic account of the repulse will be found interesting:

"On arriving at Ridgefield, Arnold hastily constructed a barricade of wagons, logs, and carts, across the village street, at its upper end, between the residence of BENJAMIN STEBBINS and a large ledge of rocks to the west of the road.

There was little military organization in a force gathered so hastily from different directions, save in the obedience to a superior's orders. The greater portion of those who stood behind the barricade were unused to war; and had gone out to save their homes from destruction rather than to do battle with an enemy.

The fight at the STEBBINS house was stubborn and bloody. Between forty and fifty Americans were killed. Several of the dead were buried beneath the apple tree, since decayed, back of the house, which afterwards became the residence of Mr. Abner Gilbert. At the time of the attack Benjamin Stebbins occupied the Stebbins house. He was a cripple and could not get away. His son, Josiah, sympathized with the Royalist cause; and happened to accompany the British on their march from Danbury. Several times during the fight the old house was set on fire, but the son succeeded in quenching the flames. His aged and crippled father had a narrow escape. In the midst of the conflict he sought seclusion in a little bedroom with a window looking out on the meadow to the east. He had been told that the British were on their way from Danbury, and that he must flee for his life. To this entreaty he replied: "No, not one step! I am too old to fight, or I would be at them; but I will never leave this chair, and if they want to kill me, they can do it here." The window was open. The bullets of the enemy penetrated the house, passing through inner doors and partitions. All at once a musket ball whizzed close to his head, splintering the chair where the sturdy old patriot sat, and ripping a long ragged hole through the bedroom door. Fortunately he was not injured. During the battle, the house was used as a hospital for the wounded, and stains of blood that flowed from the wounds of a young British officer, who died there, are still visible on the seasoned oak floor of the long west room.

The old well now stands at it then stood, and supplies the best of water, as it did on that April day, to the suffering men who lay in agony within reach of its kindly aid.

"At a General Assembly of the Governor and Company of his Majesty's English Colony of Connecticut in New England in America holden at New Haven (by special order of the Governor of said Colony) on Wednesday the 8th day of March and continued by several adjournments till the 24th day of the same month, Annoque Domini, 1758. This Assembly do nominate and appoint Isaac Isaacs Captain, Thaddeus Mead 1st Lieutenant, JOSIAH STEBBINS 2 Lieutenant, William Seymour Esq., of the 8th company." In March, 1759, JOSIAH STEBBINS was appointed first Lieutenant of the third company, by the General Assembly; and was reappointed to this office in 1760. March 4, 1762 the General Assembly appointed him first Lieutenant of the twelfth company in the second regiment.

Elizabeth Wright Abigail Bartlett Sarah

daughter of Thomas Stebbins and Elizabeth Wright, was born October 31, 1685, at Northampton, Massachusetts; died October 25, 1755, at Northampton, Massachusetts; married December 16, 1702 (T. R.), at Northampton, Massachusetts, to WILLIAM WAIT, born August, 1682, at Northampton, 397. VIII. Elizabeth, born October 8, 1736; married General Ebenezer Walbridge.+

 398. IX. Elisha, born March 16, 1743; married Martha Wright.+

JOSEPH STEBBINS first settled in Deerfield, Massachusetts; but in 1726 he bought the William Clarke lot (19 rods 11 feet wide), in Northfield, and resided there the remainder of his life. He was one of the leading opponents of Mr. Doolittle, in the church controversy in 1736-7. His name appears in the "Acc't of Work done at Dea. Alexander's mount", and he is credited with the following:

"JOSEPH STEBBINS—1 day hand and team..... £1. 6. 0
 " " " 1 day..... 0. 8. 0."

In the spring of 1750, he built a log house on his lot near Ashuelot, the house standing eighty rods south of Stebbins' island, which remained in the family for several generations. His name appears in the "list of proprietors in the fourth division of all the resident land owners and taxpayers in 1751, and the relative valuation of each", at which time he owned one hundred and eighty-nine acres of land.

At the first meeting of the inhabitants, September 25, 1753, "JOSEPH STEBBINS JR. was appointed by the charter as surveyor and on the committee to lot out the land".

On the alarm of the Indians, on the 1st of September, 1753, CAPTAIN JOSEPH STEBBINS and his family resorted to the stockade around the house of John Evans.

JOSEPH STEBBINS built his house, in 1763, on the west side of the river (in what is now Vernon), covering it with rived clap-boards, which were split from oak bolts, or cuts, and five to seven feet long, eight to ten inches wide, and about one and one-half inches thick on the back. They were laid lapping, and made a durable and tolerably tight covering. The thatch used in covering the roof was nothing more than the native grass which grew in the meadow.

Clary's Island, now known as Stebbins' Island, contains thirty acres; and is situated below the great bend, and about one-fourth of a mile above the mouth of the Ashuelot. For several generations it has belonged to CAPTAIN JOSEPH STEBBINS and his descendants.

In the friendly trials of prowess and strength between the reds and the white men, CAPTAIN STEBBINS proved more than a match for his Indian rivals.

In the seating of the Meeting House, in 1780, the widow of JOSEPH STEBBINS was assigned pew number twenty-four.

SAMUEL STEBBINS removed from Longmeadow, Massachusetts, to Wilbraham in 1735, and settled on the mountain.

On May 7, 1740, he was one of the signers of the appointment of "Thomas Mirick 2d and Abel Bliss to Prefer a Petition to the General Court to be set off as a Precinct." [The appointment in full will be found in Wilbraham Centennial, page 202.]

At a town meeting December 14, 1741, the town "Voted and granted" to "SAM'L STEBBINS, JUNR, Three Shilling for keeping the Rever'nd Mr. Mirick's Mair Last Spring".

The first warrant for a precinct meeting was issued February 13, 1741, "upon application made by Nathaniel Bliss, 2d, SAM'L STEBBINS, JUNR., Samuel Wariner, 2d, Noah Alvard and Nathaniel Warriner", asking that they "Notifie the Freeholders and other inhabitants of said Precinct Quallified to voat in town affairs, that they meet and assemble together att the Dwelling House of David Mirick in said Precinct on the second Thursday of March next att one a clock afternoon". The meeting was held as specified in the warrant; and was organized by the choice of "William Pynchon, Esq., Moderator". At this meeting SAMUEL STEBBINS and two others were chosen assessors.

SAMUEL STEBBINS was one of the leaders in the business of the district; and served on different committees, one of which was to furnish material for building the Church in Wigwam Hill.

It appears that upon some miscarriage of SAMUEL STEBBINS, he and his wife Mary agreed to separate; he agreeing to give her £40 and "she to relinquish all right of dowry to residue of his Estate, also 3 acres of land in Munham Lot Bounded on the Mill River Northerly—on the Land of John Lyman Easterly and on Land which was SAMUEL STEBBINS Southerly and on the Land of William Miller Westerly To have and to hold during her natural life and after her decease to her son Samuel Stebbins".

The estate of SAMUEL STEBBINS was administered August 9, 1754. The inventory was taken May 22, 1754; and the estate settled September 10, 1764.

In the spring of 1741, STEPHEN STEBBINS left Longmeadow, Massachusetts, and going through the woods, settled on the north bank of the Scantic at Wilbraham, on the place where Mr. Orville Pease resided in 1864.

The house which he built was removed more than a century ago, and is used for a barn and shed on the place of the late Col. John McCray.

At a town meeting held January 7, 1762, it was "Voted that John Bliss, William King, Daniel Cadwell, STEPHEN STEBBINS and James Warriner be a Com'tee to apply to the Town for their Consent that we be set of a District or Town". On March 22nd of the same year he was a member of a committee appointed to "Apply to the Town and General Court, if need be, to see if they will sett of this Precinct a separate Town or District". Again, on January 3, 1763, it was voted "that Dea'n Nathaniel Warriner, L'tt Thos Mirick and STEPHEN STEBBINS be a Com'tee in behalf of the Precinct to Apply to the Town of Springfield for their Consent to be Sett of a Separate Town or District, & that they be fully Impowerd to Persue our Petition to the General Court in Ord'r to be Sett of afores'd." This committee met with success in their mission; and the Act of Incorporation of Wilbraham was signed by the Governor of the Province, on June 15, 1763.

The first record of a road being laid out in Springfield, in the territory of Wilbraham, was made in March, 1744. A change was made in the "West Road" from STEPHEN STEBBINS' south, over the Scantic, also from STEBBINS' east to the Brimfield line (Monson being included in Brimfield at that time), about as it now runs; also from Brimfield line on the overplus land, in the second division, to the middle road, "Provided the Same or Either of them or any Part of them do not Prove Chargeable to the town".

The first warrant for a town meeting was issued by John Worthington, Esq., of Springfield, to STEPHEN STEBBINS of Wilbraham, Yeoman, bearing date August 8, 1763, requiring him to "warn the Inhabitants of Said Town of Wilbraham Quallified by Law to Vote in Town affairs that [they] meet and Assemble together at the Meeting House in Sd Wilbraham on Thursday the Twenty-first Day of Aug't Currant At one of the Clock in the afternoon Then and there to Choose a Moderator to preside and Conduct the Said Meeting and then to Choose all such Town Officers as may be Necessary to manage the affairs of Said Town and Towns in this Province are by Law Oblige to Choose". STEPHEN STEBBINS did not fail to "warn" the people, nor were the people slow to obey the summons. They "assembled and met together" August 25, 1763.

tives respecting the Covenant [Non-Consumption Pledge] Sent from Boston". In the subscription list for the Soldiers' Bounty [1779] is found the name of MOSES STEBBINS, who subscribed thirty-nine dollars. On December 9, 1776, MOSES STEBBINS and two others were chosen a "Com'ttee to wait on Mr. Miriek with a copy of the Last Grant made him of his Sallary and see if he will accept and be content therewith and Give a Discharge from any further Clame on the Town by way of Sallary and make a Reporte at some future meeting". [See Appendix.] MOSES STEBBINS was one of the signers of the "Non-Consumption Pledge". [See Appendix B.]

MOSES STEBBINS settled on the east side of the mountain [at Hampden, Massachusetts], where Mrs. Beriah Smith afterwards resided, and was among the pioneer school teachers of Hampden County.

His son GAIUS STEBBINS served in Rhode Island in 1779 under Captain Joshua L. Woodbridge, in Colonel Tyler's regiment, in the Continental Army. His name appears in a list of "Six Months' Soldiers belonging to the town of Wilbraham, that served in the Continental Army of the United States of America in the year 1780". son of Samuel Stebbins and Hannah Hitchcock, was born Jan. 28, 1722, at Springfield, Mass.; died about 1775 in New Jersey; married May 1, 1755, at Farmington, Conn., to SARAH NORTON of Kensington, Conn., born 1738; died Feb. 18, 1764, at Kensington, Conn. Resided at Kensington, Conn.

CHILDREN:

485. I. Eleanor, born Aug. 3, 1756; died May 4, 1771.
 486. II. Samuel, born Aug. 9, 1758; married Sarah Boardman. +
 487. III. Persis, born Nov. 27, 1760; married Rev. Nathaniel Gaylord of Hartland, Conn.

LUKE STEBBINS, in the early part of his life, lived in Boston, Massachusetts, where he followed the occupation of a store-keeper. From there he removed to Kensington, Connecticut, and opened up a store; afterwards going from there to Middletown, Connecticut, where he kept a tavern. Failing in business, he turned his attention to other things, and became a school master. He collected and published an account of the descendants of his father, down to September 19, 1771; the total number of births being one hundred and thirty-eight. This is said to have been the first genealogy published in the United States. The title-page is as follows: "A Genealogy of the Family of Mr. Samuel Stebbins and Mrs. Hannah Stebbins, his Wife, From the Year 1707, To the Year 1771, With their Names, Time of their Births, Marriages and Deaths of those that are deceased".

A letter written by LUKE STEBBINS in his nineteenth year was found many years afterwards in the old Hale house in Longmeadow, which shows the trend of his thoughts at that period of his life. It was addressed "For Miss Liddia Hale att Longmeadow Mass", and dated "April 18, 1741". We give a verbatim copy, viz.:

"Dear Friend. If I may So Speak — — —

Having had oppertunity frequently to See you (which I have Reason to Be thankfull for) I han't any thing that is Remarkable to Say to you but now Instead of Coming to See you, I Employ a few Redeem'd moments to write and alas it is Enough to tell you I walk dayly under the load of unpardoned Sin and the Incensst wrath of almighty god, which Indeed is Enough to Sink a poor mortal very Low — —

I may tell you I've Been very much in Eternity for many days past which Indeed makes me Sit little by the woarld, but Don't make me hate Sin.—

I've been brought near to Dispair — O! I've Backslidden A while ago I could Rejoice at the Conversion of any person, and Seem'd to love good folks &c and I concev'd I was come to a pretty good pass, for it all Seem'd to help me. but O! I've greiv'd the Spirit of god and Seem to be very Dull in matters of Importance to what I was — — and I have got a wilderness to go through and If god will Indeed lead me in the path of truth then praised be his name. but I remember that but two of the Children of Israel that had got So near, Ever went in to the land of Canaan, which may truly make me fear and lie Low before God, that it may not be my unhappy Case.

my actual Sins are very Great, but yet the Sin of my Nature is much more. I've the very Nature of the Devil in me, and tis hope in gods mercy keeps me from Being his proclaimed Enemy which may well make one Tremble.

I Desire your Earnest prayers att the throne of Grace that I may now turn to god with all my heart and that I may have no Rest till I Shall know that Christ is found within me Indeed and of a truth.

LUKE STEBBINS."

"The HONORABLE

Seal

HENRY GARDNER, ESQ.;

Treasurer and Receiver-General of said Commonwealth,
To EZRA STEBBINS Constable or Collector of Springfield.
Greeting, &c.

By Virtue of an Act of the Great and General Court or Assembly of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, begun and held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on Wednesday the Thirtieth Day of May, A. D. 1781 and continued by Adjournment to the Twelfth Day of September following, entitled, "An Act for apportioning and assessing a Tax of Three Hundred and Three Thousand Six Hundred and Thirty-four Pounds and Six Pence."

"These are in the Name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to will and require you to collect all and every the Sums of Money mentioned in the List or Lists of the Tax or Assessment or your Town, District, Parish or other Place, made by the Assessors or Selectmen of the said Town, District, Parish, or other Place, and committed to you to collect; amounting in the Whole to the Sum of Six Hundred Pounds 14/3 3/4 (£600. 14. 33/4) In the Manner following: That is to say.—To collect the Whole of each respective Sum assessed on Each particular Person, set down in the said List or Lists, so that you duly pay me Moiety of the said List or Lists, unto Myself or Successor in Office, on or before the Fifteenth Day of January next, and make up and issue your Accompts of the Whole thereof, with Myself, Treasurer and Receiver-General of this Commonwealth, or my Successor in Office, on or before the Fifteenth Day of April next. And in Case any Person or Persons shall refuse or neglect to pay the several sum or sums whereat he or they are set in the Assessment and to pay the same upon Demand made, it shall and may be Lawful for you, and you are hereby authorised and required, for Non-payment, to destrein the Person or Persons, so refusing or neglecting, by his or their Goods or Chattles; and the Distress or Distresses so taken, to keep for the Space of Four Days, at the Cost and Charges of the Owner thereof: and if the Owner does not pay the Sum or Sums of Money so assessed upon him, within the said Four Days, then the said Distress or Distresses to be forthwith openly sold at an Outcry by you, for the Payment of the said Money. Notice of such Sale being posted up in some public Place in the same Town, District, Parish or other Place, Twenty four Hours beforehand; and the Overplus coming by said Sale (if any there be) over and above the Charges of taking and keeping the Distress or Distresses, to be immediately restored to the Owner, And if any Person or Persons assessed as aforesaid, shall refuse or neglect to pay the Sum or Sums so assessed, by the Space of Twelve Days after the Demand thereof, where no sufficient Distress can or may be found, whereby the same may be levied; in every such Case, you are to apply yourself unto two or more of the Assessors within your Town, District, Parish or other Place, for Warrant to Commit such Person or Persons to the common Goal, as the Law directs. And where any Person or Persons shall remove from your Town, not having paid the respective Sums or Proportions set upon him or them in said Tax or Assessment, you are hereby authorised and empowered to demand the Sum or Sums assessed upon such Person or Persons, in what Town or Place soever he or they may be found within this Commonwealth; and upon Refusal or Neglect to pay the same, to detain the said Person or Persons by his or their Goods or Chattles as aforesaid: And for want of such Distress, to commit the Party to the common Goal, there to remain until Payment be made of the Sum or Sums so set upon him, with all Charges arising by Reason of such Commitment. And where no Person appears to discharge the Taxes on Non-resident Proprietors unimproved Land, you will publish in Willis's Independent Chronicle, and that only, three Weeks successively, the Names of all such Proprietors where they are known, with the Sum of the Taxes on the several Rights or Divisions, and post the same in the Town where the said Land lays, for the term of one Month; and if no Person shall appear thereupon to discharge said Taxes, in that Case you are to proceed to sell so much only of said unimproved Lands as will be sufficient to discharge said Taxes and intervening Charges, at Public Vendue, to the highest Bidder, giving legal Notice of the Time and Place and Manner of said Sale, excepting Lands belonging to Refugees; in which Case you will proceed according to the Resolutions of the General Assembly. And hereof you are to fail not, upon the Pains and Penalties as may in such Cases by Law be inflicted on you. Given under my Hand and Seal at Boston, the Fifteenth Day of December, One Thousand Seven Hundred and Eighty-one.

The stone which marks his grave in the old Springfield burying ground, bears the following inscription:

"In Memory of

ASAPH STEBBINS was a small man, and very active. He served in the French and Indian war, and was wounded by Indians near Ticonderoga. He served in Captain Taylor's army. He entered the Revolutionary war from Granby, Mass. Straying from camp one day, he was shot twice by Indians,—once in the thigh, and once through the elbow. They supposed him to be dead and left him. After rallying he made his way back near to his camp and hailed some of his comrades, who on recognizing his voice, went to his relief. He lived for several years after this, but was always lame.

CALEB STEBBINS evidently went to Wilbraham (then a part of Springfield) in 1739, as his descendants have several deeds of land in the "east road" bearing that date. In 1741 he located on the farm which was, in 1863, occupied by his grandsons, Jason and George. This property remained in the Stebbins family until the home farm was sold by Mrs. George Henry Stebbins in 1875. The adjoining farm, which is owned by Jason Stebbins, was originally a part of his homestead. In a history of Palmer, a town adjoining Wilbraham, there is a list of a company of minute men, including CALEB STEBBINS and several other names apparently belonging to Wilbraham, to which is appended the statement that twenty-one or twenty-two men of the company belonged to Palmer, indicating that the remainder came from other towns, presumably near by. This was Colonel John Worthington's company of minute men. The records in the office of the Secretary of Massachusetts show that CALEB STEBBINS was a sergeant, and was credited with £1. 13. 6, for which a warrant was advised June 14, 1757.

April 6, 1764, at a special meeting, it was "voted and Granted to CALEB STEBBINS of this Town and to Joseph Miller of Springfield [now Ludlow] Four acres of Land for the Priviledge or Convenianey of Erecting a Grist Mill on or near the South side of the North Ministry Lot in this Town on a Brook Called 12 mile Brook—upon condition that the said STEBBINS & Miller will Erect or cause to be Erected a good Grist Mill and keep (or cause to be kept) the Said mill in good Repair from the time of said mill being Buildded thence forward for the Space of 15 years on said Brook—and also upon Condition that the said STEBBINS & Miller will secure & save this Town from any & all Charges which may any way arise on account thereof During the Natural Life of the Revd Noah Mirick now Pastor of this Town—and also upon Condition that the said STEBBINS & Miller will give or pay or cause to be paid to this Town the Sum of Twenty four Shillings Lawful money at the Decease of the said Revd Noah Mirick—Upon the Said STEBBINS & Miller fullfilling the before mentioned Conditions the said 4 acres of Land is to be theirs forever but if not then the Said Land is to return to this Town again.

Attest Ezra Baker Town Clerk".

This mill was erected and was the first grist-mill in the town. To this he afterward added a saw-mill.

Rattlesnakes were common at that time, and while at work one day in the field CALEB STEBBINS and his dog were bitten by one. He was cared for in the generally accepted manner and recovered. The dog buried himself, digging a hole for the purpose, and after two or three days came out all right.

A school was sustained in the cellar of his house for some time, benches having been placed there for the accommodation of the pupils.

His name is found on a Non-Consumption Pledge in 1774. [See Appendix B.]

There was considerable discussion as to the location of the meeting-house. On October 28, 1745, it was "Voated to Build the Meeting House on the Hill Called Wigwam Hill", and "to Chuse some judicious men to advise us to some measure whereby we may Establish a Place where to Erect a Meeting House in this Precinet. It was "Voated that Mr. John Worthington, Mr. Francis Ball, and Mr. Timothy Nash be advisers in the affair aforesaid"; and CALEB STEBBINS is to "apply himself to said advisors in behalf of the Precinet". CALEB STEBBINS failed in his mission, or the committee either would not act or could not be assembled, or else they were merely an advisory committee, for, on November 4, 1745, a committee was chosen to "determine the Place or Spot on the Overplus Land on ye Middle Division, viewing the land at large, where the first Meeting House shall be erected."

In the burying ground at the Four Corners is a tablet bearing the following inscription:

The name of "JOSEPH STEBBINS Leut." is found on "A muster roll p. 568. of the company in His Majesty's Service under the command of Thos. Wells, Captain, viz., began the 23d of April, 1746".

In 1754 JOSEPH STEBBINS, who is then styled "cordwainer", purchased p. 622. lot No. 33 in Deerfield from Henry Phillips. The house on it was burned in 1799.

He was selectman of Deerfield in 1758, 1767, and 1782.

The town of Deerneld, in 1764, voted that "Lt David Field Messrs JOSEPH STEBBINS & John Sheldon be a Com'tee to take care of the Scow & to give liberty to Persons to use the Same up or down the River from the Road at Cheapside as they shall think reasonable—except on Mondays Fridays & Saturdays".

In 1768 he was a member of a committee having charge of the general repairs to the main building of the meeting house. In 1769 a subscription paper was drawn up for the purpose of raising money to shingle the meeting house, and JOSEPH STEBBINS subscribed twenty-four shillings "For promoting so laudable purpose", which was to be paid in "Cash, Wheat, or Rye, and have the same ready, if in Grain at the time the shingles are delivered in Deerfield; if in cash, when the shingling of the meeting house is completed". In the seating of the new meeting house in 1777-8 JOSEPH STEBBINS has pew No. 2. On June 8, 1778, JOSEPH STEBBINS, Senior, then sixty-three years old, was drafted to serve nine months in the Continental army, "or pay a fine of twenty pounds within twenty-four hours". The receipt of Captain Thomas Dickinson shows that the fine was paid. Three years later he was again assessed, as shown by the following receipt, dated 1781:

"Rec'd of JOSEPH STEBBINS Fourteen Hundred Eighty eight Pound old Continental in Part Pay to hire a man in the service for three years. Received by me Joseph Stebbins Jun." This amount would have been equal to $367,120 "Old Continental", at the rate at which it passed in 1780.

JOSEPH STEBBINS settled in what is now Vernon, Vermont, about 1740. He bought a large farm of excellent meadow and plain, from the Merrimans on May 21, 1749, the deed of which is the oldest deed recorded by John Bridgman, first Town Clerk of Vernon (or Hinsdale), County of Cumberland, Province of New York. (Re-recorded March 16, 1799, in Book I, page 128, the Town Records of Vernon having been destroyed by fire June 11, 1797.) The third oldest deed was dated the "26th year of his Majesty's reign (George 2d)", and was from Titus Belding to JOSEPH STEBBINS, Feb. 2, 1753. Hinsdale (now Vernon), on the west side of Connecticut River, was granted by charter of said Hinsdale Sept. 5, 1753, under the seal of the Province of New Hampshire to Fourteen Proprietors who lived within the Province of New Hampshire at the time said charter was given, viz: Ebenezer Hinsdale, Orlando Bridgman, Benoni Wright, Robert Cooper, Caleb Howe, Daniel Shattuck, John Sargent's Heirs, Peter Evans, Samuel Burr, John Evans, Hezekiah Elmore, JOSEPH STEBBINS, and Moses Belding, &c.

In the "Province rate of taxes" for the town of Hinsdale, in 1764, including pools, real estate and personal estate, JOSEPH STEBBINS was assessed three pence. Among the "Names of those who own Land on ye East side who live other towns (Persons that live out of the town of Hinsdale) who own land for which they are rated", appears the name of JOSEPH STEBBINS, who was then assessed three pence.

On August 20, 1756, CAPTAIN STEBBINS with two of his children—Tabitha and Elijah—and one or two men, were harvesting wheat upon his farm on the plain above the meadow, east of the house (occupied in 1872 by his grandson, John Stebbins.) Two Indians had discovered the reaping party, and lay in ambush among the thick alders in the hollow ten or twelve rods north of the house, watching them. Zebediah Stebbins [Hoyt in his history of Indian wars, is mistaken in Stebbins' Christian name, and the date of the month. Hoyt called it Zebulon. It was Zebediah. Hoyt's date was June 20th instead of August 20th, 1759], brother of CAPTAIN JOSEPH STEBBINS, and Reuben Wright came from Northfield, five miles distant, on horseback, and discovered the Indians in ambush. One of the men said, "Are they white men or Indians?" At that both Indians rose, fired, and wounded Wright in the arm, which bled profusely at first. The men fled up the path in the hollow south of the Stebbins' Cemetery. The Indians pursued with vigor, expecting no doubt that Wright would fall from his horse and they would obtain his scalp as a trophy of victory. The white men had but one gun, and after crossing Island Brook, about one hundred and twenty-five rods west of the conflict, Stebbins, requesting Wright to hold his horse, said he would return and endeavor to kill at least one of the Indians as they came up the brook. Accordingly he took his position, and as they came up the bank (history states he received another fire from them) he fired, when one of the Indians leaped up in the air and exclaimed "Ugh!" then fell prostrate to the ground.

Stebbins mounted his horse and the two proceeded on their way, crossing the river by swimming their horses, as was the custom in the Indian wars, to Fort Hinsdale, New Hampshire, built by Colonel Ebenezer Hinsdale in 1743, which was situated nearly opposite Fort Sartwell in Vernon.

The next day a party of men from the fort went and examined the ground and found blood in the road where the Indian had fallen. When the Indians fired on the two men on horseback it probably prevented CAPTAIN JOSEPH STEBBINS and his reaping party from being killed or captured by the Indians; for, on hearing the report of the guns they knew there was trouble near. The father seized Elijah, placed him on his back, ran across the meadow, re-crossed the river, and returned to a little fort, or fortified house, on the farm (owned in 1872 by Edward Stebbins), from whence the party had come.

On August 17, 1869, Mr. George M. Lee was digging up stumps and leveling the land on his farm in order to use a mowing machine, when in one place he plowed two furrows deep, struck a stone, and on taking it up found more under it. He then took his shovel and dug up three or four bushels of flat stones laid around in regular order in a circle about two feet in diameter, and beneath the stones was an Indian grave and some remains of a skeleton were to be seen, buried four or five feet deep, in a sitting posture. The grave on the south side was dug perpendicular, against which the back of the corpse was placed, facing north, as the form was still visible by the remaining marks. On the north side of the grave, which was small at the top, a hole was dug beneath the surface in a horizontal direction into which his feet and legs had been thrust. His bones were principally decayed, the thigh bones appearing like some old roots, but crumbled on being exposed to the air and touch. This grave was on nearly level ground (between Stebbins' and the County road), and forty rods south of Island Brook, from where Zebediah Stebbins had shot the Indian in 1756, one hundred and thirteen years previous to this discovery. There can be little doubt but that this was the grave and remains of the Indian that Mr. Stebbins killed at that time.

Resided at Northfield, Mass. Removed to Brattleboro, Vermont, in 1785.

ZEBEDIAH STEBBINS signed the "Petition of Proprietors and claimers of land in Northfield (afterwards known as Hinsdale) south of the Province line", on Aug. 29, 1753.

Notwithstanding the dangers and alarms in the year 1756, some of the farmers undertook to cultivate their out-lands. Joseph Stebbins put in crops on his newly broken lands, while his family lived at Evens' stockade across the river. On Aug. 20 ZEBEDIAH STEBBINS and Reuben Wright went up from Northfield to work on their lots near Stebbins' Island. Just as they started to return, they were assaulted by a small party of Indians in ambush. The leading facts of the encounter are given in the following letter, which was written the next day:

"Northfield Aug. 21 1756

To Maj. Williams, Deerfield,

Sir: As two of our Northfield men, viz: ZEBEDIAH STEBBINS and Reuben Wright, were returning from their labor last night about sun half an hour high, a little below Joseph Stebbins' Island, an Indian laying in the path 6 or 7 rods before them, fired and shot Wright through the right arm between the shoulder and elbow. They turned and rode back 3 or 4 foorre rods and halted, when the enemy immediately came up and fired a second gun at them. The men perceived that there were not more than 3 or 4 Indians; but still rode back a few rods and stopped to have the Indians come up (though they had but one gun). In a minute an Indian came in sight in the path, when STEBBINS fired, and the Indian fell and cried out. STEBBINS and Wright made off as fast as they could.

The Indians were after Joseph Stebbins, as 'tis supposed, who was at work at his house, and who saw 3 of the enemy follow our men. Some of our farmers had in too much haste got out to their homes; but we shall take warning and stand better on our guard.

Y'r humble serv't,

Seth Field."

Tradition adds some particulars to this official statement. Reuben Wright was a daring, go-ahead man, and noted as a furious rider. He would never break his horse from a gallop, even when he was lighting his pipe with flint and steel. His neighbor was just the reverse. But this morning STEBBINS was up first, and called for Wright before he was ready to start; and all the way up to the great bend was in a hurry, taking the lead. When they started near sundown to return, Wright took the lead, as was his habit, and received the Indian's fire. He had the only gun, and tried to return the fire, but could not raise the piece with his wounded arm. After the second shot STEBBINS took the gun, and after retreating some distance and out of sight of the enemy, both turned into the thicket. Presently the head of an Indian appeared over a swell in the road. The savage appeared to be looking for traces of blood, and was so intent that he did not raise his eyes till he received STEBBINS' ball in his breast, when he leaped into the air and fell backward. A pool of blood was found there next day.

p. 298.

The three Indians had been watching Joseph Stebbins, who with his two boys was taking up oats near his house. When he heard the first gun report he snatched up one of his lads, took him upon his back, ran to the river, and crossed just above Pomeroy's island to Evens' stockade. The other boy hid in the bushes. The Indians passed close to him, but did not detect his hiding place. He was almost dead with fright, so that when the party from across the river came to search for him, he could not move towards them, and when they called it was a long time before he could answer.

ZEBEDIAH STEBBINS was employed in the ranging service, the company being mustered Mar. 2, 1757.

In the "Province rate of taxes for the town of Hinsdale, 1764, including Polls, Real estate and Personal estate", we find: "ZEBADIAH STEBBINS 3d". In a list of the "Names of those who own Land on ye East side who live other Towns (Persons that live out of the Town of Hinsdale who own land for which they are rated)", ZEBEDIAH STEBBINS was taxed three pence.

At a town meeting Sept. 8, 1767, ZEBEDIAH STEBBINS was chosen one of a committee "To seat the meeting-house". He was a member of the Committee of Safety in 1778. In the seating of the meeting-house in 1780, ZEBEDIAH STEBBINS was assigned to a seat in pew No. 17.

THANKFUL GRAVES STEBBINS was received into the church of Northfield from the church at Greenfield, Nov. 2, 1760.

He was impressed out of the Northfield Foot Company about the first of October, 1756. At the time of the attack of the French and Indians on fort No. 4, which occurred on April 19, 1757, ASAHEL STEBBINS was away from home on a hunting expedition. From August 22 to November 4, 1757, he served in Captain Catlin's company at Pontoosuck. In an attack made upon Charlestown by the Indians on Aug. 27, 1758, ASAHEL STEBBINS was killed and his wife taken prisoner, leaving four children, the oldest but seven years of age. While on the march to Canada, MRS. STEBBINS became worn out by the hardships and privations of the journey, and was unable to travel. As she thus became an incumbrance to them, the Indians determined to burn her. She was fastened to the stake, and witnessed the preparations for the horrible ceremony. Heartbroken by her sorrows, and exhausted by her sufferings, the captive had found her trials almost too great for endurance. She had no hope of ultimate release. In full faith that the portals of eternal rest were about to open for her, she smiled upon her tormentors. The Indians, considering this an act of bravery and defiance, were filled with admiration that knew no bounds. She was at once released from her bonds, and was assisted and tenderly cared for during the remainder of the journey. Between September and December, 1758, she was redeemed and lived to a good old age. In 1875 some of her great-grandchildren erected a monument to her memory in the cemetery.

CYRUS STEBBINS received a bounty for two crows which he killed in 1772. His name appears on the Muster Roll of Captain Eldad Wright's Company of Minute Men that marched from Northfield and Warwick to Cambridge, April 20, 1775, in Colonel Samuel William's Regiment. He enlisted in Captain Merriman's company of five months men in July, 1776.

daughter of Samuel Stebbins and Mary Knowlton, was born Feb. 12, 1747, in the fourth precinct of Springfield (now Wilbraham), Mass.; died May 5, 1837, aged 90 years (or September, 1803), at Homer, N. Y.; married to ELISHA RUSS. She was married second, December, 1769, to OBED MERRICK, died Jan. 21, 1783 (?). She was married third, Apr. 26, 1770, to CAPTAIN CALEB KEEP, born Dec. 10, 1741, at Brimfield (now Monson), Mass., died Oct. 6, 1816, at Homer, N. Y., who was a son of John Keep and Abigail Munn.

CHILDREN, all born in Monson:

935. I. Mercy Keep, born Mar. 17, 1771; married June 21, 1795, Noah Hitchcock.
 936. II. Clarissa Keep, born Oct. 6, 1772; married Asa White.
 937. III. Gen. Martin Keep, born Dec. 20, 1774; married in 1799, Hepsibeth Hotchkiss.

His text was Luke VII, 31-35: "John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say He hath a devil. The Son of Man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a wine-bibber."

At a meeting held Nov. 3, 1806, a letter was received from MR. STEBBINS in which he asked for his dismissal from the pastoral office. He continued to preach at Simsbury a number of years after his dismissal, and acted for a time as Chaplain of the Old Newgate prison at Granby.

The first meeting house at Bloomfield must have been sadly dilapidated, and the people slow to realize it, for the Simsbury preacher, MR. STEBBINS, "a man intelligent, shrewd and sarcastic", was sent for to stir them up on the subject. His text on that occasion was, "Surely the fear of God is not in this place"; and this was one sentence in his discourse: "When you pass through a village and see the clapboards on the meeting house hanging dingle-dangle by one nail, you may be sure the love of God is not in that people."

Trumbull's
Hartford, Ct.
p. 33.

He assisted at the ordination of Mr. Moses Warren at Wilbraham, Mass.

MR. STEBBINS was a man of eminent ability and learning, and unusually sagacious and keen in matters of business. He was remarkable for his knowledge of human nature and his great wit; yet he was an earnest and sincere man and a faithful preacher. He was not only a pastor, but a business advisor for his people; and as a keen and shrewd business man his services were in constant demand in the settlement of estates, as commissioner or appraiser. In these offices, as well as that of arbiter of numerous neighborhood disputes, his neighbors reposed in him the utmost confidence.

He was a man of the most rigid economy, and at his death left a very considerable estate for those times. He was buried in Hop-Meadow burying ground, where his grave is marked by a plain marble headstone on which is the following inscription:

"REV. SAM'L STEBBINS

In 1771 the possessions of ENOS STEBBINS consisted of the following: one dwelling house and real estate valued at six pounds, one horse, two oxen, eight cows, six goats and sheep, three swine, two acres of pasture, and five acres of tillage. The grain, etc., raised yearly amounted to fifty bushels; and there were twelve acres of fresh meadow.

His name appears on the "Non-Consumption Pledge" in 1774. [See Appendix B.]

He was a soldier, and marched on the occasion of the Lexington Alarm April, 1775, as will be seen by the following: "Dec. 5th 1775. A Roll of Capt. James Warriner's Company of Wilbraham who marched in defence of Ammerican Liberty on ye Alarm last April occasioned by th Lexington Fight with ye number of officers & soldiers, time of serviece distance from home what due to each according to his character agreeable to a late Resolve of the great and Gen'll court of this Colony.

ELDAD STEBBINS was constable of Wilbraham, Mass., in 1776. There is a tradition preserved among the papers of Calvin Stebbins as follows:

The depreciation of paper money was such that Eldad Stebbins having lost an ox, took the town's money which was in his hands, and bought a pair of oxen for which he paid forty dollars; and before he was required to make his final settlement with the town treasurer, cider was selling for twelve dollars a mug, and three and one-third mugs of cider paid for the oxen.

He was one of those who signed a petition May 29, 1805, for the incorporation of the Methodist Episcopal Parish. [See Appendix D.]

When CAPTAIN STEBBINS was first chosen representative, very stringent instructions were given him, relating to the appropriation of money. p. 132.

On April 25, 1786, CAPTAIN PHINEAS STEBBINS and Mr. David Burt were chosen delegates to sit in a county convention at Hatfield. p. 129.

In 1787 the newly formed Constitution of the United States was offered to the several states for their acceptance or rejection, and CAPTAIN PHINEAS STEBBINS was chosen a delegate to sit in the convention to be "holden in Boston for the purpose of examining, and adopting or rejecting, this constitution". The people of Wilbraham were always jealous of bestowing power upon their rulers; and it was thought that the constitution took too much power from the State and gave it to the nation. This fear controlled CAPTAIN STEBBINS' vote, which was cast in the negative. p. 132.

CAPTAIN STEBBINS was a signer of the "Non-Consumption Pledge. [See Appendix A.] He also signed the Petition for Methodist Society in Wilbraham", which was referred to the Committee on Parishes, which reported January 31, 1795. The South Parish made answer June 12, 1795, by "John Bliss and PHINEAS STEBBINS, that the parish have made no objections against the prayer of the petition being granted". [See Appendix D.] p. 232. p. 250.

JAMES STEBBINS was, for several years, the only lawyer in Palmer, Massachusetts, being the successor of Daniel Shearer, Esq. In 1818 and 1820, he was elected representative to the General Court. His business afforded him a livelihood, and, when he removed to his native town, Springfield, he was possessed of an adequate fortune.

It appears that a story or a joke was enjoyed as much in those days as now. MR. STEBBINS was interested in managing a case in the county court and, being of a nervous temperament, he was not as quiet as he might have been, and the court requested him to be seated and assured him that he should have justice in his case. His reply was, "That is what I am afraid of."

JAMES STEBBINS was one of a committee chosen at a town meeting May 3, 1824, "to confer together and devise the best and most conciliatory measures to unite the people in the town, and for supplying the pulpit".

He was Justice of Court of Sessions, 1823-1828.

REV. STEPHEN WILLIAMS STEBBINS was graduated at Yale College in 1781 with the degree of M. A. In 1783 he was licensed to preach, by the East Haven Association, and was pastor of the church in Stratford for about twenty-nine years, having been ordained July 7, 1784. In May, 1806, he with the other proprietors of the Stratford Academy were made a corporate body. He was dismissed from the Stratford church, and, in 1815, installed as pastor of the church in West Haven. In 1811 he preached an Election Sermon, taking as his text Psalm XCVII. This sermon was published.

He preached the funeral sermon of Rev. Nathan Birdsey, at Stratford, January 28, 1818, from the text, "All the days of Methuselah were nine hundred and sixty-nine years, and he died."

On the Sunday following the erection of the new meeting house at Stratford, November 12, 1786, the congregation met in it in the forenoon for the purpose of public worship, which was conducted by REV. STEPHEN W. STEBBINS, who introduced the services by singing the CII Psalm, 2nd part. In the afternoon the services began at three o'clock and a sermon was delivered by MR. STEBBINS, on the subject of God's recording his name in his temple.

A pair of silk gloves were voted to REV. STEPHEN W. STEBBINS, in return for a "very ingenuous and pathetic discourse" in memory of a brother lost at sea.

STEPHEN WILLIAMS STEBBINS and Joseph Barker were friends and classmates in Yale College. Both fell in love with the same woman, Miss Eunice Street, a daughter of Rev. Nicholas Street, of East Haven. One told his love. The other did not. Mr. Barker on the eve of his graduation, gathered up his courage and told his love, which was accepted, their engagement to be followed by marriage when Mr. Barker should be a settled minister. After three years' study with Dr. Bellamy, he was pronounced "sound in Word and Doctrine" by an assembly of Divines, and soon after accepted a call to the First Congregational Church of Middleborough, Massachusetts, and was ordained in 1781. Soon after his ordination he went to Connecticut in a one-horse chaise to bring home his bride. On reaching East Haven he found his classmate in the Parson's Study, telling of his love for the Parson's daughter, and of his desire to wed her. Mr. Barker took his arm and together they sought the young lady, who said "although her heart belonged to MR. STEBBINS, if Mr. Barker wished, she would fulfill her engagement." Mr. Barker said he "wished no woman's hand without her heart," and, putting her hand in that of his friend, smilingly left them. On his way home he stopped at a brother minister's (Rev. Mr. Atwater) and there met Miss Eunice Stebbins, a sister of his classmate.

She at first felt that she couldn't meet him, as she thought her brother had not treated him well, but her cousin, Mrs. Atwater, insisted on the introduction, and they became so interested in each other that a correspondence was begun, and ended the next year by Mr. Barker's going again to Connecticut and returning with a wife, who was soon loved and respected by all in the big parish, and has ever been remembered as a "model for a minister's wife".

of War during the administration of John Q. Adams. In 1794 MR. STEBBINS was appointed a tutor in Yale College, and at the same time pursued his legal studies in the office of the Hon. Elihu Goodrich, of New Haven, one of the most eminent lawyers in Connecticut, and afterwards Professor of Jurisprudence in the college. He was admitted to practice in 1796, and at the same time retired from his situation as tutor.

He established himself in New Millford, Maine, which had been set off from Pownalboro in 1794, and afterwards, at his suggestion, the name was changed to Alna. The town contained, at the time MR. STEBBINS went there, but about six hundred inhabitants, and they after a period of fifty years, had increased only to nine hundred and sixteen, as shown by the census of 1850.

He was the only lawyer in the town for fifteen years, and here he pursued his professional studies with great assiduity and ability, acquiring an extensive practice and reputation. He was employed very much by the settlers, squatters, as they were called, who had entered upon unoccupied territory without title, and made themselves farms. These people, at the time of their entry, did not know who the proprietors were, and could find nobody who would give them a title. The whole territory was in dispute between numerous claimants, under a variety of titles, and the settlers were harassed and distracted by contradictory claims. MR. STEBBINS deeply sympathized with these tenants, secured their confidence, and managed their causes with great perseverance. p. 237.

In 1813 MR. STEBBINS was appointed Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for the second eastern circuit, as successor to Benjamin Ames of Bath. Nathan Weston, Jr., was chief justice, and Ebenezer Thatcher the other associate justice of this court. He held this office until the separation of the State, discharging its duties with ability and inflexible integrity. p. 239.

In 1816 he was chosen a member of the Executive Council of Massachusetts, and was annually re-elected as long as Maine continued united to the old commonwealth. In the same year he was appointed one of the electors of President and Vice President, his colleagues in Maine being Prentiss Mellen, John Low, Stephen Longfellow, William Abbott and Timothy Boutelle. The twenty electoral votes of Massachusetts were given to Rufus King, who received thirty-four votes out of two hundred and seventeen cast; the remainder were given to Mr. Monroe.

The same year, 1816, was also conspicuous in the life of JUDGE STEBBINS, as a member of the celebrated abortive convention at Brunswick, on the separation of Maine. The majority of that convention, it is well known, adopted the famous report of the committee for counting the votes of the people for and against separation. By the law a majority of five or four was required to carry that measure into effect. This majority was not obtained from the aggregate of votes, according to the usual construction of the language; but the committee resorted to a different method of counting the votes. The whole number cast was twenty-two thousand four hundred and sixty-six, five-ninths of which is twelve thousand four hundred and eighty-one; those in favor of separation were but eleven thousand nine hundred and twenty-seven. The committee, thus finding that the law was not complied with on this construction, assumed the construction of the act to be that the question must be decided according to the majorities of the respective towns. Thus, the corporate majorities of yeas must be placed in one column, and those of nays in another, and each added.

The election resulted in an aggregate majority of yeas in the towns and plantations in favor, of six thousand and thirty-one. The whole aggregate majority of nays in the towns and plantations, is four thousand four hundred and nine; then, as five is to four, so is six thousand and thirty-one to four thousand eight hundred and twenty-five, the nays required. Hence it appears that upon this construction there is a majority of five to four, at least of the votes returned in favor of said Districts becoming an independent State.

To this report and decision a large and highly respected portion of the convention took exception, and strenuously opposed it, but, being overborne by a majority, a protest against further proceeding was drawn up and signed by seventy-one members; and, on the 9th of October, JUDGE STEBBINS presented the protest, and moved to have it entered on the journals of the convention. The following are some of the leading points of the protest:

"We protest against a separation of Maine from the present government, by any means whatever, without the consent of the people. No such consent has been given." "We protest against a reference of this subject to the General Court for the purpose expressed in the resolution; because it is, in our estimation, a request to that honorable body to enact that which cannot be reconciled with constitutional principles nor actual fact." "We protest against the report on which the resolutions are predicated, as indecorous, as not expressed in terms suitable to the respect which this convention owes itself, nor to the honor due to the Legislature." The convention, notwithstanding the protest, went on appointing a committee to prepare a constitution, others to make application to the Legislature and to Congress, and another to answer the protest.

At the next session of the Legislature the proceedings of the convention were entirely discarded, and a resolution was adopted, "That it is not expedient for the present General Court to adopt any further measures in regard to the separation of the District of Maine."

p. 241.

The separation postponed at that time was accomplished in 1820, and in 1821 JUDGE STEBBINS' seat upon the bench was supplied by a friend of the separation. He returned to the practice of his profession, which he continued to the close of his life. In 1825 he was elected a Senator from Lincoln County, and re-elected the two subsequent years. In this situation his learning and experience were valuable. He made, during this period, several important reports, two of which were in favor of appropriations for the support of deaf and dumb pupils in the Hartford Asylum, and several elaborate reports on the subject of the State's Prison.

JUDGE STEBBINS was a better counsellor and legislator than a debater, although he often engaged in debate, and was a frequent advocate at the bar.

p. 242.

At the Lincoln bar he stood in the front rank. In the management of his cases he was true and faithful to his client, and permitted no part of his case to be lost by any fault of his. In private life he was a warm and affectionate friend to those who won and deserved his confidence. A friend of learning and learned institutions, he was one of the Overseers of Bowdoin College and afterwards a Trustee. He was distinguished for his affability, his inflexible integrity, and the purity of his moral character.

- 1197. IX. Josiah Stebbins Hitchcock, born June 28, 1816; married Carolina Haven.

JESSE HITCHCOCK lived in Brimfield, Massachusetts, where he was a carpenter and house-builder. In 1820, an association secured from him the right to build on his land a two-story conference hall for religious purposes; but, violating the conditions, the building, on the death of JESSE, reverted to his son Alfred, who sold it. It was removed to Fiskdale; and is now used as a shoe factory. JESSE, in 1780, served in the Revolutionary war. He was town treasurer of Brimfield, for three years.

JOTHAM STEBBINS went to Brookline, Vermont, when a lad twelve years old, to care for an aunt who had been left a widow in that wilderness country.

He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, entering the service when only fifteen years of age. He was a large boy for his age; and, at the time of his enlistment, weighed one hundred and eighty pounds. Being the youngest in his "mess", he was constituted cook. He served under Captain Browning and Colonel Howe. He also served under the traitor Arnold. When Arnold selected his men, JOTHAM STEBBINS was the third man taken. Not liking Arnold's looks, he slipped back into his old ranks. Arnold called him out the second time, and again, at a favorable moment, he returned. The third time Arnold sternly said, "You stay here", so he did not dare to go back again.

At times, while with Arnold, he suffered greatly from hunger; at one time having received no rations from the government for seven days. The only food he had during this time was "a white setting hen stolen from a Dutch woman." Once he, and a few companions, came upon a Tory killing a steer. They demanded some meat, but were refused. At last the Tory, after being threatened, threw them the liver of the animal. They hastily built a fire and put the liver over it to cook. They watched it eagerly until it just began to boil, when they could wait no longer, so took it from the fire and ate it—"the sweetest morsel they ever tasted".

At another time, they were encamped between two ponds, in which bull frogs were very numerous. One night the soldiers heard terrible noises of all descriptions. They were frightened, and thought that the world had come to an end. The name of one soldier was Hudang; that of another Elderkin. A voice outside was heard "Hudang. Hudang". He said, "Who told you that my name was Hudang?" Another voice was heard "Elderkin to," and Elderkin thought the roll was being called and that he must go.

It so happened that he was never brought into battle, for which he was always thankful, knowing for a certainty that he had never taken human life. When discharged, he was paid off in continental money, which became worthless before he reached home. In the latter part of his life he drew a pension of seventy-four dollars a year. [For additional Revolutionary service see Appendix B.]

He settled at Brookline, Windham County, Vermont, where he bought a farm with a mill privilege on it; and on this farm he spent the remainder of his life. In that heavy timbered country, he built a saw-mill; and worked the timber into building lumber. He served as Selectman of Brookline.

MR. STEBBINS was skilled in the use and making of medicine from roots, barks and herbs; but was not a regularly educated physician. He knew much of the Bible by heart; and always had an appropriate quotation from it. It is said that he "saw visions", and could foretell events—as he did the falling of the church at Brookline, Vermont, while it was being raised.

Times and circumstances afforded him very little opportunity for education; yet he was a well informed man, and an independent thinker. He was a very genial old gentleman; and lived in independent comfort and contentment. He was a prominent member of the Baptist Church, and led a consistent life.

JAIRUS STEBBINS was a self made man, having had very limited opportunities in his youth. When a young man, he took up land in the wilderness of northern Vermont. He soon returned to Middlefield, Massachusetts. After his marriage in 1806 he went to Westfield, Vermont, making the journey with one horse and a yoke of oxen. He bought land direct from Governor Owen, to whom it was chartered, and commenced pioneer farm life in the log house which he had built. He lived through all the hardships incident to the settlement of a new country, and earned the prosperity which he enjoyed throughout his life. He brought with him a gun of Revolutionary fame, being the one which his father, Bethuel Stebbins, had carried at Ticonderoga.

At one of the first religious services held in Westfield, sermons were read from an old volume, and Bethuel Stebbins, father of CAPT. JAIRUS STEBBINS, made the prayer.

By great industry MR. and MRS. STEBBINS became owners of one of the most pleasant homes in the town of Butternuts, situated one mile from the village of Gilbertsville, on Butternut creek. The large house stands on a decided rise of ground overlooking the village of Gilbertsville. The grounds are beautifully shaded by giant maple trees, and with its well-kept lawn, its numerous driveways, and a profusion of flowers, it makes a delightful home. The homestead is now owned and occupied by Mr. John Stebbins, grandson of JESSE STEBBINS.

PHEBE BISHOP STEBBINS was a most remarkable character, cast in a large mold, both mentally and physically. She was a staunch Universalist, their champion for years when its opponents were much more numerous and active than to-day. She was ever ready to defend her faith by argument. The clergy took advantage of that fact and were in the habit of visiting her, and engaging in good natured controversies on doctrinal points, their talks lasting sometimes a half day. Although uneducated, as the term is generally understood, she was a great reader, with a wonderful memory. Her chief delight was in History, Biography, and her Bible. It was said that she could recall and quote from memory, any passage the book contains, especially if it was needed to substantiate her argument. Always serene, cheerful and happy, she made others so. Her grandchildren were never more happy than when gathered about her knee—her theme the great love of God for them—The Redemption and ultimate Salvation of all mankind, as a result. The impress of her personality will not be entirely lost on her descendants for some generations to come. She was also a great spinner, weaver and knitter, often having seventy-five pairs of socks knit ahead.

POLLY STEBBINS PHELPS lived to the advanced age of ninety-seven years. She was a woman of uncommon intelligence and perseverance. When the state of Illinois was but little inhabited, she journeyed there alone, took up a claim, sent back for her family, and soon became prosperous.

would invariably tell them that he had none "ready," advising them to stay over night at the Major's, and get the leather in the morning. So, while the Major's pocket was being enriched to the extent of four and sixpence, the Captain dipped his hides in the brook, and in the morning weighed them out, dampness included. The Major's name will not be lost to sight as long as his elms, now over a century old, remain in sentinel row in the center of North Main street. The tavern has since been occupied by Thomas Bond and Horatio Sargeant. MAJOR STEBBINS was keeping a tavern, at the time of the Revolutionary war, and had at times a stock of rum and molasses in his cellar, the spoils of American privateers, which had to be secreted far from the coast to prevent seizure by the British. A paymaster in the Continental Army deposited several thousand dollars of paper money with MAJOR STEBBINS, until he could send for it, and went away. He was never heard from afterwards, much to the discomfiture of the Major, in having so large an amount of Government funds in his charge, though it afterwards became worthless. At one time during the Shays rebellion in 1787, the northern wing of the malcontents under Eli Parsons, with a force of four hundred men from Berkshire county, who had taken a position in the north part of the town (Chicopee), were in part quartered in this house. JOSEPH STEBBINS and his son Joseph the third and fourth of the name in the pedigree, were large dealers in beef cattle at Springfield. The "big ox", which, on some patriotic occasion previous to the revolution, was decorated with ribbons and flags, and after being paraded through the streets of Boston, was roasted whole, in the presence of thousands of spectators, is supposed to have been fatted in their stalls. At the time of Arnold's expedition to Canada, it became necessary to procure specie, in order to purchase provision for the troops, after entering the British territory. Agents were sent from Boston to procure it, and among other places they visited Springfield, where resided the two JOSEPH STEBBINSES, father and son. These persons probably handled more hard money in the purchase and sale of cattle, than any other two individuals in western Massachusetts. Their patriotism was not appealed to in vain. One thousand dollars in specie was taken from the "old oaken chest" at the foot of the bed, and the same amount of Continental money deposited in its place. The money soon depreciated in value, until it became almost worthless. They had the consciousness, however, of having assisted their country in its hour of need. Had the two Josephs not been men of substance, their business would have been ruined. MAJOR STEBBINS was a man of intellectual power and acquirements.

my Sons Daniel Festus & Quartus) are in trade together at South Hadley having equal sums in stock the one Half of the profits that shall arise from said trade & traffic (in company) is to be said Ralphs & the other half of said profits to be equally divided between me & Joseph & my sons aforesaid— & as I JOSEPH & my sons aforesaid agree to be joint partners in the Business of Farming—Tanning—Merchandising—or any other business that shall be thought most lucrative & beneficial to us & families so we also agree to be joint shares in all the profits or losses that shall arise from the partnership so subsisting & we jointly & severally agree to use all honest & Lawful Means in our several copartners to increase the family property so long as we shall be in partnership—we & our families which we now have or shall have which in partnership are to be furnished with all necessary Supplies of provision & clothing &c by our several employments without any charge being made to us in particular—at such time as the above partnership shall be dissolved—I Daniel Stebbins agree to the sum of one Hundred Pounds be deducted from my share to be divided between my Father JOSEPH & Brothers, Festus & Quartus (in the same proportion as the whole Estate is divided) to compensate them for what Expense Extraordinary they have been at in my Education &c.—which sum we JOSEPH Festus & Quartus agree to accept of at said time—as a full Entire & adequate compensation for the Expense Extraordinary we have been at in Said Daniels Education &c meaning his Education at College—instruction in the practice of Physic Clothing & every Expense of every Kind we have been at for said Daniel Proviso. If this partnership should not be dissolved while I JOSEPH am living, then by the above writing nothing is designed or intended to with hold from my Widow from her just & Lawful thirds of the whole Estate—nor my mother from being maintained with all necessary food & raiment &c by said Estate so long as she is living—which thirds my widow is to possess & have the improvement of (but not the disposal) during her life & at her decease—said thirds & all she is possessed of at her decease is to be divided between the then surviving children or Grand Children that have lost their Father in the same proportion as hereafter mentioned between the male & female branches of said family (Excepting however such branch of said family as may have rec'd his or her share of said estate previous to my decease) Proviso— That if this partnership should be dissolved while I JOSEPH am living then the whole Estate owned by me & Sons is to be divided as follows viz I JOSEPH am (If I am fit) to have the one half of the whole Estate for & with which I am to maintain myself wife & mother during life—but upon my own & their decease the said half of the Estate is to be divided between my then surviving Children or Grand children that have lost their Father—But if previous to our decease, either my sons or Daughters have rec'd his or her proportion of the Estate meaning of the said half—then said Son or Daughter are to receive no more—The division in case of our decease is to be made in the same proportion as heretofore mentioned between the male & female branches of said family—The above mentioned half of said Estate I am to take where & out of what part of the whole Estate I shall then see fit & chuse—the other half of said Estate is to be divided as follows (meaning all the Estate exclusive of what I JOSEPH take for the maintenance of myself wife & mother.)

That whenever a division of the Estate is made or portion set off to Either of my daughters Eunice or Lois—then said daughters are to have each for their shares only two thirds so much of the estate as my sons Daniel Festus & Quartus shall have—any Expense Extraordinary that the Estate shall be at in Education dowry &c for either of my sons Dan'l Festus & Quartus or Daughters Eunice & Lois then such sums thus Expended shall be esteemed & reckoned as so much advanced & paid toward her or his portion.

Proviso— If either of my sons Dan'l Festus & Quartus should decease leaving widows without issue then the widow of that Son deceased shall be entitled to one third only of the Estate that was coming to said son at his decease—but should said son decease leaving issue [the said issue] shall be entitled to all the property that was coming to said son at his decease—Excepting the widows thirds which she is to possess & dispose of as she see fit forever.

The above writing is our present &— this tenth day of May 1794

[the above paper was signed but the signatures were torn off after the partnership was dissolved.]

GAD STEBBINS was graduated from Harvard College in 1771, receiving the degree of A. M. He was a decided patriot, and established a large factory for making saltpetre, an ingredient used in manufacturing gunpowder for use during the Revolution. His name appears as a private in Captain Aaron Graves' Company, Colonel David Leonard's Regiment. He enlisted May 8, 1777, and was discharged June 8, 1777, in service in the Northern department. He was also a member of Captain Burt's Company, as shown in a return of men drafted from Hampshire County Militia to march to Horse Neck under command of Colonel Samuel How; but they failed to join the regiment.

He was a printer, a physician, and an apothecary. In 1796 he was associated with a Mr. Russell in the publication of the "Hampshire Herald" at Springfield, Massachusetts.

His daughter, HARRIET STEBBINS, taught school several years in the South, where she became much interested in the slavery question. The climate did not agree with her, so she returned to her New England home; but subsequently went to Washington, D. C., where she succeeded in amassing quite a fortune by her labors in the school room. She was a life member of the "Washington Colonization Society," and also of the "American Colonization Society," being deeply interested in their work of sending colored people back to Liberia.

CALEB STEBBINS erected a saw-mill at his grist-mill in Hampden. On a map of Wilbraham, Massachusetts, in the state archives, his mill is represented by a rough figure of a house.

He was a signer of the "Non-Consumption Pledge". [See Appendix A.] The following inscription appears on the stone which marks his grave:

who died
March 28th, 1787,
Aged 46 years."

ZEBINA STEBBINS had a store on Main street (now northwest corner of Ferry street) where he sold dry goods, drugs, medicines, etc. Thrifty in business and faithful to all trusts, he was a good deal of a character. He was overseer of the poor, and if he once proposed to make up a job lot of coffins for a group of aged unfortunates under his charge, pending their demise, it was because he had an eye to finance, and not because he was lacking in qualities of heart.

Chapin's

The building which formerly stood on the southwest corner of Main street and Ferry lane, was occupied by Dr. Charles Pynchon as an office and apothecary shop. ZEBINA STEBBINS, who lived on the northwest corner of Main street and Ferry lane (now Cypress street) offered to lease Samuel Lyman the spot of ground on which the building now stands, on the northeast corner of Main and Ferry streets, in order to have it removed, as it obstructed his view. The following is a copy of the lease for 999 years, as recorded in the office of the Hampden County register of deeds, Book 28, page 330:

"This indenture made the 23d day of November, A. D. 1785, between ZEBINA STEBBINS and Samuel Lyman, both of Springfield in the county of Hampshire and Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Witnesseth, that the said ZEBINA for the consideration of £6 10 s. lawful money, to be paid in manner hereafter mentioned, doth let, lease, give, bargain, grant & demise to the said Samuel, his heirs and assigns, that parcel or tract of land under a large Store & Stair case at the south end of said store leading against the printing office, together with the privilege or right of passing & repassing to and from the cellar door, at the north end of said building, and Store stand, and is situated in said Springfield, fronting the head of the lane leading to the Great Ferry. To have and to hold, use, occupy, and improve the said land & privilege and appurtenances thereunto, belonging to him, the said Samuel his heirs and assigns for and during the term of nine hundred and ninety-nine years, yielding therefore & paying to the said ZEBINA, his heirs and assigns, the aforesaid sum of six pounds, ten shillings, at that period of time, when the printing business shall cease to be done, and performed in said store within a reasonable time thereafter if demanded.

In witness whereof the said parties have hereunto interchangeably set their hands and seals the day & year aforesaid.

Signed, sealed & delivered
 Abr'm Ripley,
 Gad Stebbins.

ZEBINA STEBBINS, and Seal.
 Sam'l Lyman, and Seal."

"Rec'd February 14, 1788, six pounds, ten shillings lawful money, being the consideration within mentioned, and in full of all demands for the premises therein described.

ZEBINA STEBBINS."

"Rec'd February 15, 1788, & registered from the original.

pr. Wm. Pynchon, Reg'r."

In 1803 ZEBINA STEBBINS had a rope and cordage factory on Ferry lane. It was a long, low building, and it tumbled down in 1839. With Thomas Stebbins, he carried on the dyeing business. Following is a copy of their business announcement:

"BLUE DYING".

"ZEBINA and Thomas Stebbins having commenced their blue dying, those who may wish either cotton or linen yarn dyed may have it done on the usual terms.

Springfield, May 23, 1810."

He enlarged his business by weaving duck and linen checks. On Sunday forenoon, July 9, 1826, his house took fire and was burned to the ground. In the early days of Springfield, the people all lent a helping hand at fires. The church bell was ringing for the morning service, when the fire started. On this occasion, as many times previously, the men stood in line from the river bank and passed the water along in buckets, while a line of women returned the empty buckets to the river for a new supply. The Mutual Fire Assurance Company was accordingly organized and ZEBINA STEBBINS was one of its incorporators. It was incorporated Feb. 23, 1827, for the term of twenty years. The first meeting took place May 14, following, at Russell's Inn, and ZEBINA STEBBINS, the burning of whose house was the immediate impetus to the organizing of the company, was chosen president. With what furniture was saved from the fire, he moved across the street into the building now owned by the heirs of Jeremiah Whalen, northeast corner of Ferry street, and lived there until his death.

He and Mary, his wife, became members of the First Church, in November, 1785, under Rev. Robert Breck. He was one of the assessors of the town in the year 1800; a director in the Springfield Mutual Fire Assurance Company, from May 14, 1827, to October 1, 1827, and was the first president of the company, holding that office from May 15, 1827, to July 25, 1827.

One day as David Ames, Sr., was passing by Zebina Stebbins' store, he saw (as he supposed) MR. STEBBINS at the window and bowed to him, but received no sign of recognition, which gave much offense to Mr. Ames, as they were firm friends. When they next met the matter was explained. It appeared that Mr. Ames had paid his respects to a portrait of MR. STEBBINS, having taken it for the real living person.

This incident of ZEBINA STEBBINS' horse is related: "On Sunday they used to ride to Church in a one horse shay, and were prompt to start at the ringing of the bell. One morning they were delayed. The horse, hearing the bell strike, walked off with the empty shay to church, stopped for a moment at the door, then went to the shed, where he remained till church was out; then he backed out, stopped again at the church door, and went home to his master's house, and returned to the stable." In those days it was said that whoever possessed intelligence above his fellow beings was, "as smart as ZEBINA'S horse."

MARY SNOW STEBBINS, when a young lady, was very handsome and attractive, being bright and full of fun. During the Revolutionary war, the British officers paid her a great deal of attention. This was very distasteful to her father, so he sent her to Springfield to visit her aunt, Eunice Brewer Stebbins. While there she met ZEBINA STEBBINS, then a prominent man of the town, whom she afterwards married. He was quite a contrast to her, being quiet and sedate in his manners, but quite aristocratic.

JAMES STEBBINS studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1813. He practiced in Palmer, Mass., and in 1846-7 returned to Springfield. He was noted for his wit.

CHRISTOPHER STEBBINS is reported as having been drowned July 23, 1793, "but brought to life again by the providence of God". When a young man he drove a stage for Chester W. Chapin. He afterwards became a member of the firm of John Cooley & Company, who operated a freight boat line between Springfield and Hartford, Conn., having an office in the latter place. When the company closed out their business, he returned to Springfield.

ABEL BLISS was first engaged to marry SARAH STEBBINS, but Elizabeth Bartlett said to him that she "wanted him herself, and would maintain him in his great arm chair". "Well", he said, "I will see SARAH", which he did shortly afterwards. SARAH said, "You may have her, then, for I won't maintain you in your great chair", whereupon he married Miss Bartlett. After her death, he married SARAH. It is related of him that, when his first wife (Elizabeth) died, he rapped on all the bee-hives and told them his wife was dead—a superstitious custom in those days, to prevent the bees from leaving.

In 1761 JOSEPH STEBBINS purchased lot No. 10, in Deerfield, from the heirs of Samuel Belding, and built a house on it in 1772, which is still there. From his son Baxter it passed to Asa and Henry Stebbins, who, in 1854, sold it to Luther B. Lincoln.

p. 676.

JOSEPH STEBBINS was one of the men who, in December, 1773, paid William Mosman twelve shillings each for his "Service in Riding Post from Boston to Deerfield for the term of one year from November 1772 to November 1773". The Post came once a week to Deerfield with letters, papers and small parcels. His arrival at David Hoyt's tavern, on the day he was due, was awaited by the men gathered there with a good deal of impatience in those exciting days. Many hot disputes between Whig and Tory arose on these occasions, and striking arguments were sometimes resorted to. JOSEPH STEBBINS and Oliver Field, on the one side, and Parson Ashley's sons, on the other side, were not the least prominent in those wordy wars.

p. 683.

September 1, 1774, was an exciting day in Deerfield. The Tories were gathered in anxious groups and the mob spirit was rampant among the Whigs. In the evening a mob under the lead of JOSEPH STEBBINS, after some hours' hunt, seized upon Phineas Munn and forced him to "make his confession". This "confession" did not prove to be a conversion. Judge Williams expected a visit next and his friends gathered for his protection. The garrison was bound to show fight. Their guns, pistols, etc., were loaded, soon expecting that the mob would come and force an entrance. The inmates were relieved by hearing JOSEPH STEBBINS, the leader, declare that they would not do anything further.

p. 701.

On the muster roll of the minute men who marched on the Lexington Alarm, April 18, 1775, found in the manuscript archives of the state of Massachusetts, is the following:

Days

p. 707.

The pay roll includes April 20th. LIEUTENANT STEBBINS was appointed Captain April 27, 1775. His commission, which was dated July 5, 1775, was signed by John Hancock, President of Congress, and now hangs in Memorial Hall, Deerfield. He had been appointed April 27th, and enlisted a company which was not full until the 17th of June. A list of the men in his company, in Colonel J. Brewer's Regiment, August 1, 1775, is given on page 701, in the second volume of Sheldon's History of Deerfield, and shows that he commanded fifty men. [See Appendix B.]

p. 709.

CAPTAIN STEBBINS was with Prescott on the night of June 16, 1775, in making the redoubt on Bunker Hill, and was in the thickest of the fight on June 17th.

After the surrender of Ticonderoga on July 6, 1777, the anxiety of the country became universal. The main body of the army, fleeing eastward into the New Hampshire grants, were pursued by the enemy, and the rearguard was attacked at Hubbardton, where, though men never fought more bravely, General Riedsell's advance with the Germans had decided the day against us. (Early in 1776 the British signed treaties with the Landgrave of Hesse for taking into British pay twelve thousand of his men, and with the Duke of Brunswick and other petty potentates for five thousand more. Never before was the blood of brave men sold on harder terms.)

Larned's
Hist. V
p. 3231.

Our army continued its flight southward, being joined by that portion of the army which had charge of baggage and army stores; and Fort Edward, Moses Creek, and Saratoga were in a brief time occupied and then surrendered by our wasting troops.

Jennings's Bennington, Vt.
pp. 146-
186.

Burgoyne found his progress greatly impeded by want of horses, carriages and supplies. He attempted to bring forward his artillery and stores, and open up the way from Skenesborough to Fort Edward; but the Americans had so effectually obstructed the road that the British army was frequently twenty-four hours in advancing one mile. It was not until the 30th of July that he reached Fort Edward, where he fixed his headquarters. It was soon found that, in the situation of the transport service, the army could barely be victualed from day to day. The idea of the expedition to Bennington originated in this difficulty. By intelligence through General Riedsell, and from other sources, Burgoyne had learned that Bennington was the great deposit of corn, flour, store cattle and wheel carriages, and that it was guarded only by the militia. Burgoyne, with the approbation of his officers, resolved upon an expedition to capture the Bennington military stores.

The battle of Bennington, which occurred on the 16th of August, 1777, resulted in an American victory. The tory prisoners were marched into the village bound two by two. Some of them were kept in Captain Dewey's barn. They were ordered to be removed to the school house; and, "if there is sufficient room for them in the meeting-house" (probably with those already there) "they are to be removed to the meeting-house in lieu of the school-house".

When the news reached Deerfield, of these Hessians marching through New England, a company under CAPTAIN JOSEPH STEBBINS and Lieutenant John Bardwell marched directly to Bennington. They were too late for the battle, the captured Hessians being already on exhibition in the meeting-house. From Bennington CAPTAIN STEBBINS marched to Batten Hill and joined the regiment of Colonel David Wells of Shelburne. From thence they marched to Fort Edward for the purpose of cutting off the retreat of Burgoyne's army. While at Fort Edward, CAPTAIN STEBBINS called for volunteers to follow him across the Hudson to surprise an outpost of Burgoyne, near Fort Miller. They were successful in this movement, capturing "2 British prisoners with considerable entrenching tools, blankets, arms, &c., which were divided up among the volunteers".

Shel-
don's Deerfield,
Mass. II
p. 724.

Later CAPTAIN STEBBINS joined Gates and was under the direct command of Benedict Arnold, and participated in the battles of Stillwater and Bemis Heights.

On his attempted retreat, Burgoyne lost his personal baggage, which was distributed amongst the captors. Part of this spoil is now in the Memorial Hall at Deerfield—a linen towel brought home by CAPTAIN STEBBINS, and a brass candlestick brought home by Captain Maxwell. CAPTAIN STEBBINS also brought home part of a book belonging to the commissary department of Burgoyne, which was probably captured at Fish-kill on the 11th of October. On one of the blank pages CAPTAIN STEBBINS made up a pay roll of his company, which was dated October 18, 1777.

The Revolutionary service of JOSEPH STEBBINS, as found in the State Records of Massachusetts, was as follows: Ensign in Captain Jonas Lock's Company, Colonel Williams' Regiment, which marched from Deerfield on the Lexington Alarm, April 19, 1775, eight days in service; Lieutenant in Captain Hugh Maxwell's Company, Colonel William Prescott's Regiment, in list of officers who received commissions dated May 29, 1775; Captain of a Company in Colonel Jonathan Brewer's Regiment, enlisted for eight months to expire December 31, 1775, in siege of the Boston army; Captain of a Company in Colonel David Wells' Regiment, in service from September 23, to October 18, 1777, marched on expedition to Northern department; Captain of 1st Company of the 5th Hampshire County Regiment, Lieutenant-Colonel Wells' commissioned June 19, 1780.

In addition to the above service the History of Deerfield mentions him as enlisting in 1781, for three years, or the war, in Hugh McClellan's regiment.

In 1777-8 he occupied pew No. 9 in the meeting-house. He was assessor in 1779, 1782, 1786, 1787, and 1795. On March 25, 1782, at a town meeting, COLONEL JOSEPH STEBBINS and Captain Thomas W. Dickinson were chosen delegates to attend a county convention at Hatfield, to consider the burdens of the people and seek relief from the hard times. Deerfield stood with the strong conservative element in the convention. COLONEL STEBBINS had led a mob in the cause of Liberty, and had been for six years constantly fighting in the field for the same cause; but neither he nor Captain Dickinson had any sympathy with the mob spirit which was willing to wreck the new Constitution in seeking an impossible relief from financial burdens, by interrupting the execution of the laws.

The stubborn fact remained that hard times were upon the people, and there was no easy way out. Samuel Ely, however, persuaded a sufficient number of sufferers that stopping the action of the courts was the true remedy. They administered it, and Ely was sent, on April 3, 1782, to the Springfield jail, as a leader in a riot. On June 12th a mob of one hundred broke down the jail doors and rescued Ely. The rescuers then turned and marched northward in triumph, some mounted and some on foot. Half an hour later Sheriff Elisha Porter of Hadley appeared on the ground. He rallied a force and sent it, under Colonel Burt, in pursuit of the mob; then crossed the Connecticut river and made haste to secure all boats on the river, to prevent the mob from passing eastward. On June 13th news reached Mr. Porter that Burt had overtaken the mob at South Hadley, where, after a smart skirmish, in which nothing was accomplished both parties encamped for the night. Porter at once rallied a force and went in pursuit of them. There was some lively work and many hard blows. Ely and a few others had escaped. The parties were formed in two lines, in the road, facing each other, and within bayonet reach. To prevent bloodshed, a committee of five on each side was chosen, and, after a brief consultation, the mob agreed to march to Northampton for shelter from the pouring rain, while negotiations were pending, Porter promising to leave them in as good position for defense as they were then, in case of failure to agree. This joint committee, after considerable conference, came to an agreement that both parties should unite in a petition to the General Court for some action to abate the grievances complained of—that Ely should be given up and three hostages be given for his return. The terms of the parley were broken, and the leaders of the mob arrested and confined. A strong guard garrisoned the jail day and night. Before nightfall a crowd had collected, who swore they would burn the town unless the hostages were given up. The mob increased, and on June 14th Sheriff Porter sent out expresses to the towns about for help. When his appeal reached Deerfield, COLONEL JOSEPH STEBBINS, who had himself been the leader of one mob, and a witness to others, and who knew well their dangerous tendency, forthwith rallied a party and marched for the scene of the disturbance. He had not been notified of the disposition of the insurgent force, and in marching through Hatfield found himself in their very midst, and he and his whole party were captured. p. 755.

At a meeting in December, 1782, the town voted that it had “no objections to a County Road being laid from Old Fort North Gate, back of the Old Fort, Carters Land, across Pettys Plain to David Smeads Esq in Greenfield”. The important question was which was the better route to Greenfield Meadows, whether across North Meadows, by the Pine Hill ferry and through Green River street, or by the ford at Old Fort through Little Hope and across Petty’s Plain. To test the distance to the objective points, JOSEPH STEBBINS and David Saxton were chosen a committee “to measure the Road from Deerfield Meeting house by the Ferry to Greenfield Bridge, and from said Bridge across Pettys Plain back of Carters Land & Old Fort to said house”. p. 755.

In 1785 JOSEPH STEBBINS and Jonathan Hoyt bought lot No. 42, in Deerfield, which they sold in 1788 to Rev. John Taylor. JOSEPH STEBBINS also purchased lot No. 43, and sold it in 1801 to William Dennison. p. 626.

JOSEPH STEBBINS had command of a company under General Shepherd, in the Shay’s Rebellion, when the insurgents finally came to grief at Springfield January 26, 1787. Government troops were occasionally in Deerfield in their marches, and an old billeting roll shows that nearly a thousand men spent one day and night there, quartered on the householders, JOSEPH STEBBINS entertaining ninety-three. A number of the insurgents, after their defeat, gave up their arms, which were placed in charge of COLONEL JOSEPH STEBBINS. Some of them were put to use by the government, as appears from the following order: p. 763.

“Northampton, Mch. 3 1788

These arms were eventually restored to the owners. On some scraps of paper are found the names of sixty-nine of those who gave COLONEL STEBBINS receipts for their arms.

COLONEL STEBBINS was one of the fifteen men who met October 8, 1787, and formed themselves into a sort of a corporation, under the title of "Proprietors of the New School". He and four others were chosen a committee to examine into the subject, and report whether or not it would be best to adopt a new method of conducting the schools. He evidently evinced great interest in educational matters, as, in addition to the above, he was one of the founders of Deerfield Academy. The act of establishing this last institution was approved by Samuel Adams, Governor, March 21, 1797; and JOSEPH STEBBINS was one of the men of the old corporation named in this act.

The militia being organized under the State Constitution, JOSEPH STEBBINS was commissioned May 22, 1788, as colonel of the second regiment, second brigade, fourth division.

At a town meeting March 1, 1795, it was voted that "if COL. STEBBINS will erect a grist mill in the South Meadow" * * * "Said mill shall be tax free so long as water runs and grass grows". A mill was built soon after, which became and continued for many years a famous and popular one. Around the water power developed by STEBBINS, "Mill" village grew up, and active industries centered there.

p. 778.

On December 29, 1799, the citizens of Deerfield met at the Academy to make arrangements for "Commemorating the Death of his Excellency Gen'l. George Washington". At this meeting it was voted that "Dr. William S. Williams, Lieut. Ep's Hoyt, Colo Dickinson, Capt. Hoyt & COLO STEBBINS, be a Committee to make such arrangements and regulations for the proceeding on said Day as to them shall appear most suitable for the occasion".

In 1799 he purchased lot No. 39, in Deerfield, from John Baker and Eldad Bardwell.

JOSEPH STEBBINS was a cordwainer, as well as a tanner and currier, doing a large business in both these trades. For eight years he was selectman, and always occupied a prominent position in the civil affairs of the town and county.

In 179— ASA STEBBINS, with his brother, Colonel Joseph Stebbins, built the famous "Meadow Mills". He was prominent in civil affairs, occupying the office of selectman for fourteen years, and being representative eleven years. He was a Colonel in the militia.

I p. 623.

At a meeting April 4, 1803, the town voted to "buy the burying yard at Muddy Brook"; and Colonel Stebbins and four others were chosen a committee to make the purchase.

II
p. 845.

COLONEL STEBBINS was a staunch friend to education, and made generous donations to furnish the philosophical apparatus and endow the library of Deerfield Academy. In 1806 he presented a "Planetarium" and "Lunarium" to this institution, and his name was ordered to be engraved thereon.

I p. 623.

In 1807 ASA STEBBINS bought lot No. 34, in Deerfield, from Jonathan Hoyt, having previously been given the other half of this lot, and lot No. 33, by his father, Joseph Stebbins. He had built on these lots in 1799 the house which was still standing in 1894.

II
p. 795.

He was one of the subscribers to the protest against the division of the town of Deerfield, raising the objection that it would increase the taxes and cause great inconvenience in paying them to two separate collectors.

p. 817.

On August 28, 1812, the town voted that "COL. ASA STEBBINS, Maj. Epaphras Hoyt, and Capt. Samuel Wells, be a committee to build a magazine for the Towns Military Stores, near the new Burying ground", and forty dollars was appropriated for the purpose. The amount of military stores reported to be on hand August 24th, was "117 lbs Powder, 260 lbs Ball, 263 Flints and 6 Tin camp kittles". The methods of keeping the town ammunition creep out here and there, in various ways. In the earlier days it was the custom to store the powder in the meeting-house, either under the pulpit or in the steeple—the two places of all others, it would seem, most exposed to an explosion.

p. 858.

p. 802.

He was assessor in 1813, 1816, 1818, and in 1823 was appointed one of a building committee for the erection of the new meeting-house. A guarantee fund was provided to carry on the work, the money thus guaranteed to be refunded through a sale of the pews. To this fund ASA STEBBINS subscribed five hundred dollars. He was Justice of the Peace from 1815 to 1834.

I p. 598.

In 1832 COLONEL STEBBINS purchased lot No. 5, which he gave to his son Henry on the occasion of his marriage; and it is now held by his heirs, the house on it being now over one hundred years old.

EBENEZER STEBBINS lived in the Sugar Loaf district in Deerfield, at the west portal of Sunderland bridge. On April 4, 1808, a petition was presented "To see if the Town of Deerfield will agree to divide sd Town, as it shall be set forth in the Petition of the Inhabitants in the south part of the Town". Residents south of the proposed line presented a remonstrance, setting forth at length the reasons moving them. This remonstrance was signed by EBENEZER STEBBINS and thirty-two others.

p. 322.

In 1815 he was an inn-holder. He signed a paper dated January 30, 1817, which prayed for the consent of the town that a "minister may be called and settled to preach" among them at such place as they may select, his salary to be paid from the town treasury.

He was a very wealthy man, and a great landholder, owning hundreds of acres of land. He was considered the wealthiest man in Deerfield. He settled seven of his children on farms on the bank of the Connecticut river. He was a fine appearing man, and was respected by all who knew him. He served as a lieutenant in the Revolutionary war.

CONSIDER STEBBINS moved from Massachusetts to Walworth, Wayne County, N. Y., some time in 1811 and bought land in 1812. It was then an unbroken forest, and his first work was to build a house. This house was made of logs, the floor being made of hewn-out pieces, split for the purpose, and the roof being covered with basswood bark. In 1813 he was drafted for three months' service in the war of 1812, and was under Captain Eneas Palmer, on the frontier at Lewiston, N. Y. He was drafted a second time, but, as sickness rendered him unable to go, he furnished a substitute.

George Willard Stebbins, when in his seventy-first year, says:

"I have heard my grandfather, SYLVESTER STEBBINS, say one of his early boyhood recollections was hearing the firing at the battle of Bunker Hill. He clapped his hands and cried, "They's at it, they's at it," until his mother reproved him, telling of the blood and wounds that must be the result.

"My grandfather was in line in Shay's Rebellion a short time. A neighbor persuaded him, this neighbor being full of enthusiasm. My grandfather said, 'We have no guns'. 'There will be plenty dead, whose guns we can take', said the neighbor. So they went. Grandfather took a position beside a drummer. The next minute a cannon ball came along, hitting the drummer full in the face. His brains were scattered over Grandfather, his drum, and all near. Grandfather retreated, and went to war no more. He spent the latter years of his life with my father, Chester Stebbins, at York, and with another son, Elijah, at Pike, alternately, until his death at York in 1843."

DR. ARAD STEBBINS studied medicine with Dr. Dickermund of Brattleboro, Vt., and surgery with Dr. Goodhue of Putney. Nathan Smith, subsequently Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine, at Dartmouth College, was his fellow student. We have not the date of his commencing business in Bradford, Vt., but it was some time before 1790, as a town meeting was held that year at his house, and it is known that for some time after his coming here he boarded in the family of Dr. Andross, whose wife was his aunt.

DR. STEBBINS was a sensible, affable, wideawake, energetic man; and had an extensive medical practice here, for about thirty years.

He built a large, and for those days fine, house near the north end of the village, to be occupied, not only as a family residence, but for the accommodation of travelers and boarders. After his decease, this was known as the Vermont House, and by successive proprietors kept as a hotel, until June 18, 1871, when, in the ownership of R. W. Chamberlin, it accidentally took fire and was consumed. A fine residence was built on the same spot, in 1875, under the care and at the expense of Mr. Harvey Nourse of this place.

DR. STEBBINS represented Brattleboro in the State Legislature of 1805. In the year 1814, the doctor and his wife became members of the Congregational church, on profession, and so continued during the remainder of their lives.

About the year 1818, while DOCTOR STEBBINS was walking homeward and alone one dark evening, from the house of his father, where he had been attending a Library Society meeting, he had the misfortune to step off the side of a bridge across a ravine, since filled with earth, near the residence of J. A. Hardy, by which fall he received a concussion of the brain, which put an end to his medical practice, and from which he never entirely recovered.

daughter of Josiah Stebbins and Mary Howe, was born March 3, 1774, at Winchester, Cheshire County, New Hampshire; died July 3, 1854, at Winchester, New Hampshire; married May, 1804, to ISAAC BAKER, born 1777 at Westmoreland, Cheshire County, New Hampshire. Occupation, saddlemaker. Resided at Northfield, Massachusetts.

CHILDREN:

- 1967. I. Arad Stebbins Baker, born June 23, 1805; married Lusena M. Brackett.+

ISAAC BAKER lived in Northfield, Mass., and, for a while, in Dummerston, Vermont. In May, 1806, he went away and his wife never saw him again.

MRS. BAKER lived for a time, with her father, and afterwards with her brother, Dr. Arad Stebbins, at Bradford, Vermont. Later she became housekeeper for Miller & Griswold, merchants of Hinsdale, N. H.; and then kept house for 'Squire Nevers, a lawyer of Northfield, Mass. She was a model housekeeper, noted for neatness and good order.

She kept her son with her until he was old enough to work out, after which she kept house for a while in Northfield, her son providing for her. After his marriage, she went to live with him, and spent the remainder of her life there.

The name of ASAHEL STEBBINS is included in a list of polls and estates in Northfield, Massachusetts, in 1771. [See Appendix E.]

He was corporal of Captain Eliakim Smith's Company, Colonel Ward's Regiment, enlisting on June 1, 1775, time of service two months and five days, roll dated August 1, 1775. He also served as corporal of Captain Moses Kellogg's Company, in the same regiment. Both companies did service at the siege of the Boston army. He enlisted again August 22, 1777, in Captain Moses Harvey's Company, Colonel Ruggles Woodbridge's Regiment. This Company was raised for service at Saratoga, to re-inforce the Northern army. He was discharged November 29, 1777, his time of service being three months and seventeen days. [See Appendix B.]

In the seating of the meeting-house, in 1780, ASAHEL STEBBINS had pew No. 28.

ASAHEL STEBBINS JR. was selectman of Northfield in 1835, 1836, 1838, and 1839, and was also Representative to the General Court in 1839.

2056. V. Caroline M., born Mar. 26, 1816; unmarried; died Oct. 2, 1846, at Williamstown. Vt.

CAPTAIN BRAINARD STEBBINS served a seven years' apprenticeship to learn the clothiers trade, which included the fulling and coloring of cloth, for which he prepared the dyes himself.

He was chosen Surveyor of Highways at Williamstown, Vermont, in 1802.

For a short time he lived at Chelsea, Orange Co., Vermont, where he made a transfer of land, October 27, 1809, the consideration being five hundred dollars.

In 1808, his brother Bliss came to Williamstown; and they established a cloth dressing business.

MARGARET REED STEBBINS, in her prime, made a specialty of spinning fine linen—so fine that her daughter, Fanny R., who embroidered lace beautifully, used it in her work. It was so fine and soft, that it looked almost like silk. Many pairs of ladies' hose were knit from that beautiful silky thread. It was truly a home industry. CAPTAIN STEBBINS raised the flax; then between them they prepared it for spinning. Once in their lives they made a web of linen cloth fine enough for pocket handkerchiefs; also a web of table linen. The piece for handkerchiefs, while bleaching on the grass, was torn or chewed by some pigs. Fanny R. Stebbins cut out the torn place "by the thread" and filled in a piece, darning it into its place so nicely that probably not one person in twenty, even if they were ironing it, would have noticed that it was mended at all. It is now in the possession of her daughter, Mrs. Appleton, who considers the mending as much a marvel as the cloth. This piece of work took the premium at the fairs for a number of years.

BRAINARD STEBBINS was Captain of "The Old Militia" of Williamstown, Vt.

Occupation, paper merchant. Religion, Methodist. Resided at Wilbraham, Mass.; Troy, N. Y.; Claremont, N. H.; Williamstown, Vt. She married second, Col. Simeon Wight.

BLISS STEBBINS, while quite young, went to Troy, N. Y., and, while visiting a paper mill and watching the process of paper making, he was asked if he would like to be a paper maker. This visit and question resulted in his learning the trade. He went to work as a journeyman in this line, at Claremont, N. H., when twenty-three years of age.

One day, seeing a young lady passing, he remarked jestingly to his fellow workmen, "There goes my wife." This raised a great laugh at his expense—the idea of his marrying the daughter of the aristocratic Judge Cossitt; but he married her nevertheless, in 1802.

He went to Williamstown, Vermont, in 1808; and, in company with his brother Brainard, established a cloth dressing business in connection with a saw mill, which lines he followed until his death in 1826. The original frame of the saw mill was still standing and in use in 1888. He was an excellent reader; and was frequently called upon to read sermons in the Congregational church, during the absence of the minister.

Hearing of an expected battle at Plattsburgh, N. Y. (which afterwards took place Sept. 11, 1814), he shut down his saw mill gates, and started for Burlington, fifty miles distant, to join the army, riding as fast as his horse could carry him. When he arrived there, he found over a thousand Vermont men assembled. A regiment was organized; but, being unable to secure boats in which to cross the lake, they could not participate in the battle.

MR. STEBBINS was chosen Clerk of the Town Library of Williamstown, Vermont, in 1813; was elected school trustee in 1815; was one of the Library committee in 1816; and was librarian in 1819. Having married in 1802, he probably settled in Williamstown about 1803, as his name first appears on the tax rolls at that time. He owned six acres of improved land in 1807.

MRS. STEBBINS was an active worker in the Methodist Church. A few years after her husband's death she married Colonel Simeon Wight.

BLISS STEBBINS was Captain of "The Old Militia" of Williamstown, Vermont.

ENOS STEBBINS responded to call for troops for the war of 1812 and died from consumption contracted from exposure while in the service.

ENOS STEBBINS purchased land in Williamstown, Vermont, in 1798, where he was elected Hayward, March 6, 1810. He was a soldier in the war of 1812; but, becoming ill, was sent home and died shortly afterward. ENOS and Brainard purchased land in Williamstown, of Reuben Hatch, in 1798—value, eight hundred dollars.

“Reader come listen I’ll speak from the Grave

“ ’Tis the last I can do for the cause I embraced.

“This moment improve if your soul you would save,

“For death will soon come and with me youll be placed.”

LEWIS STEBBINS of Longmeadow, Mass., had charge of the choir at Waterbury for a time and also taught a singing school.

In the Valley Index, in February and March, 1878, there appeared several communications entitled "Early Recollections" and signed "O. R.," which related almost entirely to the old-time singing in Waterbury. The picture they present is so quaint and so evidently accurate, that we reproduce them considerably condensed.

"LEWIS STEBBINS had a fine commanding voice, of the tenor range, and was quite a popular teacher in his prime, which was near the beginning of the present century. The writer knew him only after he had become broken down and had retired mainly from the musical field. His last attempt to teach a singing school was made in the West Centre school house, just previous to the introduction of the "new style" under Elam Ives. "STEB." as he was familiarly called, started this school under very good auspices, got a new suit of clothes to begin with, kept decently sober, and had a large class. Things went on very well for a time, the "gamut" was mastered, most of the scholars could find the mi, could "raise and fall" the eight notes and were beginning to "put the parts together", when an unfortunate incident occurred. On a certain evening several roughs came in, intent on mischief. The school opened and singing began, but was interrupted by loud talking and laughing. The master stood on his dignity—which was probably sustained at its full height by a liberal potion of aqua vitae—and an altercation ensued which ended in a "clinch" and an ignominious rolling of the parties on the floor. At this point the school was in a commotion, and there was a general stampede. The only remark now remembered was made by Miss Mary Scoville, afterward the wife of the Rev. Dr. Clark. She arose immediately on the commencement of the difficulty, and saying, "Good-by, Mr. Stebbins", left for home. This row broke up the school and pretty effectually closed the musical career of a man who, but for his intemperate habits, might have won distinction in a very honorable and useful calling.

MR. STEBBINS represented a kind of singing which had been popular for many years, but was destined soon to be superseded by a style different in almost every particular. There were in those days no accompanying instruments, and the key note was given by the "pitch pipe". The leader or chorister in a loud voice named the tune to be sung, and with dignified mein drew the slide of his pipe to the proper letter and gave a somewhat prolonged whistle. All followed the leader in the "fa-sol-la-fa," each part backing to its own proper chord, the choir arose and the music began. The chorister threw his soul into the performance, and the way he beat time was simply majestic. Four-four time especially gave opportunity for the "tallest" kind of arm work; the two-down brought the hand upon the "breast-work", and the two-up culminated above the head. There was a very little of what is now termed accent, but a steady dragging movement, one measure rolling, as it were, into the next, and so on to the end of the time. But after all, there was good music in those days, and if some of those could be recalled, with STEBBINS in his prime to lead, the quartette of the present day with all its fine culture would be thrown into the shade in presence of the majestic rendering of "Majesty", "Thanksgiving Anthem", Bull's "Alleluia", "Judgment Anthem," "Denmark", and other popular pieces of the period. Some years since, Father Kemp's company gave what they called "old folks concert", but the music they sang and the style of performance were of a later date than that of which I now speak, and belonged to an intermediate school."

son of Medad Stebbins and Sarah Keep, was born Sept. 22, 1793, at Longmeadow, Hampden Co., Mass.; died Jan. 28, 1875, at Brunswick, Medina Co., Ohio; married Nov. 24, 1818, at Blanford, Hampden Co., Mass., to JULIA ROBINSON, born Dec. 31, 1793, at Granville, Mass.; died Mar. 24, 1876, at Brunswick, Medina Co., Ohio, who was a daughter of John Robinson and Naomi Bliss. Occupation, farmer. Politics, republican. Religion, Protestant.

 2099. V. Mary Elizabeth, born March 31, 1832; married William Pritchard.

HARVEY STEBBINS, when about ten years of age, was adopted by his mother's father, John Robinson, of Granville, Mass., and remained with him until he was about twenty-four years old, when he, with a comrade, Elijah Hall, concluded to seek their fortunes in the then far West. They shouldered their rifles and knapsacks and made the entire journey from Massachusetts to Ohio on foot. Arriving at Cleveland, they put up for the night at the log tavern, and next morning young STEBBINS was urged to invest his modest means in a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in what is now the best business part of West Cleveland; but he declined to attempt to make a farm out of a sand bank, with here and there a little scrub oak ornamenting it. He would not take it as a gracious gift and be obliged to live on it. He went twenty miles further and took up a farm in the township of Brunswick, Medina Co., Ohio, and commenced the task of clearing off the heavy timber. After hard work for one year, he had a little portion cleared (except the stumps) and a snug little cabin built. Then he and his friend took up their journey of six hundred miles on foot, for Massachusetts, to claim their promised brides. After their marriage, they each loaded up a wagon with their household effects and, with smart yokes of oxen, commenced the honeymoon trip. It took them six weeks to make the journey. Arriving at their home, it took but a short time to put things in good order. At the time they went there, a few families constituted the entire settlement in the township.

MR. STEBBINS held a number of township offices, and was colonel of the militia. He was a good scholar for those days, and taught several sessions of school. Being quite musically inclined, he taught singing school during the winters, and, for a great many years, led the singing in the church.

He was a famous shot and kept the family well supplied with game, which was very abundant. The last hunting he ever did resulted in the bursting of his rifle, which almost ruined his hand.

When about ten years old, ELDAD STEBBINS left the farm house in Wilbraham to go and live with the husband of his mother's sister, Peter Thompson, a farmer in Partridgeville, Massachusetts, which was a hill town looking down eastward on the rich valley of the Connecticut. Here he spent two years. In 1793 he was a school teacher in Blanford; then he was engaged in mercantile life in Hillsdale, New York. He returned to the old home to recuperate his failing health. In 1796 he was again teaching in country towns near by, following that useful vocation up to 1808. He then became clerk to the Paymaster and Military Storekeeper in the United States Armory, which position he continued to hold until May, 1826; and was granted pay for a year after his usefulness had ceased. He and the family then removed to Hatfield, a pleasant old farming town twenty miles north. He signed a petition May 29, 1805, for the incorporation of the Methodist Episcopal Parish. [See Appendix B.]

ELDAD STEBBINS was tall and spare, white headed early in life, courteous in manner, kindly to all, true to his trust, and a thoughtful reader.

CALVIN STEBBINS was a prosperous farmer, owning considerable land; and was a typical country "squire". He was everybody's counsellor, and the friend of many. By his neighbors he was esteemed as "long-headed". There were more books in his house than in any other in the parish, save the minister's.

He was one of the petitioners in 1805 for the incorporation of the Methodist Episcopal Society in the towns of Wilbraham, Springfield and Ludlow. [See Appendix D.]

The first cooking stove was brought to Wilbraham in 1814 by CALVIN STEBBINS.

CALVIN STEBBINS was town clerk from 1820 to 1824. He gave much time and labor in opposition to the measure "to see if the town will petition the General Court, at their next session, to divide the town of Wilbraham into two towns", and it was owing in no small degree to his influence that it was not carried.

He raised broom corn in considerable quantities and manufactured it into brooms. He seems to have been a man of progression, and always glad to avail himself of improved implements. He brought the first plough with iron mould-board into town; and very early commenced the cultivation of hops.

 2253. X. Thomas, born June (or Jan.), 3, 1827; died Dec. 11, 1830.

WILLIAM STEBBINS spent his boyhood days in his native town. About the year 1790, with his parents, he emigrated west to New York State, making the journey with an ox team. When they reached what is now the city of Utica they stopped to rest and view the country. Not being pleased with the outlook, they went further and located at Pompey, Onondaga County, where he built a log house in the woods. He experienced the usual life of a pioneer, clearing the forests and cultivating the rough acres which composed his farm.

In the early days MR. STEBBINS made brick, but afterwards devoted his whole time to farming.

Soon after the death of his first wife he removed to Clinton, Oneida County, where he continued the pursuit of farming. In the latter years of his life, having accumulated a comfortable property, the farm was sold and he moved to the village, where he spent the remainder of his days.

When WILLIAM STEBBINS and LYDIA BRANCH were married the ceremony was performed by Occum, the celebrated Indian preacher, there being no other minister in town.

In character, MR. STEBBINS was an industrious, frugal man, pleasing in his manners, yet quiet and unobtrusive.

 2257. IV. Amelia; married Warren Bryant.

JOSEPH STEBBINS devoted several years of his early life to mercantile pursuits, at Clinton, N. Y. In 1818 he was appointed one of the superintendents of the Brothertown Indians, and continued to hold that office under successive administrations for over twenty years.

As an Indian superintendent his "latch string" was always out, day and night, and many times the Indians quietly entered his house and stretched themselves on the floor before the open fireplace, where the fire was seldom out (for matches were not known in those days), there to remain until day-break, nothing ever being molested. What a reflection upon progress and Christianity, when people of the present day must live behind locked doors and windows!

"Uncle Joe," as people were fond of calling JOSEPH STEBBINS, in late life, realized all the trials and deprivations attendant upon pioneer life. The journey from Massachusetts to Clinton was made in an ox cart. He had to travel some twenty miles on horseback, through the forests, by aid of blazed trees, whenever flour or meal was needed.

Of ANNE STEBBINS STORRS, her stepson, Dr. Richard Salter Storrs, Jr., said: "She was a remarkable woman; wise and witty; affectionate, humorous, supremely conscientious, devoted to the best things, with a certain gay cheerfulness which years and sorrow did not subdue."

"ANNE STEBBINS STORRS was a very much beloved stepmother and grandmother. Beside all her marked virtues she was a most charming hostess, possessing remarkable vivacity, so that her sayings are still frequently quoted and laughed over."

RICHARD SALTER STORRS received his early education at home, and entered Yale College in 1802; but, his health failing, he had to give up his college course for a time, and accepted a position as teacher in the Clinton Academy in East Hampton, Long Island, where he had been invited at the suggestion of Lyman Beecher. Meanwhile he continued his studies, and, entering the senior class of Williams College, was graduated in 1807. He then returned to Long Island, where he studied theology under Rev. Aaron Woolworth of Bridgehampton. A year later he was licensed by the Suffolk Presbytery, and was given charge of the parishes of Islip and Smithtown, but soon retired from this work and entered Andover Theological Seminary, from which he was graduated in 1810.

He was then ordained pastor of the First Congregational church of Brain-tree, Mass., which charge he retained until his death, with the exception of five years, when he was engaged in the service of the Home Missionary Society of Massachusetts. The degree of D. D. was conferred on him by Williams College in 1835, and by Amherst College the same year. During the years from 1817 to 1825 he was editor of the Boston Recorder, and senior associate editor of the Congregationalist from 1850 to 1856. DR. STORRS was also a contributor to the Panoplist, the Home Monthly and other periodicals, and, in addition to about twenty sermons, published the "Memoir of Rev. Samuel Green" (Boston, 1836), "Life and Letters of Rev. Daniel Temple" (New York, 1855); and edited "Williston's Sacramental Meditations" (Boston, 1857).

son of Ezra Stebbins and Margaret Bliss, was born May 22, 1802, at Long-meadow, Mass.; died April 12, 1844, at South Boston, Mass.; married May 8, 1833, to MARY ANN WHITMAN, born Feb. 23, 1811, at Boston, Mass.; died Jan. 6, 1891, at 465 W. Broadway, South Boston, who was a daughter of Hon. Benjamin Whitman and Hannah Gardner. Residence (1891), 465 Broadway, South Boston, Mass.

CHILDREN:

2281. I. Oliver Bliss, born Dec. 22, 1833; unmarried; died Nov. 2, 1902, at South Boston, Mass.
 2282. II. Clarinda B., born Mar. 5, 1837; died Sept. 6, 1838
 2283. III. Mary Ann Black, born Dec. 28, 1838; married Hollis Randel Gray, of Malden.+

DR. JOHN BLISS STEBBINS was obliged to remain at home and assist on the farm until his seventeenth year, owing to his father's ill health. Released from this duty, he devoted himself to securing a medical education. In this he was greatly assisted by his uncles, Doctors John and Oliver Bliss. He was graduated from Harvard College in 1827, receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine, after which he removed to South Boston. After studying further with Dr. Keep, of Boston, he entered upon the practice of his profession and immediately attained great success. His practice was extensive, but as he was eminently the "physician of the poor" it did not bring him great wealth. He early made his home in South Boston, where he was widely known and highly respected for his genial, pleasant traits of character, and his liberality in his profession.

His tastes were always intellectual and he collected quite an extensive library. In 1835 he was a member of the City Council of Boston, and was also a member of the Boston Medical Association and the Massachusetts Medical Society.

His son, OLIVER BLISS STEBBINS, graduated in 1848, at the head of his class in the Hawes Grammar School, receiving the first Franklin medal. He completed his education at the English High School, Boston, from which he was graduated with honor, and in 1852 entered upon a mercantile life which he soon relinquished for the more congenial, though less profitable, pursuit of literature.

In 1855 he was elected a member of the Mattapan Literary Association of South Boston, a society for the training of young men in literary matters. He served as director and secretary of the Association, and was a member of the lecture committee. The outbreak of the war terminated the usefulness of the organization.

He served as assistant editor of the Mattapan Register, a weekly paper devoted mainly to South Boston matters. His contributions, both in prose and verse, attracted much attention and were widely copied.

From 1865 to 1867 he was a clerk in the South Boston Postoffice, and from 1867 to 1869 was a clerk in the Boston Custom House, receiving two promotions and high commendation from the Treasury Department for his statistics upon emigration. At the same time he was the Boston musical and dramatic correspondent of the well-known New York Musical Review.

In 1876 he was elected a member of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, and has been a constant contributor to its publications. Since 1880 he has been employed by that society as index-maker. He has also acted in the capacity of Boston correspondent of the New York Dramatic News, musical and dramatic critic of the Boston Daily World, and of the Opera Glass, and a frequent contributor to other papers.

In 1876 he prepared a Manuscript History of Dorchester Neck in the Revolution; a "History of the Hawes Grammar School," which constitutes about half of the volume published as the "Hawes School Memorial"; and has also published, in the fourth volume of Memorial Biographies of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, a life of General William H. Sumner, which has received the highest praise from all reviewers. He was a member of the Hawes Schoolboy Association, and its president in 1899. A close student of history and the drama, he has collected a valuable library of about two thousand volumes besides numerous pamphlets, devoted to these subjects. In 1898 he delivered lectures on "Macbeth" before the Playgoers' Club.

In 1895 he wrote a "History of the Boston Museum," which was published in the Bostonian, now the National Magazine.

For over twenty years he had been collecting data for a history of the Stebbins family; and it is to be regretted that we were not permitted to incorporate his manuscript in this work, as it must include a great deal of interesting matter, especially in the historical line. We hope that some one will at no distant date issue a supplement to the present work, with corrections and additions from his manuscript.

He was married second to MARY W. Occupation, farmer; politics, Republican. Residences, Longmeadow, Mass., until May, 1861; in Will Co., Ill., until 1871; then at New Hampton, Iowa.

2286. III. Emily, born Jan. 22, 1843; unmarried; lives at New Hampton, Iowa.
2287. IV. James (?); died Mar. 14, 1846.

AARON CHAPIN STEBBINS was but six years old when his father became helpless. When not in school and when he could be spared from home he worked for his uncle, John Bliss, a brother of his mother. After his father's death he went to live with his uncle, Oliver Bliss, another brother of his mother, and remained with him until his marriage. He never went to school after his father's death. His uncle, who was a doctor as well as a farmer, was to give him instruction, but there was a good deal of work to be done and he was so interrupted in his studies that he soon gave up all idea of study, gaining what little education he had from general reading, for which, fortunately, he had much fondness. Being possessed of a very excellent memory, he became well posted in the affairs of his time, and could converse intelligently. Could he have had the opportunity of getting a college education, he would have been a very brilliant man. He was very fond of a joke, and in his younger days, when with his friends, it was hard to get the start of him. He was a great mimic and story-teller, and in his later years, when the family was gathered together on Thanksgiving—or some other holiday—he would entertain them with stories of "ye olden time and ye old people" which were very amusing. He was a member of the school committee, but never held any other public office. He was not one to crowd himself forward, being naturally of a retiring disposition, and much preferring the quiet of his own home to the toils and strifes of political life. He always worked on a farm until he moved west. After that he did no field work, but always had the best and cleanest garden of any one around. In middle life he fell from a tree while picking pears and broke several of the small bones of his foot; after recovering from this he had a trouble in his hips, and for the last seven years of his life he was not able to dress himself without assistance. The hip trouble gradually grew worse until his death. He was buried in New Hampton, Iowa. He was honored with several military commissions, of which the following are copies:

JOHN BLISS STEBBINS attended the common district school until ten years of age, after which time he went only in the winters. At sixteen years of age his school life closed.

He soon after went west and lived at Garnaville, Clayton County, Iowa, where he worked on a farm, in a stone quarry, hauled lumber from Clayton landing on the Mississippi to Garnaville, and also made mud for masons who were building a cellar.

In September, 1857, he went to Will County, Illinois, where he worked a short time on a farm. He taught school four and one-half months in the town of Orland, Cook County, Illinois. At the close of his term of school he returned to his old home at Longmeadow, and remained there with his parents until the spring of 1861, when his father sold his farm and the family moved west, locating in Green Garden Township, Will County, Illinois, where he took a piece of raw prairie and converted it into a good farm. While here he held the office of school director.

In June, 1871, he went to Chickasaw County, Iowa, and entered a homestead, which he improved, then sold, and with the proceeds bought another piece of prairie which he built upon and where he lived until the spring of 1893, when, his health having failed him, he sold this also, and since that time has made his home in New Hampton, Iowa.

EMILY CALKINS STEBBINS was always small and delicate and could only attend an occasional term of school. In 1858 she went to Peacham, Vermont, and attended the Caledonia County Grammar school for one year. She then returned home and the next fall entered the higher department of the home school, which she attended two successive winters.

In the early summer of 1861 she came west with her parents and has since been a resident of New Hampton, Chickasaw County, Iowa, with the exception of about one year.

From September 1, 1862, to January 1, 1864, she was Deputy Recorder and Treasurer of Chickasaw County, and excited the admiration of some and the contempt of others by taking a man's place and doing a man's work, and—horror of horrors! getting a man's wages for doing it. She resided with her parents in Will County, Illinois, from February, 1864, to September, 1865, teaching the Green Garden school during that period. But, finding herself lacking in the heroism required in a school teacher and the strength necessary in those days to be a housekeeper on a farm, she returned to New Hampton, where she entered the law office of her brother-in-law, J. H. Powers, and began work upon a set of Abstracts of Titles of lands in Chickasaw County.

In February, 1866, she received a commission as Notary Public, since which time she has been steadily engaged as Notary and Abstracter. Her notarial commission was the first issued to a woman in the United States—and supposedly the first one ever issued to a woman anywhere.

She is a member of the First Congregational Church of New Hampton, and is closely identified with its Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society. She was for twenty years an active member of the W. C. T. U., and is still identified with the Non-Partisans.

HESADIAH STEBBINS emigrated from Massachusetts to Chautauqua County, New York, in 1806-7, and settled near the site of what afterwards became known as Kensington. He purchased a farm of two hundred acres and became a successful and enterprising farmer. As was customary in those days, MR. STEBBINS also entertained travelers in his humble home, the tide of western emigration being so great as to fill all the public houses to overflowing. In 1821 he abandoned his original log cabin and moved just across the road into a newly erected frame house.

JOSIAH STEBBINS served as a soldier in the war of 1812, going at the age of seventeen as a substitute for his brother Thomas.

A few years after his marriage, while superintending the construction of a barn, he was struck on the head by a falling timber, receiving injuries which necessitated a surgical operation which was considered one of the most remarkable in the annals of the state. The skull was trephined and three pieces of bone were removed. The operation was performed before the days of anaesthetics, and the surgeon called for six men to hold him. He told the surgeon he could not submit to being held. The surgeon then explained that, working in such close proximity to the brain, the slightest movement would result in death. MR. STEBBINS assured him that he would not move, and so the operation was performed. Physicians who examined his head in later years expressed the opinion that there was no other man living with such a hole in his skull. It never in the least degree affected his physical or mental health.

In 1838 he went to Illinois, and, being impressed with the prospects of the west, decided to remove there. The following June, with his wife, ten children and his aged mother, he began the journey, with Marseilles, Illinois, as their destination. His wife and mother traveled in a carriage, but the rest of the family made the trip in covered wagons. When his mother, who had made her home with him since her husband's death, determined to accompany her son west, her other children made every effort to have her remain with them. So sure were they that she would regret her undertaking that they followed the travelers for three days, in order to take her back with them; but she remained firm, and finally they returned without her. She was a small woman, but very active and in excellent health despite her eighty years. She finished the journey the least fatigued of any of the party.

All the implements, household goods, etc., had been shipped from Buffalo to Chicago, via the great lakes.

After a four weeks' journey the travelers reached Niles, Mich., where they stopped to visit MR. STEBBINS' sister, Mrs. Roxey Stebbins Webber. At that time that section of Michigan was suffering an epidemic of malaria. The family were stricken with it, rendering them unable to resume their journey. The aged mother succumbed to the attack and was buried in the cemetery at Niles. MR. STEBBINS decided to abandon the idea of going to Marseilles, and settled at Niles, which continued to be his home until 1854, when he removed to LaSalle County, Illinois.

He can hardly be said to have been a pioneer of LaSalle County, as the farm he purchased was highly improved in every respect; the house was one of the finest in that section of the country. He became one of the substantial citizens of LaSalle County, a man of uprightness and unswerving integrity. He retired from active labor comparatively early in life.

His pleasant, social nature soon made his home the center of hospitality. After his death the homestead was purchased by his sons, Earl Burr Stebbins and LeRoy Stebbins. The house was unoccupied for some time, but was finally destroyed by fire, together with all the contents.

ELIZA KINGSBURY (CASE) STEBBINS was a woman of rare character, possessing excellent judgment and rare executive ability; noted among her circle of acquaintances for a remarkable memory and a profound love of study. She was a woman of quiet, dignified bearing and perfect self-control, retaining the full vigor of her mental powers until the last days of her life.

PORTER CASE STEBBINS was a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, enlisting at Seneca, Ill., August 7, 1862. He participated in the battles at Perryville (Ky.), Stone River, Calhoun (Tenn.), Chickamauga, where he was wounded; Mission Ridge, where he received a bullet in the neck, and Knoxville, being sent there to relieve General Burnside. After the reorganization of the army in Chattanooga he served under General Sherman and participated in the battles at Rocky Faced Ridge; Resaca; Kenesaw Mountain, where he was again wounded; Peach Tree Creek, and Atlanta. He is now a prosperous farmer, practically retired.

LEVI WATERHOUSE resided for twenty-eight years on the farm where he died. He was for many years a willing supporter of the Methodist Episcopal church, and a member of its Board of Trustees.

GEORGE B. FRANCIS STEBBINS was for many years editor of the Cuba Patriot, published in Cuba, New York, which he established in 1862. He is said to have been one of the most eccentric and brilliant men who ever published a country newspaper. Being very small in stature and weighing less than ninety-seven pounds, he was called "a pocket edition of Artemus Ward."

In the fall of 1879 he was appointed Consul at Manila by President Hayes. He desired the consulate in a warm climate, thinking it would benefit his health. Secretary Evarts found a vacancy on an English island in the Indian Ocean, which offered double the salary, and a more suitable climate than Manila. This was offered to MR. STEBBINS, but at the same time he was warned of the excessive heat and frequent earthquakes in the Philippines. MR. STEBBINS, thinking this was a ruse of his political opponents to keep him from accepting the consulate at Manila, replied that he liked hot weather and didn't care a —— for earthquakes. This settled it, and his nomination was confirmed.

CONSUL STEBBINS and his wife arrived at Manila on July 18, 1880, the day on which the earthquake wrought fearful damage to the island of Luzon. He went ashore and remained a few days, but did not allow his baggage to be transferred from the steamer. The young man who had charge of the American Consulate was told to remain at his post, and when the steamer sailed for San Francisco the editor-consul and his wife were among the passengers.

MR. STEBBINS was a clever wood engraver, and many of his newspaper articles were illustrated with original humorous cuts.

JAMES CRAFT STEBBINS removed from Brimfield, Mass., to Charlestown, N. H., in 1829. He began business as a shoemaker, but soon opened a retail boot and shoe store. In 1836 he was appointed deputy sheriff of Sullivan County, and held that office for forty years in succession.

He was also a well-known surveyor and auctioneer, and gained a wide reputation for enlivening that interesting occasion, the "county auction," which often serves as an excuse for a general holiday for the neighborhood, by his witty sallies, which promoted good humor as well as successful sales. He also served on the school committee and in other town offices.

CHILDREN:

- RUFUS STEBBINS was raised on a farm. He went to Brimfield, Mass., and learned the tanner's trade, then went back to Vermont and built a tannery, which he operated for quite a while in connection with working his father's farm.

He was a Baptist in early life, but later, with his wife, withdrew and joined the Methodist Episcopal church. They were very earnest workers in the church, and part of the time he officiated as class leader. They held family worship night and morning, and no matter how much of a hurry they were in, the family devotions were never neglected. The Sabbath was kept very strictly; their example before their children and the world was very consistent with their profession.

SAMUEL EMERY STEBBINS remained at home until he was twenty-one, attending the winter term of school about three months, and finishing with a year's schooling at the Academy in the village of Homer, N. Y. After this he taught two winter terms of school in his native town. He moved to Wisconsin, and there he taught two terms of school, working on farms during the summer months. After his marriage he removed to Scott, Columbia Co., Wisconsin, and settled on eighty acres of land, for which he had a patent signed by Millard Filmore. He remained on this farm twenty-one years, then moved to the town of Hampden, Wis. In the fall of 1879 he moved to Hanson County, South Dakota, where he resided until the fall of 1899, when he rented his farm and moved to the town of Alexandria. He succeeded in securing a tree claim adjoining his homestead, so that now he has three hundred and twenty acres of land in a body, ninety acres of it being pasture and one hundred and twenty acres plowed. In the center of the farm he has a house, barn, granary, two good wells and a windmill.

JOHN A. STEBBINS, son of Osmyn Loren Stebbins, was in the 2nd Vermont Regiment during the civil war. After the battle of Malvern Hill he was sent to Point Lookout Hospital. He was discharged from there as incurable, and died in Baltimore, Md., April 14, 1863, from disease contracted while in the service. His mother left her home in Vermont and went to Baltimore to nurse her son. After his death she and her daughters, Helen and Julia, were enrolled as nurses at Jarvis Hospital, Baltimore, and remained there until the close of the war.

Commission of OSMYN L. STEBBINS.

State of Vermont

By His Excellency, Ezra Butler,
 Captain General, Governor & Commander-in-Chief in and over the State of Vermont.

To OSMYN L. STEBBINS ESQ. Greeting.

You being elected Ensign in the 2d company in the first Battalion and 2d Brigade and 4th Division of the Militia of this state and reposing special trust and confidence in your patriotism, valour, and good conduct—I do by virtue of these presents, in the name and by the authority of the Freemen of the State of Vermont fully Authorize and empower you the said OSMYN L. STEBBINS to take charge of the said company as their ENSIGN.

You will therefore carefully and diligently discharge the said duty by doing and performing every matter and thing thereunto relating. You will observe and follow such orders and directions as you shall from time to time receive from the Commander in Chief, for the time being, or any other superior officer, according to the military discipline and laws of this state. And all officers and soldiers under your command, are to take notice hereof and yield due obedience to your orders as their Ensign in persuanance of the trust in you reposed.

In testimony where of, I have caused the seal of this State to be hereunto affixed

Given under my hand in Council chamber at Northampton this 10th April in the year of our Lord Christ one thousand eight hundred and 27 and of the Independence of the United States Fiftieth first.

Ezra Butler

By his Excellency the Gov.
 D. Kellogg Sec.

I, OSMYN L. STEBBINS Do Solemnly swear that I will be true and faithful to the State of Vermont and that I will not do any act or thing directly or indirectly injurious to the Constitution and Government thereof as established by convention so help me God

OSMYN L. STEBBINS.

I solemn swear that I will support the Constitution of the U. S. so help me God

OSMYN L. STEBBINS

Taken and subscribe to Before me this 10th day of April A. D. 1827.

2494. III. Flora Alma, born Mar. 5, 1853; married Henry Wood; William Gilley.

HARRISON STEBBINS was reared on a farm, assisting in its cultivation and at the same time receiving a good education. A portion of his time was spent in teaching.

In 1837-8 he was at Norwich Military Academy. Again in 1840 he was either there or at Norwich University. In 1838-9 he taught a school at or near South Harwich, Cape Cod.

An older brother, Shapley Paddock Stebbins, who was also teaching there, suddenly sickened and died, leaving HARRISON, then only eighteen years old, far from home and kindred, very lonely and heartbroken. Immediately after his marriage he set out for Janesville, Wisconsin Territory, making the trip via the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes. When he arrived at his destination he engaged at first in farming. Later, he purchased a compass, staff and chain, and did much of the surveying incidental to the settling of Rock County and that vicinity—laying out territorial roads, platting villages and cemeteries, running town lines, settling boundaries between farms, etc. He served as County Surveyor during three terms of two years each.

In 1842 he built at Janesville what was then considered a very commodious stone house. In 1844, true to the agrarian instincts of the Stebbins family, he removed to a beautiful farm about twenty miles northwest of Janesville, where he expended much energy, building on it a large stone house and gradually acquiring a fine homestead.

These earlier pioneer days were days of the ox team and breaking plow; of hauling grain to Milwaukee, nearly a hundred miles distant; of fighting prairie fires; of going thirty or forty miles to mill; of driving across the prairie in all directions at will; of hauling lumber for building purposes from Milwaukee and Steven's Point; of paying ten to twenty-five cents for letter postage; of exchanging courtesies with the Indians; of having an occasional exciting chase with the prairie wolves, etc. But changes took place very rapidly, and MR. STEBBINS kept abreast of the times. In the '60's he built a grist mill on the Catfish (Yahara) River, thus establishing the postoffice of Stebbinsville, around which clustered a few homes. This enterprise was carried forward energetically in connection with the management of the farm.

In public life MR. STEBBINS served at various times on the County Board, being Chairman of the building committee during the erection of the new court house in 1867. He was a member of the Legislature during the regular and extra sessions of 1853; and held many positions of trust and responsibility.

One of the duties devolving on him during the civil war was the filling of town quotas. He was not a politician, but was ever looked upon in the community as a conscientious man, of sound judgment and solid character. Perhaps his truest inclination was towards a literary life, but circumstances swept him out onto the broad field of action. During his earlier years, his written words frequently slipped into rhyme. The following lines were written by him soon after the loss of his brother, Shapley, at South Harwich.

TO MY BROTHER.

I think of thee, my brother,
 In my sad and lonely hour,
 And the thought of thee comes o'er me
 Like the breath of morning flower;
 Like music which enchants the ear;
 Like sight that blesseth eye;
 Like verdure of the meadow
 In the great arms of the sky;
 Like the rainbow in the evening,
 Like the blossoms on the tree
 Is the thought of thee, dear Shapley, —Is the tender thought of thee.

I think of thee, my brother,
 I think of thee at even,
 When I see the first and fairest star
 Steal peaceful out of heaven.
 I hear thy sweet and touching voice
 In each soft breeze that blows,
 Whether it waft rent autumn leaf,
 Or fan the summer rose.——
 'Mid the waste of that lone heather,
 By the sadly moaning sea,
 I mourn for thee, dear Shapley, —And shall ever mourn for thee.

His wife also possessed much literary taste and inclination, and was of a sunny, buoyant nature, making the joy and light of his home—the dearest spot on earth to him. As host and hostess they were exceptionally genial and hospitable, and many friends were wont to gather within their doors.

Both were of liberal religious faith, and supported cordially services conducted by either Universalists or Unitarians.

FATHER.

He was our leader, keeping in the van
 To set his being 'gainst life's icy chill

And bear the brunt of every risk and ill,
As is the generous instinct of a man.
He wore his honor like a burnished shield
O'er heart intrepid in defense of right,
With such fixed trust as makes a shining light
In all our memory still; and half concealed,
He bore a cherished lyre, yet tuned it not,
Since crowding cares closed 'round with hindering press
Till his chained hand its impulse quite forgot,
And only strove to shelter and to bless;
We love this lyre, and listening, know there rings
A Heavenly echo through its unused strings.

MOTHER.

She made our home. What seemed her handiwork
Was centered in the largess of her soul,
And faithful, tender love did bind the whole.
Around the hearth no lasting gloom could lurk
Before her buoyant, sunny, genial hope,
And strong, unfailing cheer; with tenderness,
With widening thought and growing power to bless,
She sometimes sought the doors that outward ope
Upon the world; at last a patient mien,
Bespeaking silent grief, and thrice-shared joys,
Drew 'round her like a mantle of serene,
Brave years; when with slow steps and little noise,
She climbed a final height to meet the dawn,
And we who loved her saw that she was gone.

SHAPLEY PADDOCK STEBBINS removed in 1844 with his father to a farm in the town of Porter, Rock Co., Wisconsin. He passed his youth assisting with the cultivation of the farm, receiving such education as was available at the time in that vicinity. Here he remained, a faithful, loyal, self-sacrificing son, sharing the burdens and responsibilities of his father's various business enterprises until his father's death.

He inherited the homestead and lived on it until the death of his mother, since which time he has made his home with his sister, Mrs. Flora A. Gilley, at Stebbinsville, Wisconsin.

He is essentially a caretaker; and is a great book lover, with the instincts of an antiquarian. He has been one of those "high privates" in the battle of life, whose deeds are never heralded, yet without whose devotion the victory could scarcely be won.

SAMUEL BISHOP STEBBINS moved to Alleghany County, N. Y., when it was a wilderness, making part of the journey in a sleigh and cutting part of the road through as he came.

He was one of the leading men of the town for years, and thought a "good name better than riches."

JESSE M. STEBBINS was a very successful farmer for his day, and was the pioneer in the raising of fine stock in his vicinity. He was a kindly man, one who sold hay at ten dollars per ton when it was worth twenty dollars in the open market, to help his poorer neighbors out in a year when the crop was limited. He will be long remembered as a man of integrity and worth.

H. L. STEBBINS was a young man of great promise. He received his education in the common schools and Gilbertsville Academy. From his seventeenth to his twentieth year he was a successful teacher in the public schools. In 1859 or 1860 he went overland to California, though scarcely twenty-one years of age. He soon organized an express company in San Francisco, and as its manager he maintained it in successful competition with Wells Fargo & Company until his death.

1793, and in 1806 to Northampton. In 1812 he was elected County Treasurer and continued to hold this office until 1844. DR. STEBBINS was a man of integrity and piety; of diligent attention to the duties of his office and of persevering industry. He was deeply interested in the promotion of all objects conducive to public welfare. It is an honor to the people of Hampshire County that as long as he was able to serve them, they kept their honest and faithful servant in office.

DR. STEBBINS collected and compiled a "Memoir of the Stebbins family," consisting of thirty-five pages, a portion of which he published in the New England Historic and Genealogical Register, Volume five.

charged at his own request from the office of Adjutant in the Battalion aforesaid.

By order of the Capt. General Wm. Doumion, Adj't Gen'l.

FESTUS STEBBINS was Surveyor of Highways for Springfield in 1806.

On December 18, 1798, he signed an agreement to enter into the service on the sloop "Lady Washington," plying between Hartford and Passamaquoddy, his wages to be fifteen dollars per month. This sloop was owned by his father, Joseph Stebbins, and Nathaniel Taylor.

JOSEPH, son of Festus Stebbins.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts. To JOSEPH STEBBINS—Greeting:

original.

You having been appointed a Corporal of a Company of Artillery under the command of Capt. Ithamar Goodman in the Artillery Regiment, first Brigade, and fourth Division of the Militia of Massachusetts; By virtue of the Power vested in me, I do, by these Presents, grant you this warrant.

You are, therefore, with vigilance and fidelity, to discharge the duty of Corporal in said Company, according to the Rules and Regulations established by law for the Government and Discipline of the Militia of this Commonwealth; and you are to observe and follow such orders and instructions, as you shall, from time to time receive from your superior officers.

Given under my Hand, at Belchertown, Seventh day of May One Thousand Eight Hundred and twenty four.

Simeon Dwight Lt. Colonel, Comm'd. 1 Brig'd
4 Division.

On August 15, 1826, JOSEPH STEBBINS was appointed sergeant of artillery on the first Brigade 4th Division of the Militia, commanded by Capt. Galm Ames. On April 28, 1829, he was appointed Quartermaster-sergeant of the 1st Regiment, 1st Brigade, 4th Division of the Massachusetts Militia.

When THEODORE STEBBINS was a young man he went to New York and engaged in the dry goods trade. After many years of successful business, he returned to Springfield. He was a director of the Agawam Bank, and was its president from 1856 until 1862. He was a member of the House of Representatives from Springfield in 1858 and in 1862.

was to be dug from Cincinnati to Lake Erie, would become a second New York City. MR. STEBBINS invested all his capital there; and when the town collapsed he lost everything. Being a painter by trade, he found plenty of employment as long as the town was booming. When the panic came and all the banks failed, he had nothing with which to buy food, and his family were for some time on the verge of starvation. In those days the children considered it a great treat when they were given some biscuits with coarse molasses spread over them.

In his early life DANIEL STEBBINS taught school. About the year 1816 he removed from the state of Massachusetts to the state of New York, and, in 1820, went from there to Pennsylvania, where he bought six hundred acres of land, on which he lived the remainder of his life.

[Copy of a letter written by DAN STEBBINS to his sister, Elizabeth Stebbins.]

Eastwindsor

Dear Sister I now being dismiss'd from my hurry and daily labor of a continual din and have chosen this opportunity of writing to you. There are seasons when it is said that the mind is at ease if that be the case I enjoy such a time at this moment. For here I am alone at the school house, all is still and nothing to disturb my quiet. With the blessing of the Almighty God I enjoy good health at this time. I received a letter from you which I read with pleasure, it informed me you were well which I was glad to hear. I am now in East Windsor teaching a school near your grandfather's. I have visited at Wilbraham twice since I came down here.

Nothing very remarkable occurred since you left there, there was a ball at Mr. Daniel Ishams at Thanksgiving or I might have said the day after it, consisted of about forty couple. The last time that I visited at Mr. Ishams on Saturday and Sunday last Mrs. Isham and Polly talked much of you. Polly says I wish Betsey was here. Polly would be pleased to have you send her a letter if you felt disposed so to do. I went to meeting at Wilbraham last Sabbath. your uncle Cephas went likewise, he takes a great notion to Nancy Tittotson.

I expect to come up and see you next spring if I am favored with health. Let me conjure of you of which your honor and happiness depend and all that is dear and desirable both in this life and the life to come to adhere with undeviating exactness to the paths of rectitude and innocence. Fortify your mind with virtue and enlarge it with a proper knowledge of the useful sciences, the storms and hurricanes of fortune may then attack you but you will always withstand their rage and devide their fury.

True courage consists not in flying from the storms of life, but in braving and steering through them with prudence, in the course of your life you will meet with many beautiful and fair to external appearance but outward forms may deceive you and what your eye may applaud your heart on a more intimate acquaintance may despise.

"There are voices which sing around us,
 "but whose strains allure to ruin. There "is banquet spread where poison is in "every dish. There are couches which in"vite us to repose, but to slumber thereon is "death———"

I must end my letter for the shades of darkness begin to cover the earth therefore I cannot see to write much more. I beg the favor of you to give my love to all my friends and acquaintance and you will oblige your affectionate Brother

DAN STEBBINS JR.

you must write to me every opportunity———"

No. 1317. LEMUEL STEBBINS.

MRS. LUCINDA (GREENLEE) STEBBINS.

MILLS OF LEMUEL STEBBINS (No. 1317).

LEMUEL STEBBINS removed with his parents to the central part of New York state. Before he was of age he went to Pennsylvania with Mr. Russell Webster, to help him drive some stock. When he reached Pennsylvania, his only possessions were an ax and twenty-five cents. He had intended to return to New York, but remained there and bought or articulated for some land, cleared part of it, and built a log house on the ground where the present home stands. He then returned to New York and brought the family back with him, arriving in Cussawago, Crawford County, Pennsylvania, in March, 1822.

Two or three years after his arrival he was married to Lucinda Greenlee. United in heart as well as in hand, they began life's battle in earnest, with little to help them but their strong arms and their abiding faith in God.

Mr. Stebbins prospered wonderfully after his marriage, and added to his farm, first the Eliot farm adjoining his on the west, then the Webster farm adjoining on the south. On the north his land joined that of his half-brother, Daniel Stebbins, who had come to Pennsylvania several years prior to Lemuel's arrival.

As the country became more developed he occasionally drove cattle to the eastern markets, bringing home with him news of the outside world, and some of the new inventions, notably the first cook stove brought into the county, which arrived in its original pieces.

On one of his eastern trips he procured Mulberry settings, and then some silk worm eggs which were carefully hatched and cared for by the older girls. The girls spun the silk on their flax wheels and reeled it into skeins, and their father sold it for them. Besides silk mitts and work bags which they made from some of the silk, they had black silk gowns bought with the proceeds from the sale of the raw silk. However, the climate proved too damp for the tender worms, and they ran out at the end of the third or fourth year.

For a time he was in the drygoods business at Mosiertown. In 1849-50, he in company with his brother John, his son Lot, his son-in-law, Silas Clark, and Minot Boyd, bought curd and ran the first cheese factory in that part of the state. He was very prosperous in this business, and made both butter and cheese of a high grade.

At the time of his death he owned three hundred acres of land on which he had erected a steam grist and saw mill, the first one in that part of the country. He held various town offices, and was an excellent business man, held in high esteem by all who knew him.

Notwithstanding the poor facilities for learning, LUCINDA GREENLEE was so persevering that she obtained a very fair education for those days, and succeeded in storing her mind with choice extracts from the best writers of the day. In early life she united with the Baptist church, and was a consistent and useful member for about twenty years. Subsequently she became a member of the Universalist organization at Conneautville.

Her economy and perseverance were evident in her home life to the material success of the family. Although the radius of her life was uneventful, her trials and sorrows were many, but were born patiently and bravely. To cheerfully accept the duties of life as they came and "make the best of things" was her unquestionable law.

“Jacob Sherman, a Shoemaker by trade, living in Lebanon, Monroe Co., N. York, who married REBECCA STEBBINS, [No. 1299] had a habit of bothering URSULA STEBBINS, then about 13 years old and very bashful, whenever she came into his shop,—although she never went there only when she was obliged to—telling her to ‘kiss’ Benjamin Mason, an employee in his shop, and he would give her a pair of new shoes. It bothered URSULA so she did not know what to do; finally she made up her mind that if he told her again to do it, she would. One day when going home from school, she had to call at the shop on an errand, and there happened to be several persons in at the time. As soon as he saw URSULA, Sherman clapped his hands, pointed at the shoes and said, 'Smack him,' which she did and ran home with the shoes. Sherman never annoyed her afterwards."

MARY WRIGHT STEBBINS emigrated with her parents, from Wilbraham, Massachusetts, to Madison County, New York, where they made their home for some time. After her father's death, they removed to Crawford County, Pennsylvania. The household goods were conveyed thither in an ox-cart, the family traveling most of the way on foot.

She learned to spin when she was so small that it was necessary for her to walk up an inclined board in order to reach the spindle; yet in that way she was able to spin what was considered a full day's work and finish at three o'clock.

She made the most of her opportunities for obtaining an education, and fitted herself to become a school teacher. She taught several terms, receiving wheat, corn, and rye in payment for her services.

After her marriage to EDMUND GREENLEE, they went directly to the log cabin which he had built in the woods on his newly purchased farm in the northeast corner of Summerhill Township, Crawford County, Pennsylvania, his land extending over into Spring Township. A vestige of the cellar of the log cabin is still to be seen. The furniture of the cabin was of the most primitive description, including two splint-bottom chairs, a cross-legged table, four plates, two knives, two forks, two spoons, two cups and saucers, and a teapot. The fireplace was then the only means of cooking, and the baking was done in a tin oven on the hearth in front of the log fire. "Tallow dips" afforded them illumination.

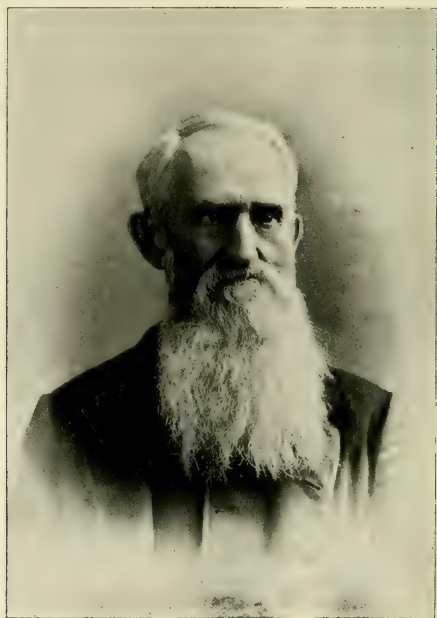

MR. GREENLEE chopped and felled the trees, his wife helping to roll them into piles to burn. When the farm was cleared and sowed to grass, he purchased cows and started a dairy. The business increased and they soon had a dairy of from forty to fifty cows—then considered a large number. MRS. GREENLEE helped in the work connected with the dairy, and one season she milked seventeen cows night and morning in addition to attending to her household duties and caring for the children. She also found time to card and spin wool and flax and weave them into cloth for family use. Her husband, besides milking eighteen of the cows, attended to the making of the butter and cheese.

MRS. GREENLEE was a woman of untiring energy; but did her work intelligently, and made every step count. Whenever she had occasion to go into the pantry for anything, she always remembered to take something in to put away, thus saving time and labor. It was her practice in early life, on wash days, to scrub the floor first, so when the washing was done the house would be clean. She was a model housekeeper, and was very zealous in the care and training of her children, having a keen sense of right and wrong. She was possessed of a decided taste for reading and a remarkable memory. She knew the Bible almost by heart, and it was said that scarcely a passage in it could be quoted but that she could tell where it was found. She was a woman of strong character, a true helpmate to her husband, and an exemplary mother. She died while on a visit to her sons in Chicago, and was buried in Rose Hill Cemetery in that city.

EDMUND GREENLEE, who was of Scotch-Irish descent, was a strong man both mentally and physically. He was a man of very even temper, never allowing himself to become angry. It was one of his characteristics always to return good for evil. As an illustration of this trait the following incident is related:

A neighbor who lived on a farm adjoining that of MR. GREENLEE, cut the brush and elders from his side of the road, carried them across the road and threw them into MR. GREENLEE'S grass for a distance of sixty or eighty rods. This was just before haying time. When it was discovered, MRS. GREENLEE'S idea was to make him pay damages; but MR. GREENLEE said, "I will heap coals of fire on his head." Two or three days afterwards, MR. GREENLEE had occasion to drive to the town of Conneautville, seven miles distant. When passing his neighbor's house, he saw him standing in the yard and called out, "Good morning, John! I am going to town. Is there anything I can do for you?" The neighbor asked him to get a point for his plow, and MR. GREENLEE agreed to do so. After reaching town it escaped his mind and he did not again think of the plow point until he was about half way home. He turned around and went back after it, feeling that he could not afford to miss the opportunity for doing this man a kindness. As he came back he saw the neighbor, handed him the plow point and remarked, "I came very near forgetting it, and turned back when I was half way home." "EDMUND," said the man, "I am very sorry you went back for that point. I don't know why you did it." "I probably would not have found much to do at home as it is Saturday afternoon," said MR. GREENLEE, "and I told you I would get it for you." The man's conscience troubled, and he finally said, "EDMUND, I served you a very mean trick a few days ago. I cut the brush and elders from my side of the road and threw them over into your meadow. I will pick them all out." And he did so, taking much more time than was spent in putting them there. The two men were ever afterwards friends; whereas, had MR. GREENLEE acted differently, they might have been enemies.

While his children were small, MR. GREENLEE was very strict with them, although very kind. Naturally the twin brothers, Ralph and Robert, were always into some mischief, and their father frequently had occasion to promise them punishment. However, he would never administer the punishment at the time of the offense—probably to avoid any display of temper—but would wait until he had leisure, or until a rainy day, when he would say, "Well boys, I guess we might as well settle up now," the meaning of which they well knew. After spending some time in talking to them and giving them advice, he would proceed to balance accounts, giving them punishment for each promise he had made them.

He was a very industrious man, and possessed considerable inventive genius. He invented the first machine for milking cows, which consisted of a receiver with two air pumps and four stop-cocks, from which tubes ran to the cow's teats, the milking being accomplished by the suction from the air pumps. It worked well until the milk was partly exhausted from the cow's udder, when it would collapse and the milk stop. He was unable to remedy this and the machine consequently did not prove a success, although before he learned this difficulty he was offered quite a large sum of money for the invention. He also devised and manufactured machinery for making all of his own cheese boxes and butter firkins; and in 1860, at the time that Drake first struck oil at Titusville, MR. GREENLEE adapted his machinery to the manufacture of oil barrels.

In the latter years of his life, MR. GREENLEE endeavored to construct a machine which he called the "Great American Combine," for planting and harvesting most kinds of grain, including corn, digging potatoes, and doing different kinds of work. He built a model, but never completed it.

He was a public spirited man. He was one of the organizers of the Methodist church in Summerhill Township, now known as "Smith Church," for which he gave the land and furnished a large part of the lumber and materials with which it was built.

His death occurred at the old home, and his body was taken to Chicago for interment by the side of his wife in Rose Hill Cemetery.

JOHN ALLEN STEBBINS, at the time of his death, owned over one hundred acres of land where he had always lived. He did something in the way of buying and selling cattle, and was also engaged with his brother Lemuel—and others—in cheese-making in 1849-50. He held various offices and was a highly respected man.

His son, WHEELER D. STEBBINS, enlisted in the 2nd Pennsylvania Volunteer Heavy Artillery, Company A., March 23, 1864. This regiment was later divided and remained in the 2nd Provisional Heavy Artillery of the Army of the Potomac, in which he was a corporal of Company G.

During the charge on the Rebel works in front of Petersburg, Va., his knapsack was shot off his back. While placing the colors on the Rebel breast works, the color guard having been either killed or wounded, he was shot in the left shoulder and knocked down, just after he had planted the colors. He was taken to the hospital at City Point, Va., and afterwards to Mt. Pleasant Hospital at Washington, D. C., where he died. He was buried in the National Cemetery at Arlington Heights.

JERE STEBBINS, who flourished in Ramapogne street about 1780, was a man of large business capacity. He kept a tavern and store; had a large farm; manufactured earthen ware and saltpetre, and with Moses Day, was extensively engaged in boating on the Connecticut River.

He exchanged his goods with the farmers for their productions. Among his commodities for sale were some small grindstones, which were leaning against the outside of the store. One day Thomas Phillips got a farmer to enter the store and inquire of MR. STEBBINS how much he paid for cheese. The price was named and the farmer promised to bring one in. Phillips and his comrades, in the meantime, had papered up a small grindstone outside the store, and the farmer delivered it upon the counter while Phillips and his comrades stood watching for the explosion of the merchant as he opened the package.

He was Representative of West Springfield in 1804 and 1808; and was Postmaster from Dec. 18, 1802, to Feb. 1817.

His son, Benjamin, was appointed Postmaster Feb. 19, 1817, and after his death was succeeded by his brother, Miner, who was Postmaster from Oct. 26, 1819, to Aug. 27, 1824.

LEVI STEBBINS kept a grocery store for about two years in Springfield, Mass. He studied medicine in the Allopathic School, but, believing that this school required the use of too much poison, his conscience would not allow him to continue in its practice. He took up the Thompsonian practice of medicine which, in later years, he combined with Homoeopathy.

In 1845 he moved his family in an ox wagon to East Troy, Wisconsin, and located on a farm three miles west of the town. He bought the farm in partnership with his brother-in-law, Lyman Witherell, and erected a double log house, where they all lived for two years. He then removed to the town and began the practice of his profession. Being possessed of strong magnetic power he often healed by the laying on of hands and with magnetized paper or water.

His son, LEVI, was accidentally struck by a brick, thrown in fun by his best friend—who was then under the influence of liquor—while celebrating the Fourth of July. He died two days afterwards, as a result of the blow.

MARTHA STEBBINS is a professional nurse. She uses a great many of her father's remedies and is very successful with her patients.

In 1852 EDWARD STEBBINS moved with his family to East Troy, Walworth Co., Wisconsin. After remaining in Troy a short time he moved to Sauk County and took up some land, on which he lived in a log house. Shortly afterwards he gave up the land and removed to Reedsburg, building a shanty, which served as a shelter until he built a substantial frame house. The family, being continually troubled with ague, were compelled to seek another climate, and, in 1856, returned to their eastern home in Massachusetts.

ANDREW J. STEBBINS was educated in the district schools. At the age of twenty-one he went to work on a farm. In 1852 he moved to East Troy, Wisconsin, and bought a farm, on which he lived about two years; then, after the death of his wife, he went back to Massachusetts. He returned to East Troy, sold his farm, settled up his business, and, about 1858, he moved to Richland, Wisconsin.

In 1864 he started for Denver, Colorado, with an ox team, his purpose being to dig for gold. After staying at Denver for a few days, he went to South Park—about seventy miles from Denver—where he prospected for about three months.

Becoming discouraged he went back to Denver; thence to Arizona. Stopping at Maxvill's Ranch he took a contract to dig a large ditch for a flouring mill and remained there a few weeks. From there he went to Santa Fe and Albuquerque; thence to Fort Wingate, where he camped on an extinct volcano, remaining there for a week or two. Here he "seemed to hear a voice" saying "Go back!" He took the advice, sold his team to a Mexican for one hundred and twenty-five dollars (which was a big price at that time), and turned his face toward the East.

Reaching Fort Leavenworth, he worked four months near the fort. He took up a forty acre homestead thirty miles north of this point, on which he lived for five years. He then traded this property off for a span of horses and started for Wisconsin. His son was with him all this time, but became insane over the loss of his money.

After spending about three months in Wisconsin he started for Northern Minnesota, arriving in Wrightstown in the fall of 1875, where he took up a homestead. After making some improvements he sold his right and built a cabin—where he still lives.

He had saved a small sum of money for his old age, but robbers broke into his cabin while he was away and stole it, leaving him penniless.

EDWARD STEBBINS was postmaster at Hadley, Mass., for a number of years, and was also proprietor of a drug store and a general store. When a young man he learned the carpenter trade and worked at it at different periods during his life.

At different times he taught a singing school. He also led the choir in the Congregational church of Hadley. All of his musical knowledge was obtained through his own efforts, as he never had the advantage of any lessons.

He built his home in Hadley on the site of the Hopkins Academy building. When the land was wanted for the Academy building he removed it to its present site. It was sold after his death.

MR. STEBBINS was a man of a quiet, retiring disposition, and greatly respected. He was a faithful member of the Congregational church.

Profession, physician. Resided at Springfield, Mass.

In 1818 MR. JOHN BYLES MARSHALL STEBBINS attended the medical college at New Haven, Conn., and studied with Dr. Dwight, of Hadley, but was obliged to give up his profession on account of his health.

He then went to Monroe, Michigan, remained one year and returned to Springfield, where he became a clerk in the office of the Connecticut River Transportation Company (John Cooley & Co.), whose boats plied between Springfield and Hartford. He afterwards became a member of the firm.

His uncle, Pelatiah Bliss, being in feeble health, made him an offer of the homestead on Main street, the lot extending to the Connecticut River, and the meadow lot on the east side of Main street, now Congress street. He also had the care of his aunt, Mrs. Bliss. At her death the property all reverted to him.

FRANCES B. STEBBINS was educated in the common schools of his native town, at Hudson, N. Y., and by Rev. Timothy Cooley, D. D., of Granville. He studied law with John Mills of Southwick, Mass., and with John Davis and Levi Lincoln at Worcester, where, Mar. 10, 1824, he was admitted to the bar.

Hist.
Brimfield,
p. 186.

He settled in Brimfield, where he held the office of Justice of the Peace in 1825, and acted as town clerk in 1831, 1833, 1834 and 1835. He remained there ten years, then removed to Ware, Mass., and formed a partnership with William Hyde. Here he remained until May, 1840, when he removed to Oswego, N. Y., and gave up the practice of law.

To secure a debt he was obliged to take an interest in a flouring mill, and he engaged in the business with Richard Talcott, and alone, until his death. He was a lawyer of studious habits and attentive to all the duties of his profession. He became a skilful practicing lawyer, and attained a good standing as an estimable and useful man.

JOSEPH BARNARD had a rolling mill in Walpole, N. H., and later in Troy, N. Y.; later he lived in Philadelphia and St. Louis. He was a man of great physical power. The following story is told of him: While riding in a stage somewhere out west, two strangers who were Southerners—his fellow travelers—began telling stories of great feats in lifting. One of them had been to Deerfield, Mass., and had seen a friend of Deacon Armes lift a cannon weighing eleven hundred pounds. The friend doubted—when BARNARD put in his word. "You may believe it," said he, "for I am the man that did it."

No. 39 in Deerfield, Mass., was first owned by John Baker. It was afterwards owned by Eldad Bardwell, whose heirs sold it to Joseph Stebbins [No. 731] in 1799. Joseph conveyed it to his son, DENNIS, whose assignees sold it to Henry Stebbins, and he sold it to Louisa, Lucy and Mary Stebbins, who still held it in 1894.

DENNIS STEBBINS acted as Assessor in 1831 and 1833. He was an extensive manufacturer of brooms. His shop was used as a schoolhouse in 1842, and soon after moved to Lot No. 1, where it was occupied as a dwelling. It was taken down by Elbert Amidon when he built in 1867. p. 853.

The portraits of MAJOR DENNIS STEBBINS and wife were exhibited at the fourth meeting (Feb. 25, 1873) of the P. V. M. A. at Deerfield, "among the venerable fathers and mothers of the town." We have endeavored to get copies of these portraits for reproduction in this book but have been unable to enlist sufficient interest among their descendants. N.E.H. & G.

3166. X. Lauraette Ashley; born May 18, 1837; married Thomas M. Lamb.+

ZEBINA STEBBINS received his portion of his father's farm and erected thereon, in 1819, a house to which he brought the companion of his choice. He early conceived the idea of utilizing the forces of nature, building three dams across a brook that ran centrally through his farm and emptied into the river at the "Point." He was selectman in 1832. In 1833 he erected near the river, at the head of the "Swamp Lot," a flour and feed mill, 20x30 feet, building a large overshot wheel as a transmitter of power. The patronage of the people required the mill to be run night and day. In 1843 the mill was destroyed by fire. He then purchased from Colonel Asa Stebbins "Meadow Mills," on Deerfield River. This property comprised a flour and feed mill—to which was added a shingle and saw mill—and a farm on which he built, in 1854, a commodious residence. In 1857 he sold the mills and retired from active business life.

He was a man of indomitable energy and possessed of strong personal characteristics.

 3214. II. Minnie Frances; born Jan. 24, 1864; married Eldridge F. Lockwood.

GAVIN L. N. STEBBINS was brought up on his father's farm, receiving about the usual advantages of children in those days—a great deal of work and very little schooling. In 1869 he removed to the state of Michigan, where he spent two years with his brother in St. Joseph County. He then moved north into the woods, where he maintained his family by peeling hemlock bark. Through his industry he was able to purchase land, which he cleared and on which he built a home.

- 3262. IX. Maryette; born Mar. 20, 1839; married John Mack.+

OLIVER STEBBINS, at the age of six years, went to live with some of his mother's people, at Conway, Mass. He earned his own living, and when nineteen years old went to Barre, Orleans County, New York, where he bought a piece of land, on which he built a log house. He cleared part of his land, put in some crops, fattened his pork and did his fall work; then he shouldered his gripsack and traveled back to Massachusetts to claim his promised bride. What goods he had were packed on a sled, and he drove to his new wilderness home—a distance of about four hundred miles. His furniture, which he made himself, consisted of two stools, a table and a bedstead, made by boring holes in the logs and driving poles into them.

He afterwards removed to the town of Royalton, where he lived the balance of his life.

Three of his sons, William, John and Asa D., served in the army during the Civil War; William died while in the service.

 3284. X. Charles Edward; born Oct. 19, 1847; married Elizabeth McClintock.+

After his marriage LYMAN STEBBINS resided in Middlesex, New York, until 1830, when he removed to Ohio. After living one year in Auburn, he settled at Mantua, Portage County.

When the lead mining fever broke out in Northern Illinois, he sold his farm in Mantua and, in 1846, went to Galena, Illinois. It took three weeks to make the journey in a covered wagon, which was the usual way of traveling in those days. They stopped nights at taverns and traveled over "corduroy roads," through the Maumee Swamp in northwestern Ohio. At one place in Indiana they stopped at a log tavern in the wilderness. It was kept by a woman who came in from hunting as they arrived, wearing on her head a coonskin cap with the tail dangling from it, carrying a gun on her shoulder and followed by her hounds. The house, which stood in the midst of a dense forest, was very old, and the chinking had fallen out from between the logs. Beds were made on the floor for the tired children, but they could not sleep for the howling of the wolves that surrounded the house and occasionally would thrust noses and paws through the crevices. The anxious parents drew the beds away from the walls and sat up all night to guard their little ones.

They remained in Galena until 1855, but, as the family suffered greatly with malaria while there, they removed to Apple River, Illinois.

MR. STEBBINS was prominent in church, educational and political affairs, and was greatly respected by all. His widow made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Olive Grumme.

LOREN STEBBINS, after a brief residence in Vermont and in Yates and Livingston counties, N. Y., removed in 1828 to Sherman, near Waite's Corners. In 1873 he removed to the village where he lived until his death.

The Free Baptist Church of Sherman, N. Y., was organized in 1835 by Elder Levi Rexford. The persons constituting the church at its organization were:

Dexter Stebbins and Eliza, his wife; Moses Stebbins; Samantha Stebbins; LOREN STEBBINS; Irene Stebbins, who was the mother of Dexter, Moses, Samantha and LOREN STEBBINS. Among its early members was Sally Stebbins, wife of Moses Stebbins. The first clerk was Dexter Stebbins, and the present clerk is Aaron Stebbins. The first deacon was LOREN STEBBINS, who held the office until the time of his death. He was the first member of the Stebbins family to settle in Chautauqua county. LOREN, Dexter and Moses bought their land from the Holland Land Company, which bought all of Chautauqua county from the government.

After his marriage, LOREN STEBBINS, accompanied by his wife, removed to Chautauqua county, New York, making the journey of almost one hundred and fifty miles, through an almost unbroken wilderness, with an ox team, having a cow following. They settled on a farm one-half mile south of Waite's Corners, now owned by their son, Mr. Carlos Stebbins. Soon after coming to the new home Mrs. Stebbins made a profession of religion, and when the Free Will Baptist Church of Sherman, N. Y., was organized in 1835, she became one of its members and remained a faithful worker in the church until the end of her life.

WILLIAM J. STEARNS served through the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company H, 112th Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry.

SYLVESTER STEARNS settled in Sherman, New York, taking up a one hundred and twenty-five acre tract of dense forest. He cleared a place on which he built a log house, then began clearing the rest of the farm. In the meantime he manufactured salt or potash in order to pay his taxes and other expenses. He often made a journey on foot through the woods to Westfield—a distance of seventeen miles—to have an ax “jumped,” the nearest forge being at that place. On these trips he would carry a bag of maple sugar on his back, which was taken in payment for the work done on the ax. The Indians and wild animals being plentiful, this journey was a very hazardous undertaking.

CHAUNCEY M. STEBBINS, accompanied by his wife and his father and mother, left Conway, Mass., in the early '30's, to seek their fortunes in Michigan. A log house and barn were built upon a little clearing in the dense woods of the eastern part of what is now the city of Ionia. Later, they removed to Clinton County, where he served as supervisor of Essex Township. Ionia again claimed these sturdy pioneers and they located upon land now owned by the state for the House of Correction and Asylum for Criminal Insane. They bravely endured all the hardships incident to pioneer life.

From Bigelow
Gen.
p. 259.

ASA BIGELOW was born in what was long known as the "Old Mansion," three and one-half miles south of Colchester Borough, and was educated at Baron Academy. Though the large homestead with the numerous farm hands and colored servants, and the various occupations of an old time estate consisting of four separate farms, blacksmith shop, cooper shop, saw mill, orchards, flocks and herds were always entertaining to him, yet the active farm work was never much to his taste, and when about sixteen years of age he entered the dry goods store of a relative at Norwich, Conn., in the capacity of clerk. After a short experience he resigned this position—much to the regret of his employer—and accepted another in Hartford.

After spending a few years in Hartford, he was invited to Savannah, Georgia, where, as well as in the city of Augusta, he became known among the cotton planters as a most active, courteous and successful man of business. His connection with the cotton trade—then rapidly rising into its wide importance—finally took him to New York, where he continued in business for more than fifty years, first as a cotton broker and afterwards as agent for fire insurance companies.

MR. BIGELOW was a member and one of the founders of the Mercer Street Presbyterian church of New York. He removed to Brooklyn, where all the latter years of his life were passed.

JANE B. STEBBINS was the daughter of an old and highly respected New York merchant, who is now (1888) living, as are four or five of his daughters and one son.

3397. XI. Henry Wallace, born June 7, 1824, married Frances A. Mears.+
3398. XII. Emily Sarah, born May 31, 1830.

LEWIS STEBBINS purchased a small place consisting of twenty-five acres of land in the town of Beekman, Dutchess County, N. Y., which had a site for a tan-yard thereon, where he could pursue his calling to advantage, he being a tanner and currier of leather, and a shoemaker, both of which were considered necessary for a complete tradesman. Here intemperance and other vices prevailed to an alarming extent, and he, with two or three others, formed the first temperance society in that county at a time when there were not more than three or four such societies in the state.

Here he lived until 1817, when he removed with his family to Scipio (now Ledyard), Cayuga County, N. Y., and purchased a farm about a mile from the village of Aurora. He remained there until 1823, then removed to Jerusalem (in Bluff Point), Yates County, N. Y., where he resided until 1837.

He removed from Yates County, N. Y., in the month of November, 1837, to Kalamo, Eaton County, Mich., and lived there until 1856, then sold his farm and removed to Dowagiac, Cass County, Mich.

The two principles—patriotism and religion—were closely allied in his heart, and his whole life was a demonstration of the fact that these two principles are not incompatible.

FRANCIS L. STEBBINS went to Ann Arbor, Michigan, where he commenced and was, in 1863, still engaged in the mercantile business.

JOHN WILSON STEBBINS succeeded his father in the banking business in New York City. He was a talented literary gentleman, and was one of the founders of the Mercantile Library Association, of New York City, of which he was president from 1832 to 1834. In June, 1834, as a token of appreciation of his services, the association presented him with two beautiful silver pitchers which are now in the possession of his nephew, Mr. Charles Henry Stebbins, of New York City. After MR. STEBBINS' death the association erected a tablet to his memory.

EMMA STEBBINS' earliest artistic work consisted of amateur portraits of her friends. For several years she devoted herself to painting in oil and water colors, working also in crayon and pastels.

She subsequently turned her attention to sculpture. In 1857 she went to Rome, Italy, where she studied under Paul Akers and other masters. After executing a number of statuettes—one of the most pleasing of which is a figure of the boy Joseph—she completed a bust of Charlotte Cushman (1859), a statue of Horace Mann (1860), now in Boston, one of Columbus, a fountain representing the "Angel of the Waters" (1860-2), which is now in Central Park, New York City, and a bust of her brother, John Wilson Stebbins, now in the Mercantile Library of New York City.

While in Rome she formed friendships with Charlotte Cushman, the actress, Harriet Hosmer, and others of the American colony. In 1870 she returned to New York in company with Miss Cushman. After Miss Cushman's death in 1878, MISS STEBBINS, according to the request of her dead friend, edited her letters and a memoir of her life.

HENRY GOULD STEBBINS entered the United States Army as Captain of Company G, 2nd Regiment, New York Mounted Rifles, from Niagara County, New York. He participated in most of the important engagements of the Army of the Potomac from the time General Grant took command until the close of the war. He was captured by the rebels in a charge of his regiment upon the Confederate fortifications in front of Petersburg, Virginia, and for nine months was confined in Libby, Dansville and Salisbury prisons.

Through the influence of Henry Garland Stebbins, then Member of Congress from New York, and Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, who was also one of the Commissioners of Exchange for the exchange of prisoners, MR. STEBBINS was exchanged and reached his regiment just before their engagement in the Battle of Five Forks. At the close of the war he was mustered out as major.

After the war he went into business in Chicago, and remained there until his death.

LEONARD CLIFT STEBBINS was commissioned as paymaster in the United States Navy and attached to the Mississippi Squadron, under Rear Admiral Porter, until after the opening of the Mississippi River, when he was transferred to the Gulf Squadron under Rear Admiral Thatcher. He was mustered out of the service in the fall of 1865, after the close of the war.

He then engaged in business in Chicago. Since 1890 he has been president of La Compania Azucarera Mexicana—a cane-growing and sugar-refining company in Old Mexico. MR. STEBBINS divides his time about equally between Mexico and this country.

ELIJAH STEBBINS was town representative from Vernon, Vermont, in 1821. He was appointed Justice of the Peace in 1830, which office he held for nine years.

A second church of Vernon was built about one-fourth of a mile east of the first one, by the Unitarian and Universalist societies, each to have the privilege of occupying it one-half of the time. The building committee consisted of Marshal Whithed, Jarus F. Burrows, A. H. Washburn and ELIJAH STEBBINS. The church was raised in 1844, finished in 1845, and cost thirty-three hundred dollars. CAPTAIN ELIJAH STEBBINS, Marshal Whithed and Mrs. Sally Hunt, widow of Arad Hunt, Esq., gave a bell. The names of the donors are cast upon it.

MAJOR ELI LEE never sought office, but he was often chosen to fill the responsible positions of Lister, Selectman and Justice of the Peace, and from 1830 to 1840 was sent several times to the Legislature. He finally declined the nomination when urged to accept it, saying that others were more worthy to fill the place than he. He was humble in his disposition and views, honest, industrious, temperate, generous, charitable, and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his fellow-citizens.

JOHN STEBBINS was a prominent citizen of Vernon, Vermont. He was Justice of the Peace, and held many offices of honor and trust, several times representing the town in the State Legislature. He was a man of the most absolutely strict integrity. While he shunned general society, he was a genial and delightful companion to the few whom he admitted to close friendship.

His writings, in consequence of much travel and observation, are clear and forcible, also instructive and entertaining, and are mostly of a historical character.

CHARLES D. STEBBINS, when about twelve years of age, removed with his father to Lancaster, New Hampshire, where they settled on the O'Donnell farm on the hill near South Lancaster.

In 1831 he settled upon his farm—now known as "Stebbins Hill"—where he resided until his death, almost fifty-four years. He was a man of sterling integrity and decided views, a good neighbor, a warm friend, and given to hospitality.

MRS. STEBBINS was for years a member of the Congregational church. She was possessed of rare intellectual powers. Her strongly marked religious character made her life worthy of imitation.

- 3590. V. Helen Stickney, born Oct. 16, 1850; married William Edward Ingerson.+

CHESTER STEBBINS removed with his parents in 1816 to Lancaster, New Hampshire. He purchased what was known as the Gotham farm, near Lancaster, now owned by Shepard A. Knight. His health proving inadequate to a farmer's life, he bought the premises now occupied by L. H. Parker, on Middle street. He remained in the town and became an influential citizen. His townsmen signified their appreciation of his worth by repeatedly bestowing upon him the important offices of tax collector and overseer of the poor.

By trade he was a carpenter, and as such contributed to the natural comfort of many homes in Lancaster and adjoining towns. For thirty years of his life he was a faithful adherent of the Methodist Episcopal church.

ARAD STEBBINS BAKER attended the first school established in the town of Winchester, N. H.; and also was in school at Hinsdale, N. H. When quite a young man he commenced peddling brooms from Hadley, Mass., where a great quantity of broom corn was raised.

For some time he worked in a hotel for Augustus Smith, where he first met the lady who afterwards became his wife. They lived on a farm in Northfield until the spring of 1874, when they moved on to a small farm which they had purchased in S. W. Winchester, N. H., and within a few years bought additional land, making quite a good sized farm.

He was known far and near as a good farmer, very particular about his work and raising excellent crops, but he was still fond of peddling brooms, and whenever he could get away from his farm work, he would take a trip up north, driving sometimes as far as Canada. He was known in North Hampton as the "Broom Merchant," and followed the trade more or less until he was more than seventy-seven years of age.

His last years were passed quietly at the old homestead, working on the farm some and taking frequent walks to the neighbors'—sometimes a mile or two over the hills—where he was always a welcome visitor.

CHARLES STEBBINS BAKER began life on the home farm, helping his father, until he was twenty-one, after which he worked several years for some of the largest farmers in the vicinity of Northampton, Mass. He spent some time during the winters canvassing in New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Vermont, where he met with good success.

He purchased the old homestead, and later bought a piece of land adjoining the same. He has been moderately successful in various lines, such as dairying, poultry raising, market gardening, etc.

Near the close of the war of the rebellion, the President issued a call for volunteers, and MR. STEBBINS, with two of his neighbors, volunteered to fill the quota; but, the war ending soon, they were not sent south. He had the honor of volunteering, but not the honor of fighting to preserve the Union.

3691. VI. Byron Granger, born Sept. 28, 1850 (or 1854) (T. R.); married Sadie Gardner.

NOAH GRANGER STEBBINS moved to Texas about the year 1836, receiving a tract of land containing four thousand six hundred acres from the state, in consideration of his becoming a resident, being a married man. He, with others, went out and located it. During the Civil War he lost the title to the land on account of not being able to communicate or to pay taxes. Later, he regained the title and sold the land. He was then in the Mexican War. His wife cooked the meals for General Santee, when he was taken prisoner and said that he was a very smart man.

April 29, 1842, he returned to his father's old homestead at Wilbraham, Massachusetts, which he purchased from the other heirs, where he and his wife lived until their death. The place is now the property of his son, Byron G. Stebbins.

3708. IV. Frederick M., born July 20, 1850; died Dec. 9, 1853.

After his marriage SAMUEL DWIGHT STEBBINS removed to Ravenna, Portage County, Ohio, where he pursued the occupation of farming and stock raising, in which he was most successful and accumulated a handsome competency. After the death of his wife and children, he sold his farm and spent some time in Akron, Ohio; Wheeling, West Virginia; and Hartford, Connecticut, then returned to Akron. In 1877 he removed to Churchville, New York, where he continued to reside until his death.

MR. STEBBINS was a man who held the respect and esteem of all with whom he came in contact. He was honest in all his dealings; just and true as a friend and conservative, rather than aggressive, in thought and action, unless a case presented itself where the public good demanded speedy action, when his decision was immediate and his action decisive.

He was an attendant at the Congregational church, of which for a number of years he was a trustee. He was a Jacksonian democrat and a strong partisan. Though frequently importuned to accept nominations for political office, he refused, though often sent as a delegate to his party conventions.

His personal appearance was very striking, being tall and very erect—a courtly gentleman of the “old school.”

ORSON STEBBINS lived in Palmer, Massachusetts, for more than half a century. He commenced work on the mill in Thorndike in 1835-6, under the supervision of Mr. Burnett, of Belchertown. In 1845 he settled in Three Rivers. After the mill was burned, May 9, 1864, he was employed in the mill at Thorndike, his residence still being at Three Rivers. He was in 1889 employed by the Otis Company, to make repairs in the Palmer mills.

daughter of Luther Stebbins and Phebe Hitchcock, was born Mar. 12, 1809 (T. R.), at Wilbraham, Mass.; died Sept. 27, 1872, at Waukegan, Lake County, Ill.; married Jan. 3, 1832, at Wilbraham, Mass., to SMITH CALKINS, born Aug. 24, 1807, at Wilbraham, Hampden County, Mass.; died Apr. 15, 1887, at Waukegan, Lake County, Ill., who was a son of Judah Calkins and Sally Edson. Resided in New York; Wisconsin; Antioch and Waukegan, Illinois.

CHILDREN:

3711. I. Eliza M. Calkins, born Sept. 3, 1834; married Henry G. Laevagood.
 3712. II. Sarah A. Calkins, born Feb. 21, 1838; unmarried.

In the spring of 1839 SMITH CALKINS went to the then wild west, where the red men still had their abodes in the forests. He returned in the fall for his family and they made the trip to their new home by way of the lakes, landing in South Port (now Kenosha), Wisconsin. He lived in the town of Salem for over a year, then took up some land under the claim land, near the Antioch, Illinois, to which he moved his family. He lived here until the fall of 1868, when he sold it and removed to Waukegan, Illinois, where he spent the remainder of his life.

Schools were scarce in the country when SARAH A. CALKINS was a girl, and she had to go two miles to school, then only had a term in the summer and a term in the winter. Later, she attended the old Waukegan Academy; and at the age of seventeen commenced teaching in the country schools, which occupation she followed until her mother's health failed. She remained at home to care for her until she was partially restored to health. She then taught again for two years. It became necessary, however, for her to give up her teaching to be with her mother, and she remained with her until her death. Since that time she has lived mostly alone.

ABYRAM STEBBINS, JR., was a carpenter and joiner by trade, and had a shop at Elmira, Chemung County, N. Y., when there were but a few log houses there. Being a man of considerable talent and of much religious zeal, he often officiated in the capacity of a local minister.

He followed his trade until he was sixty years of age, when he engaged in farming.

His daughter, MRS. SOPHIA PEALER, being possessed with due natural and acquired qualifications for teaching, was engaged in that occupation for some time. It is worthy of remark that she was faithful; consulting both the intellectual and moral nature of her pupils. In this respect she was a pattern to school teachers in general, and particularly to those teachers in our Academies and Colleges, who educate the head and not the hearts of their pupils.

Both she and her husband were members of the choir of the Reformed Church, of which she was a member. She took an active part as a teacher in the Sabbath School.

 3767. IV. Margaret Jerusha, born Dec. 10, 1846; married Eugene N. Reed.+

LEMUEL STEBBINS went to North Barton about the year 1838. The country was then almost an unbroken wilderness, and his was the second clearing on what has been known as "Hector Hill." The land was heavily timbered, and it required great energy and persistent effort to subdue the forest and convert it into productive farms. This MR. STEBBINS did with the aid of his wife and growing family, and was rewarded with a pleasant and valuable home in after years.

He was a great reader, a profound thinker, and a man well informed on all subjects coming within the range of his investigation. The close of his life was like the setting of the sun in a cloudless sky—clear, tranquil and serene—confident that it will rise again in a more perfect and eternal day.

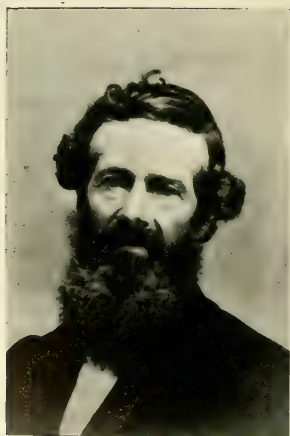

MRS. STEBBINS was a noble Christian woman and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. She was a member of Acme Grange at North Barton.

VALENTINE WATSON STEBBINS volunteered in the United States service on the 24th of December, 1861, in the 10th New York Cavalry, under Captain Peck. While in active scouting service, immediately after the battle of Bull Run, he, with others, was led into ambush by the treachery of their guide and taken prisoner by Stuart's Cavalry. He was paroled and sent to Annapolis, where he was compelled to remain in the most enervating and loathsome inactivity, until the fatal camp disease released him—not only from his parole of honor, but also from those bonds which bind a soul to earth.

MR. STEBBINS was a young man of superior mind. He seemed to have early comprehended and appreciated the objects of life, and the brief period allotted him here he sacredly devoted to its high and noble purposes. He was ambitious of greatness and goodness, and labored persistently to attain them. He taught school winters, and appropriated his small earnings to self-improvement. He communed with good books and good men—studied ardently and profitably that good book written by God's own finger so elaborately spread out in the world before us. With kind and generous hands he reached out to help his fellow men, and many a young man, once poor, forgotten and down trodden, can testify of his efforts to inspire him with just conceptions of life and of his own capabilities, and to raise him to the stature of true manhood. He was so imbued with a sense of right and justice that he was a law unto himself. His enlisting to fight for his country was purely the work of a conscientious regard for duty. While a prisoner at Annapolis he refused to visit home, as others did, without leave, fearing he would violate some army regulation; but he looked forward to the day when peace would again dawn upon the country, and he once more be permitted to pursue the work of perfecting himself in those things so essential to noble manhood.

Such was VALENTINE WATSON STEBBINS—a picture not overdrawn, as his most intimate neighbors and friends can testify. He lived many years in the land, because he lived those years so well. He found “death the liberator of him whom freedom cannot release, the physician of him whom medicine cannot cure.” (Waverly, N. Y., Advocate, Nov. 21st, 1862.)

SERGEANT EDMUND MORRISON STEBBINS of Company H, 10th New York Cavalry, died at Chestnut Hill Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa., June 8, 1864, aged twenty-eight years. SERGEANT STEBBINS was one of the noblest young men of our country. Finely educated, ambitious of perfection in goodness and greatness, surrounded by all the endearments that a well furnished and happy home could afford, he and his younger brother Watson conceived it their duty to enlist, at a time, too, when the government bounties offered no inducement to such a sacrifice.

They went because, as they said, their country had claims upon them in her hour of danger and distress—they went because they realized the great duty they were under to God and their fellow men—they went from motives of the noblest patriotism—from love of liberty, law and free government.

SERGEANT STEBBINS passed through many of the most dangerous and fatiguing campaigns of the war—was engaged in those protracted and perilous raids through Virginia, which have rendered the cavalry of the North famous throughout the world. He had but lately recovered from a protracted illness, when Grant's great movement commenced, and was among the first to engage the enemy in the wilderness south of the Rappidan.

The fourth day of the fight, May 8th—while dismounted and reconnoitering—a terrible volley from thousands of hostile muskets greeted the few scouts, killing and wounding many. A minie ball struck down our soldier friend, passing through his right shoulder blade and lodging in his lungs. He was borne tenderly away by his comrades, and, after much delay and untold suffering, he reached Washington, conveyed thence by way of Belle Plain in an army wagon over extremely rough roads.

From there he was sent to Philadelphia where his father, who had been searching for his wounded son, soon found him. Here he received the best medical treatment and that tender care and nursing which a parent alone can render. While in the camp hospital chloroform was administered and the poor sufferer assured (falsely) by his surgeon that the ball had been removed. Alas! the fatal missile—as was afterwards learned—was still in his lung warring upon his life powers, and gradually bearing him down to the grave. His father bears testimony to the patient fortitude—to the noble and manly heroism with which he endured his last suffering—a heroism unsurpassed even in the most sanguinary strife upon the battlefield. He lingered until the 8th inst., when his soul left the grosser habiliments of the earth-life, to develop its perfections in a higher and purer world, where wars shall be known no more forever, and where death itself is swallowed up in one great and eternal victory.

“They sweetly slumber side by side,
Upon a green and pleasant hill,
Where the morning's sunny tide
First wakes the shadows dark and still:

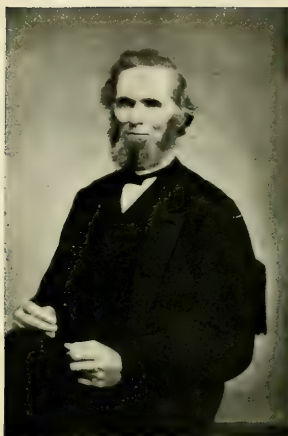

Yes, now they sleep—and O, may ne'er
One careless footstep press the sod
Where moulders those we held so dear,—
The friends of man, the friends of God!”

CORTLAND BLISS STEBBINS began attending school when three and a half years of age, and from the first was nearly always at the head of his class. The following incident indicates his precociousness:

When he was seven or eight years of age the minister, at the close of the morning sermon, gave notice that at six o'clock p. m. he would organize a Sunday School (there had never been a Sunday School in the town). CORTLAND went home, half a mile, got his dinner and at six o'clock he was at the school, and recited the fifth chapter of Matthew, forty-eight verses, without a break.

At the age of thirteen he had mastered all the branches taught in the primary school. Shortly after he entered upon his fourteenth year his father died, and not a shadow of hope of a higher education remained. His principal schooling after that was one term in the Montpelier Academy.

His father owned a sawmill and a cloth-dressing works, also ten acres of land; but, upon the settlement of his affairs, only about nine hundred dollars was left for the support of the widow and five children. Hence a new program was required for CORTLAND'S life in the future. He tried working for a farmer—this was not only against his wishes, but he was found to be not strong enough for the work. He was small in stature and by no means of a strong constitution. He tried a clerkship in a dry goods store, but did not succeed in that.

Thus two years passed away; then some of the men who knew him and knew of his skill in building—having seen him putting up a barn for his mother—advised him to be a cabinet maker, so he determined to make that his business.

Twelve miles from his house was a first-class cabinet maker, in Montpelier, and in January, 1829, he started before daylight, on foot, to see him. He had no money to pay stage fare. The weather was but a little above zero, with three feet of snow in the fields. Two miles brought him to the school house of his early years, and he saw that he could go no further without danger of freezing. The door was not locked, and going in, he found coals in the stove and built a fire. As daylight dawned he started again on his dangerous walk, and had gone but about two miles when the stage overtook him. The driver knew him and told him to get on. At the first stopping place it was found that his nose, both cheeks, and both ears were frozen.

He found the proprietors of the furniture factory—two brothers—by the name of Lyman and Joseph Briggs. The best terms he could get were for an apprenticeship of four years (when he would be of age), at forty dollars a year and board, and three months in the Academy, which offer he accepted, and in the afternoon started for home to prepare for action, walking all of the way, except two miles.

He began his apprenticeship on March 4, 1829—the same day on which General Jackson began his first four years as President.

His active mind could not be satisfied with simply “shoving the plane,” and it was not long before he was writing for the press, in both prose and poetry, upon various subjects, including politics, temperance and slavery. He did this without interfering with his work. He became active in several literary societies; organizing one of young men to write for the press, every article to be criticised by the society before being sent to the printer.

Before he had reached the last year of his apprenticeship he was well known, not only as a writer but as a politician. He had two dollars left of his four years’ wages, but he had a trade of which he was master. He then engaged to work for Mr. Lyman Briggs one year, for twenty dollars a month and board—a good price for that time.

The legislature met in October, and the evening before the opening he was told by a friend that his political opponents believed him to be a candidate for an office in that body. It placed him in a peculiar quandary. If he said nothing, his opponents would say he was “defeated,” and they could do no more should he apply and be defeated.

“I’ll try! Who knows?” He took counsel with the editor for whom he wrote, who interviewed the Governor, and he was appointed to the office by the Speaker of the House. It was rather a unique office, having a connection with both the House and Senate, on the same grade as the members, with the same pay. For the three following years he was reappointed to the same office.

He was regarded as a master in his trade and kept at work. He was not twenty-four years of age and, having acquired about six hundred dollars, he felt that it was time to strike out for himself. Immediately after the close of the Legislature, late in November, 1836, he started westward with his thoughts towards Cincinnati.

Upon leaving home he determined that he would not under any circumstances travel on the Sabbath day. It was now no trivial question. He knew that any day the boats on the lake might lay up for the winter. He took a room at the hotel and found that Mr. T. J. Nevins, a lawyer from Buffalo whose acquaintance he had made on the stage, though but thirty miles from home, would wait until Monday. They reached Buffalo Monday evening, to find that the last boat of the season had left that morning. That Sunday’s rest changed the destiny of his life. To carry out his plan meant a stage ride of some four hundred miles. The only person he knew in Buffalo was Mr. Nevins, and to him he went for counsel. He advised him to stay in Buffalo until spring and spend the time in studying law, offering to make an arrangement that would pay his expenses. He went into his office—and home—and until May faithfully studied the elementary principles of law.

Three months after his marriage he settled in Palmyra, Michigan, twenty-five miles from Toledo, Ohio. There was a railroad from Toledo to Adrian, passing through Palmyra, from which another railroad was commenced. Palmyra was a new place of some promise, but did not grow as he expected, and after a few years fighting with ague and the “hardest times” the country ever knew, he moved to Adrian and continued his trade in connection with his brother Francis.

In 1844 he became the editor of The Adrian (Michigan) Expositor, still continuing with his cabinet business, until 1849, when President Filmore appointed him Special Agent of the Postoffice Department. He had been the first editor to recommend Mr. Filmore for the presidency. President Filmore said, in so many words, that he was “the man who made him President.”

While holding the office, he traveled more than sixty thousand miles in over a dozen states. This brought his twenty years’ vocation in the furniture business to an end. He sold his entire stock to his brother Francois, who also took his place as the editor of The Adrian Expositor, which he had conducted for five years. Later, he was made secret agent of the Treasury.

His office came to an end when Mr. Filmore turned his power over to Mr. Buchanan. He erected a four-story store building, which, in connection with one on each side—erected by other parties—was the finest block in the city of Adrian.

MR. STEBBINS was a busy man. While an editor he managed his shop in which he employed several workmen, and did all of the finishing himself. He was elected City Assessor by a vote of two to one over the candidate of a larger party. At the same time he had enemies because of his opposition to saloons.

In 1857 he was engaged to edit The Lansing (Michigan) Republican, which took him to that city. The circulation of the paper was doubled in six months. He was at the same time private secretary to Governor Bingham.

He closed his connection with that paper July 1, 1858, and accepted a position in the office of Public Instruction, with Superintendent Mayhew. The first work was to write a History of the Educational Funds of the State, and an article upon the Primary School System. The two occupied one hundred and sixty pages in the 1859 edition of the School Laws, and both received high praise and commendation.

In the same year he was appointed Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction, upon the establishment of that office by the Legislature, and he held the position under five superintendents, until July 1, 1878—twenty years.

Superintendent Pettingill’s report of 1893 has the portraits of all the superintendents from the State organization, and with them that of MR.

STEBBINS, and says in part: "His labor of twenty years affected every school district in the state." His correspondence was largely in deciding questions of school law, in which he was generally regarded as good authority. Every superintendent bore testimony to his ability and faithfulness.

At his suggestion various desirable amendments were made to those laws, among which were the following:

He drew the bill—which passed—whereby school directors were compelled to take a census with the names and ages, under oath, thus precluding the possibility of a fictitious number being returned as had sometime previously happened; and another, fixing the penalty of twenty dollars for disturbing a school. He was proud of securing the law giving colored children equal rights with others in the public schools (Sec. 28, School Laws).

He found the financial reports of the districts so meager and crude as to be almost valueless, and formulated a system for the blanks, showing the receipts and expenditures for the several objects, which is still followed (since 1860).

He superintended the printing, and largely the compilation of three editions of school laws, and of nineteen annual reports of over one hundred and fifty thousand volumes. He wrote much for the press on educational and other subjects, and his articles may be found in more than fifty papers in this and several other states.

After leaving his duties at the Capitol he, with others, organized the Lansing Wheelbarrow Company, with which he continued his connection until his death.

Though advanced in years his prolific pen showed no abatement of force, and he retained in every branch of Christian enterprise the same keen interest which for many years placed him among the supporters of all that tends towards the elevation of the community.

He was superintendent of the Plymouth Congregational Sunday School, and also of a mission four miles from Lansing; was church clerk, treasurer, and for three years a deacon.

MR. STEBBINS never claimed to be an orator, yet he many times stood on the platform with effect. Some of his lectures are in rhyme. During the Fremont campaign he wrote a "stump speech" in rhyme. About six weeks before election he read it to a small company, and it was directly called for in all quarters. He read it to large meetings of up to three thousand hearers, twenty-four times, even on the last evening before the election. It may be truly said that it made a public sensation.

While traveling for the Government he regularly wrote to The Expositor, when he should have been asleep; and also wrote a Fourth of July oration for a society of mechanics which was afterwards published at the request of the editor of the Detroit Free Press. A similar request was made by a Chicago editor in relation to a temperance lecture in rhyme.

In 1894 he published the History of Plymouth Church of Lansing, which has been its stand-by from that day to this. The book is a model of church history in every respect; concise, yet giving the leading events clearly and comprehensively. No one can read it without wondering why every church does not have its historian and preserve the records in this substantial manner. Many of his articles may be found in the Boston Congregationalist; the New York Independent; and the Chicago Advance. His manuscript lectures and essays make a pile that may remind one of the joke of "the minister's barrel." He wrote a history of his life to leave for his children, consisting of two hundred and thirty-five pages of manuscript. He also wrote a poem, covering one hundred and ninety pages of manuscript, entitled "The Queen Mountain Lily"; an Indian story founded on fact; also a large bound volume of three hundred manuscript pages of miscellaneous subjects, which he commenced while yet an apprentice. About half is poetic, much of which was published in various papers.

He was a member of the Grand Division Sons of Temperance, and head of the Mechanics Mutual Protection in the United States, laboring hard for the elevation of the mechanic.

He was for five years a member of the school board in Lansing, which, at his suggestion, started a kindergarten school—the first public school of that character in the state. For fifteen years he was a member of the State Pioneer Society, and was also a member of the Ingraham County Horticultural Society.

When Admiral Dewey visited Lansing in June, 1900, as his carriage came in front of Mr. Stebbins' home, it was driven up to the curb, where Admiral Dewey was presented to MR. STEBBINS, whose former home was in Montpelier, Vermont, the birthplace of the Admiral. MR. STEBBINS was well acquainted with the Admiral's parents and showed a scar on his wrist which had been sewed up by Dr. Dewey, the Admiral's father.

SUSAN ELIZABETH BURLEY was a graduate of the celebrated Ipswich Female Seminary, where she spent four years under the training of Mary Lyon and Miss Grant.

ELIZA MARIA SMITH was educated in the common schools and in Mrs. Tracy's Female Seminary in Rochester, N. Y., and taught school a few years. She was very energetic and active, with more than the ordinary executive ability. She was a prominent member of the Congregational Church, noted for her readiness to put her hand and influence to any worthy cause.

In 1881 the Legislature provided for an institution for the training and reforming of wayward girls, to be conducted by a board of two men and three women who were to be appointed by the Governor. For several years before her marriage to MR. STEBBINS she had lived next door to Mr. Charles M. Croswell in Adrian, Michigan. While on a visit at Adrian she chanced to see a notice in a Chicago paper that Governor Croswell had appointed her as a member of the board. She hesitated as to accepting the office, on account of her health, but at the Governor's personal request she accepted, and was elected secretary of the board.

Their first duty was to select a location for the institution. Several cities offered money and land to secure its location, but the board, after visiting them all, decided in favor of Adrian. That enterprising city offered a beautiful situation of forty acres, and three thousand dollars in cash for its adornment.

With the President of the board, MRS. STEBBINS visited several states, to examine similar institutions and learn the best plan for conducting the same. The plans of the buildings and the system of government of the Adrian institution were largely the work of the president and MRS. STEBBINS. She was twice re-elected by the two Governors who followed Mr. Croswell. She visited the school—a hundred miles distant—every month for about seven years.

BLISS STEBBINS, in his twentieth year, commenced business as his brother's clerk, in the Lansing Wheelbarrow factory. In a short time he became acquainted with the business of the concern and started out as a commercial traveler, spending twelve years on the road. After his marriage he opened a millinery store in Lansing, Michigan, which is admitted to take the lead in that line of business.

with his brother-in-law, Lyman Briggs, at Montpelier, Vermont, earning enough money to pay his tuition for several terms at the Academy in Montpelier.

In 1857 he went to Michigan and joined his brother, Cortland Bliss Stebbins, who was carrying on the cabinet business at Palmyra, in Lewanee County (Palmyra then aspired to become the metropolis of the County). Here he remained for about two years, then went to Buffalo, N. Y., in the employ of Cooley and Galligan, cabinet makers. While at Palmyra he wrote articles for the Michigan Whig, and also contributed to the Michigan Observer, of Detroit, and to The Emancipator of New York. While in Buffalo he wrote for The Buffalonian, The Commercial Advertiser, The Republican, and several other papers, and was finally given charge of the editorial work of the Morning Tattler, a society paper, with the understanding, however, that it should not interfere with his work of cabinet making.

Alternating between Vermont, Buffalo and Palmyra (Mich.) for a few years, he finally went to Adrian, Michigan, in the fall of 1841, and from that time until his death resided in that city. With the exception of a few weeks spent in the study of law, in the office of Baker, Harris and Millard, MR. STEBBINS, during the entire period of his residence in Adrian (more than half a century), was continuously engaged in the business of which he had made himself master in his youth. Commencing in a small way, working at the bench himself and always doing what he did in the best possible manner, he gradually built up one of the largest and most successful factories and furniture stores in Southern Michigan. Part of the time he was in partnership with his brother, C. B. Stebbins, and part of the time the two brothers carried on the same business separately, side by side, and always in perfect harmony.

In 1853 the brothers, in connection with S. P. and T. D. Germain, built a four-story brick block on East Maumee street, in the city of Adrian—then the only four-story building in Lewanee County—and in that portion erected on his land, MR. STEBBINS continued in business until the day of his death.

When MR. STEBBINS called on the Town Clerk of Claremont, N. H., in 1853, for his license to marry Miss S. L. Briggs, the clerk asked him if he knew of one Bliss Stebbins, who formerly lived in Claremont. Upon learning that that was his father's name the clerk told him that he had furnished him his marriage license in 1802, when he married Miss Cossitt (over half a century before).

While MR. STEBBINS was thoroughly master of his trade, and always prided himself upon making and keeping for sale furniture made upon honor, and of the very best quality, and in so managing his store and shop as to keep them well in hand and completely under his control, yet his strong literary bias and the urgent solicitations of the proprietors induced him to assume the editorship of the Weekly and Tri-weekly Expositor of Adrian, which position he held from 1850 to 1860, and so long as he lived he continued to write for the press. Few men have made more of their opportunities than he did. For nearly thirty years prior to his decease he spent a portion of each year in travel, and while on these excursions he wrote many interesting and instructive letters of travel, covering the country from Lake Superior and the River and Gulf of St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico.

He was fond of what is termed "outing," and had a cottage at Grand Lake, Presque Isle County, Michigan, as well as one at Sand Lake, Lewanee County, spending a part of each summer at one or the other of these cottages as long as he lived. During the latter part of his life he spent part of each winter in Florida, where he made very thorough explorations of Indian River.

He was a lover of nature, and with a few congenial friends, derived the greatest possible pleasure from these annual excursions. MR. STEBBINS was a public spirited man. He became thoroughly identified with the growth and prosperity of the city of Adrian and the state of Michigan for more than half a century. He was a zealous and active member of the Pioneer Society of the County of Lenawee and also of the State Pioneer Society, contributing during his membership interesting and valuable articles to each society. He was an original stockholder in the Illinois Brass Works and the Opera House.

He served as Alderman of the second ward in the Common Council of the city of Adrian; also for six years, served as a member of the Public School Board, where either as president or chairman of the building committee, he had the leading charge of the erection of the present Central School building, the main features of the plan of which were furnished by him and adopted by the board. He became a member of the old Hook and Ladder Company in 1842, and for several years served as a member of the Volunteer Fire Department of the city, thereby having much to do with the erection of its buildings. He was a member of the committee having charge of the erection of the Soldiers' Monument, furnishing the design which was adopted for the base—and, in short, he has been identified with almost every movement that has been made, which was calculated to advance the best interests of the city during his long residence therein.

In politics MR. STEBBINS was a whig, casting his first vote, in Buffalo, for William Henry Harrison for President. He subsequently became identified with the republican party, doing yeoman service therein as long as he lived. He was an active politician, but never sought any public office. He was a religious man in the best and broadest sense of the word. He was liberal and catholic in his views and a member of the Presbyterian Church. It can be truly said of him that he was an honest, conscientious and good man.

When it became apparent to him, as it did some little time before his death, that he had but a short time to live, he had no fear. For him death had no terrors. He had so lived that when his summons came, he could "Wrap the drapery of his couch about him, and lie down to pleasant dreams."

We give below two of his poems, the first of which was published in the Florida New Yorker and also in the Adrian Daily Times, about 1883; the second was published in the Florida Star, Feb. 1, 1882.

A SOUTHERN MEMORY.

By F. R. Stebbins.

(The correct pronunciation of "Augustine" gives the emphasis on the first syllable.)

Saint Augustine!
Dear old Saint Augustine!
Time-scarred, yet beautiful!—thy face doth seem,
In all my memories, a radiant beam
Of golden sunshine, gilding all life's dream.
Queen-robed Saint Augustine!

Saint Augustine!
Quaint old Saint Augustine!
The blossom perfume of thy orange groves,
Sweet as the blessedness of youthful loves,
Seems calling me, where'er the wanderer roves
From thee Saint Augustine!

Saint Augustine!
Wave-kissed Saint Augustine!
The North Beach glitters with its wealth of shells,
Bathed in the beautiful blue ocean swells,
Which blend their music with the distant bells
Of old Saint Augustine!

Saint Augustine!
Palm-crowned Saint Augustine!
The soft south winds still kiss San Marco's wall,
While in the frozen north I'm held in thrall,
Longing for thee as the white snow-flakes fall,
Blue-skied Saint Augustine!

INDIAN RIVER LONGINGS.

By F. R. Stebbins.

In this clime of snow I'm longing
For the balmy air of June,
As it breathes thro' all the winter
O'er thy waters, fair Lagoon.

In the silent hours I'm dreaming
Of thy song birds, everywhere
Singing out their heaven-born music
On the orange-scented air.

Ne'er did earth hear sweeter music
Since the Christmas song of old,
Than thy morning songs, oh! wild birds,
In your robes of red and gold.

Oh! what gladness! oh, what rapture
Did thy swelling throats outpour,
From the tall pines and palmettoes,
As we sailed along the shore.

Memory brings it all back to me;
And I live those hours again,
When all time from morn to evening
Was one song of glad refrain.

I can hear the palm leaves rustle;
I can see the old pines sway,
As the soft wind bloweth gently
Through their foliage day by day.

I can see the proud banana
Vestured like a tropic queen;
And the oranges and lemons,
Rich in form and golden sheen.

I am dreaming of our boat life;
I am sailing down the shore,
By the curious Mangrove Islands—
Ne'er had life such charms before.

I can see the cranes and herons,
With their plumage white as snow,
And the pelicans, and eagles,
As they ever come and go.

Fair the winds and blue the wavelets;
Serving us as willing slaves;
While from o'er the narrow lowland
Comes the roar of ocean waves.

Down by Fabers; on by Rockledge;
Merritt's Isle, home of the deer;
Past St. Lucie; thro' the narrows;
Lo! the Light of Jupiter!

At Jupiter we moor our boat
Safe in a sandbar sheltered cove,
And many a pleasant hour we stroll
O'er shell-strewn beach or thro' the grove.

Now in the ocean surf and foam
 We cast our lines with sinewy strain
 And the sea bass and cavali
 Struggle on our hooks in vain.

Now a shark and now a bluefish,
 Land we on the shore with glee;
 Thus we vary daily pastime,
 In our boat life by the sea.

* * * * *

The days have passed and sleet and snow
 Are tapping on the window pane;
 But in my room, with fire aglow,
 I live those joy days o'er again.

And while I live in sun, or storm,
 In forest camp, or gay salon,
 I'll ne'er forget the days we sailed
 On thy blue waves, O, fair Lagoon.

SARAH J. (STEBBINS) FRENCH was a superior woman possessed of remarkable natural gifts and one of whom it was truly said, "she was ahead of her time."

In the latter years of her life she was totally blind and it was during this period that she composed the following verses, dictating them to her daughter, Mrs. Hewes:

TO FREDERIC BLISS [BRIGGS] STEBBINS.

Dear Cousin, since I took your hand,
I've longed to see your face;
I listened well to what you said,
And could the STEBBINS trace.

The pleasant hours you spent with us,
I shall not soon forget,
My honored father's relatives
So seldom have I met.

It brings to mind the long ago,
When aunts and uncles came
And visited us so happily,
Dear friends of their own name.

Six uncles of one family
And four dear aunts the same—
I never met them all myself,
But Stebbins was their name.

All, all, have crossed Death's river o'er,
Then what avails the name?
If written in the book of life,
Is it not all the same?

Well, I have wandered far from what
At first I thought to say,
But don't forget to come again
And longer with us stay.

I'd like to take your hand again
And tell you my surprise
When Mary came to me and said, (Her voice seemed very wise).

"Come ma into the other room"
(Said with a quiet air)
"With your new dress here's something else Here is for you a chair."

This is my anniversary,—
The thought flashed through my mind,
But who has figured out the day?
To this I'm wholly blind.

When I sat down I was surprised,
And said, "Why, Where? and What is this?"
"Why, this," she said, "Is from your cousin F., It is all right, I guess."

"How do I like it?" Why, 'tis Bliss,
It is delightful rest,
To sit in such a chair as this,
With such a cousin blest.

What can I render to the friend
Who gave to me this chair,
If I say thanks, that seems so cool,
Has such a common air.

I'll offer though such as I have,
And all with a full heart,
And say, Thank you, this easy chair
Much comfort will impart.

Thanks, cousin, many thanks to you,
For this good gift to me,
Your kindness makes me prize it more,
And would if I could see.

No, I'll not set it far away
Like some old grand heirloom,
But keep it here, and rock and knit
Right in the sitting room.

I'm thinking this will please you best,
And this is now my plan,—
To keep it where it can be seen,
And use it while I can.

Thanks to you, cousin Frederick
And many more the same,
I did not know, but must believe,
There's something in the name.

Dear friend, when we look up and say
"Our Father"—whom thou art—
May blessings rich on you descend
His love fill all your heart.

Now cousin F.—perhaps you are astonished quite,
At this late day and time,
That I should ever think to write,
Such poor old-fashioned rhyme.

These are but threads on which to string
Some thoughts for friends to write,
That will less time and trouble take
Than wait for me to indite.

It is the best I have this time,
I dare not promise better,
If I could see, I'd quit the rhyme
And write you a long letter.

Now please accept this from a friend
Who loves and wishes well,
I hope I have not wearied you,
And now I say farewell.

December, 1888.

ACROSTIC.

To FREDERICK BLISS STEBBINS, ADRIAN, MICHIGAN, by Sarah Jones (Stebbins) French. [Note. When this was composed Mrs. French, erroneously, supposed my middle name was Bliss, whereas it is Briggs. F. B. Stebbins. 1899.]

Friendship, its lovely branches spread
Round all the paths in which we tread,
Ever scattering blessings where it grows
Delightful as the river flows,
Each morn and eve, and every hour
Reflects its kind and gentle power
In fragrance, like a lovely flower,
Cherish this plant of love with care,
Keep this rich gift, the fruit, how fair.

Bright flowers along thy pathway bloom,
Lending to all their sweet perfume,
In shady groves or valleys low
Sweet flowers spring up, and bloom, and grow,
So the Creator's care they show.

So beautiful the stately trees,
Tho' silent, bending to the breeze,
Ever like sentinels they stand
By nature all so rich and grand,
By these we see in Nature's face,
In all a beauty full of grace,
New lines so finely interlaced
Such as no pencilled art can trace.

A bright and pleasant, happy home,
Dear to all such as sometimes roam.
Returning, like the bird on wing
In haste to greet the early spring,
And build and sing the long bright day,
Nor ever think to fly away.

Many pleasant lakes and rivers
In my boundaries I claim
Cities, colleges, and churches
Have acquired a worthy name,
In the country all around us
Grand employment waits a call
And in city, school or college,
Never better time for all.

OR

"My home," you say
 "Both night and day,
 Come then what may Here will I stay."

S. J. (STEBBINS) French.

GLIMPSES OF THE PAST

of and by Sarah Jones (Stebbins) French.

These lines were composed in the spring of 1889—when her poor, sightless eyes refused to close in sleep, and in the days when she was left sitting by herself. She kept adding to the first verse, and kept them in mind until they could be written down for her, "Just for you and the children," she said, but with some hesitation she assented to a wish to send them for the Stebbins Genealogy.

The writer adds, "we do not wish you to think that mother claims for them any literary merit. They are to us very precious, as something that mother thought over and over, while the beautiful sunlight she loved so much could no more delight her outward sense.

Gathered sunbeams she has in her heart, and has laid up treasures where there is no night nor darkness—and where we shall see "eye to eye."

And did you never hear her name—
 That child's in yonder East?
 She was so young and innocent
 And in that home the least.

An orphan, tho' with friends so kind,
 Who love and pity gave,—
 To make her happy and content,
 And from her grief to save.

She was a little orphan child,
 By cruel war made so;
 It was in eighteen hundred-twelve,
 Or near that time, I know.

When she began to lisp "papa"
 He clasped her in his arms,
 And with a father's loving kiss,
 Admired her dimpled charms.

But, O, sad day, her papa's gone
 To meet the foreign foe;
 And child and mother left alone,
 With fears of coming woe.

The days and weeks glide swiftly by—
From him no word they hear,
Then tidings fill the mother's heart
With quick foreboding fear.

The father's sick, they bring him home,
With fever he's laid low,
Friends and physicians do their best,
Their help and care bestow.

They watch around him day and night
With anxious hope and fear,
For some small sign or hopeful word;
But no such word they hear.

Dear friend! He's gone unto his Lord,
To whom his heart he gave;
Look unto Him ye mourning ones
For He alone can save.

Remember His kind words of love,
To such in their distress,
"I'll be the widow's God and friend
A father to the fatherless."

O, the sad rite o'er what remains,
Of one so near and dear,
O, pitying Father, hear our prayers,
And bring Thy promise near.

O, the dark, lonely, empty house,
Now that dear one is gone,
When the sad mother and her child
Are left there quite alone.

Time passes on and brings its change,
As changes needs must come,
That little child, now three years old,
Lives in her auntie's home.

They give her sympathy and love
And with it tender care,
She is their brother's only child
And seems so bright and fair.

The mother still keeps toiling on,
In her own quiet way,
Without a murmur or complaint,
Bearing her burden day by day.

The years roll on their constant round
And bring their cares and sorrow,
This is poor mortals' heritage,—
None ever need to borrow.

That mother's years are forty-one,
And now a change has come,
It seems her Heavenly Father calls—
"My sorrowing one, come home."

Her child, now grown, stands by her bed
While life is ebbing slow,— Asking "dear mother, do you feel Him near?"
She answered, "Yes, I do."

A few more words she faintly spoke,
And then she fell asleep,
To wake with joy in heaven above,
Dear child, why therefore weep?

You ask, Where is that orphan child?
And all about her name;
She went, with friends, away out west,
And lived there with the same.

With the new country she was pleased,
And tho't the climate fine,
The works of Nature were so fair
They seemed to her sublime.

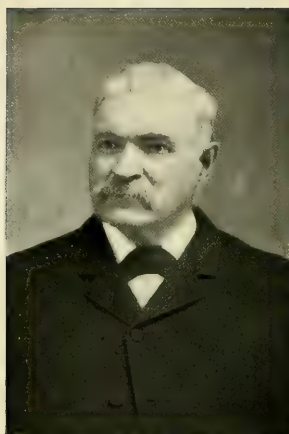

Thus time passed on until at length
An offer to her came,
It was to accept a farmer's hand,
And add another name.

She looked the matter o'er and o'er,
And thought "What would become of me,
When so many have been shipwrecked
Upon that dangerous sea."

She took the risk and did accept,—
A cabin soon they built,
And "Home, Sweet Home," they then did sing,
With friendship and good will.

Long years have passed and then 'twas told,
By some kind friend of one,
They had four children bright and fair,
Two daughters and two sons.

3808. V. Benjamin Woodbury, born July —, 1861 (or 1860); drowned July 4, 1881.

DR. EDWARD SAWYER STEBBINS for about twelve years was general superintendent of the Washburn and Moen Wire Mills of Worcester, Mass. He was the originator of the first wire plating machine, now in common use by all manufacturers of metal plated fence wire. Through his popularity the best citizens of Worcester elected him to the lower branch of the Massachusetts Legislature, where he served one term with distinction.

In the year 1869, Dr. STEBBINS moved with his family from Worcester to Dowagiac, Michigan, and began the practice of medicine. He was one of Dowagiac's foremost citizens until 1877, when he removed to East Liverpool, Ohio. There he engaged in the practice of medicine for twelve years, then went back to Dowagiac, making his home with his daughter, Mrs. McMaster.

DR. STEBBINS was interested in fraternal orders and belonged to Peninsular Lodge, No. 214, F. & A. M., of Dowagiac, and was also a member of Niles Commandery Knights Templar.

His son, BENJAMIN WOODBURY STEBBINS, died the death of a hero. He was on the ill fated Sciota that went down in the Ohio River with an excursion party, on July 4, 1881. He was an expert swimmer and was known to have rescued three women from watery graves that evening and to have started back after a fourth. His body was found in the Ohio River two or three days after, and was removed to East Liverpool, Ohio, for burial.

GILES BADGER STEBBINS, in his eighty-second year, sends the following sketch of his life:

"I spent my first sixteen years in Springfield and Hatfield, fortunately reared in a home atmosphere, where decision tempered by kindly affection, ruled. Common school and academic education was diligently followed up to fourteen years of age, and for a single year later with a private tutor. Of doing chores, sawing wood, garden care, farm work and mercantile life I had some experience.

At twenty-five I was looking towards the Unitarian ministry, but the inspiring enthusiasm of the anti-slavery movement turned me away to become a "field hand"—an anti-slavery speaker, going from Maine to Michigan, in a score of states for years, meeting warm welcomes and angry mobs, and enjoying the friendship of a noble company of men and women among the pioneers in the "martyr days" of abolitionism.

I met in 1850 "confirmation strong as Holy Writ" of the great fact of spirit return and presence and power, and for some years spoke among Spiritualists—in most of the leading cities from Portland and Boston to Washington and St. Louis, and in country districts innumerable. It was inspiring yet arduous work, in a movement that has its human imperfections but has done great good and has opened rich realms of thought and experience yet to be explored, wherein help to a higher life on earth will be found—a life lighted by gleams from the life beyond.

For two years (1859-60) I spoke to an Independent Society in Ann Arbor, Michigan, our movement there opening the way for the Unitarian Society in that university town.

In 1866 we moved to Detroit, Michigan. For some months (in 1879) during the illness and absence in the Azores of my friend John C. Bundy, I became editor of The Religio-Philosophical Journal.

My pamphlets and books on political economy, in advocacy of protection to home industry, have had wide circulation, and in 1870 a winter was spent in visiting a score of Western colleges and addressing the students on those topics.

In 1892-3 I edited The American Economist in New York.

Books I have written and compiled, of which it is needless to say more than to express the hope that they have helped their readers. Amidst strife and wrong I see "the steady gain of good."

Especially I prize twenty years of cordial friendship with William Lloyd Garrison, a noble moral hero.

Precious memories of childhood, with beloved parents and my older sister Emeline come to mind, but the genealogical record is imperfect. It is all that my eight-two years will allow me to give.

GILES B. STEBBINS."

Among Mr. Stebbins' publications are: "Facts and Opinions Touching the Real Origin, Character and Influence of the American Colonization Society," published at Boston, 1853, 224 pages; "Upward Steps of Seventy Years," published in 1890, 308 pages; "The American Protectionists' Manual," published at Detroit, 1883, 192 pages.

From "Women of the Century"
p. 681.

The parents of CATHERINE A. FISH were of the society Friends. Their moral and intellectual life was devoted to emancipation, total abstinence, and moral reforms; and they helped to form the earliest anti-slavery societies.

When CATHERINE was five years of age, they removed to Rochester, N. Y., where she was educated for the most part in select schools, but enjoyed the advantages of an excellent Friends boarding school in a near town, for six months of her fifteenth year. She afterwards taught her brothers and several neighbors' children in her home. She was requested to go before the board of examiners, that the people of the neighborhood might draw the school monies. She then took charge of the first public school in the ninth ward.

Her first reform work was done between her twelfth and fifteenth years, and consisted of gathering names to anti-slavery petitions. When she was fifteen years of age, Pollard and Wright, total abstinence Wasingtonians from Baltimore, held meetings and circulated the pledge in Rochester, and from that date her mother banished all wines from her house. A few years later MISS FISH and her sister kept, on the parlor table, an anti-tobacco pledge, to which they secured the names of young men.

For several years before and after her marriage she was secretary of a woman's anti-slavery society.

She attended the first Woman's Rights convention in Seneca Falls, N. Y., in 1848, where she made a short speech and contributed a resolution in honor of Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell, which was passed the next week in Rochester. She was one of the secretaries of the Rochester convention.

While in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1849-50, she published her first letter in protest against the insubordinate position of women in the "Free Democrat." The letter was the subject of much discussion in various circles. In the early part of the Rebellion, she wrote for the Rochester dailies a number of short letters on the conduct of war meetings and of the war, criticising men and methods and urging that more stress be put upon Freedom and less on Union. She visited the camps when men were to be sent forward and wrote letters to officers, suggesting those duties which were likely to be overlooked. She occasionally organized both anti-slavery and woman's suffrage societies in southern New York and Michigan, and worked in aid societies in both States.

In 1862 and 1863 she entered zealously into General Fisk's work of clothing the refugees on the west of the Mississippi.

During winters spent in Washington, and since 1869, the years in Detroit, Michigan, one of her methods to further Woman's Suffrage has been to write articles for the press, and have slips struck off for distribution; and, at other times to have able arguments of distinguished advocates, put in that form for circulation in letters and meetings. She has been an active member of the National Woman's Suffrage Association from its beginning, and was most of the time on its executive board, proposing many measures, and taking part in hearings before judiciary committees of the House of Representatives, and other bodies; and has repeatedly written letters to National nominating conventions in behalf of the equal representation of women in the State. She was also identified with the association for the advancement of women and signed the call for its first meeting.

the success of the enterprise, and the permanent establishment of what is so much needed by our denomination, a western theological school, will depend mainly upon the character and qualifications of the person placed at its head.

In the exercise of our best judgment we hereby unanimously invite and appoint you to this honorable and important office, in the earnest hope that you will be disposed to accept the appointment and enter upon the new and wide sphere of duty and usefulness it opens to you, and in the firm conviction that the best interests of the contemplated school will thereby be secured, and the great cause we all have at heart—the diffusion of Christian truth—greatly promoted.

We are aware of your happiness and usefulness in your present position, and of the strong ties of mutual affection and confidence by which you and the people of your charge are bound together. This is the only consideration that has made us hesitate in making this appointment. It is painful to us to propose anything that may lead to a dissolution of these pleasant ties.

But we all owe a duty to the great general cause of Christian truth and righteousness, and a “school of the prophets” has always been admitted to take precedence of an individual church.

We need not remind you, or your people, of the great demand there is for more ministers of our faith, well educated and of the right spirit and character. We need not remind you that the only theological school we have, sends forth but few preachers, scarcely enough to meet the ravages made by death in our New England parishes. We need not speak of the pre-eminent, the absolute importance of a good western theological school to the progress of the faith we hold dear, in that section of country. These things must be well known to you, but we earnestly hope that when they are considered you will feel it to be your duty to accept this appointment and that your people will be disposed to acquiesce cheerfully in the sacrifice involved in the loss of your faithful and devoted labors.

A communication from our Secretary, Mr. Briggs, will acquaint you with the pecuniary arrangements which have been made for the support of the office to which you are invited.

In the hope that an early and favorable answer may be returned, we remain,

Your friends and brethren in the gospel,

(Signed)

MR. STEBBINS accepted this call, and at once entered upon his labors in this new field. His efforts were crowned with the greatest success. He was a born teacher, had a tremendous personal force and influence, a great power of waking up dull minds, and also patience in dealing with ignorance and stupidity. Prompt, decisive, and thoroughly in earnest himself, he could not endure men who were irregular or dilatory. Dogmatic, arbitrary, and even passionate, still he had a warm heart and a generous and kindly spirit. He was master of the art of coming to conclusions, never stopping in the middle of an argument. In 1851, Harvard College conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

DOCTOR STEBBINS remained in Meadville until 1856, and then left to accept a call to the pastorate of the Unitarian church at Woburn, Mass., where he remained eight years. While at Woburn he became a director of the American Unitarian Association, and for the last three years of his sojourn there was president of that association.

At the Centennial Celebration at Wilbraham, Mass., on June 15, 1863, Judge Morris introduced "REV. DR. STEBBINS, of Woburn, born on the banks of the Scantic, on the very spot where his ancestor pitched his tent, more than a century ago, in the then unbroken wilderness." DR. STEBBINS then delivered an address which held the attention of the crowded hall for over two hours. This address was published in full in the Report of the Wilbraham Centennial.

From Woburn and the presidency of the Unitarian Association DR. STEBBINS retired to a quiet home and studies in Cambridge for six years, broken only by temporary engagements of six months or more supplying the vacant Unitarian pulpits of Portland, Taunton, Washington, and elsewhere. He established churches at Ithaca, New York, and New Centre, Mass., at both of which places church buildings were dedicated free of debt. On Sept. 12, 1867, he delivered an address at Leominster, Mass., at the dedication of the Soldiers' Monument.

In 1881, while acting as pastor of the church at New Centre, he published "A Study of the Pentateuch for Popular Reading." He contributed articles to several religious papers and journals, among them the Christian Register and the Unitarian Review. The preparation of a book upon the Old Testament—the ripe result of his life-long study—and revising its proof sheets was the closing work of his busy career. He was always a great worker, and has the remarkable record of losing but one Sunday's preaching in a ministry of forty-eight years, and this was occasioned by illness.

At the age of seventeen, HORATIO STEBBINS went forth to begin the battle of life, as a schoolmaster. His early theological studies were pursued in Ithaca Academy, now the seat of Cornell University. From there he went to Philips' Exeter Academy in New Hampshire, and thence to Harvard, where he graduated in 1848 with the degree of A. M. He graduated from Harvard Divinity School in 1851.

His first charge was at Fitchburg, Mass., and in 1855, he became the colleague of Rev. Ichabod Nichols, pastor of the second parish, at Portland, Maine. In 1864 he was called to the pastorate of the First Unitarian Church of San Francisco, Cal., as the successor of Rev. Mr. Starking. The degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology was conferred on him in 1869, by Bowdoin College.

On Sunday, September 12, 1899, the congregation of the First Unitarian Church of San Francisco observed the thirty-fifth anniversary of DR. STEBBINS' ministry.

DR. STEBBINS has been identified with many important matters pertaining to education, religion, and philanthropy. He has held the office of president of the trustees of the College of California, and was influential in transferring that institution to the State, as the foundation of the University. For twenty-six years he was a regent of the University. He served as a trustee of the Inebriate Asylum, the Foundling Asylum, the Lick School of Mechanical Arts, and the Leland Stanford, Jr., University.

His activity has been confined to no channel, but directed to the common welfare. While working indefatigably to help his congregation and poor humanity, he has written and published many discourses, essays, and addresses. He delivered the address at the memorial services held for President Lincoln, April 20, 1865. He is considered among the best talent in the country.

sisted of a tavern, one store, a post-office having eight boxes, a blacksmith shop, and four or five log houses.

MR. STEBBINS purchased a farm of one hundred acres, three quarters of a mile north of Lawrence, paying sixteen hundred dollars in gold for it. He returned to Waterville, and on the 25th day of March, 1854, he with his family, consisting of his wife and two sons, stepped off the cars in Decatur. From there they went to Lawrence, eleven miles distant, by stage. Every rod of the road was through the woods and the ground was covered with snow, making a chilly reception for the newcomers. It took them from noon until four o'clock in the afternoon to make the journey.

For the following winter the family was domiciled in a house situated just across the road from the farm that had been purchased. Early in the spring they moved into their own house, which had been built during the winter. MR. STEBBINS worked industriously to clear up his land, most of which was covered with timber. He set out a hop yard, being the first person to raise hops in Van Buren County. This business increased until he soon employed between thirty and forty pickers and as prices kept advancing they yielded him a good profit.

On one occasion MR. STEBBINS had been to Decatur with a load of hops to be shipped. He received a check for five hundred dollars, which he got cashed at a store (there was no bank in the town) and started for home. When about two miles from town he was startled by hearing some one shout, and upon looking around saw a man coming toward him and beckoning for him to stop. While he was looking two other men stepped out from the bushes, then two others followed, and the five came up to the wagon. MR. STEBBINS had no weapons with him. His first thought was of robbers and he expected to have to fight for his money and his life, so he picked up a stave from the rack on his wagon and waited for the attack. The men asked him where he was going and on being told that he was going to Lawrence, asked to be allowed to ride with him. He took them on, but kept the stave in his hand and watched every move they made. After riding about a mile, he gathered from their conversation that they were ministers going to Lawrence to hold a conference. One of the deacons had promised to meet them, but had failed to do so and they had started out to walk when they overtook MR. STEBBINS. You can readily imagine his relief on learning that he was not in the company of a band of robbers.

By hard work and close attention to business MR. STEBBINS prospered and accumulated property to the value of twelve thousand dollars. He was a man who kept himself posted on the politics of his country and was outspoken in his opinions. He and his wife are buried in the Lawrence cemetery, where there is a monument erected to their memory.

WILLIAM SYLVANUS STEBBINS, when nineteen years of age, enlisted August 29, 1862, at Danville, Livingston Co., N. Y., as a private in Company B, 136th Regiment New York Volunteers. In 1863 he was wounded in the leg and was confined to the hospital for two months. He returned to his regiment and in 1864 was promoted to Corporal, and was honorably discharged in June, 1865, after having seen three years of hard service.

In the spring of 1866 he went west, stopping in Indiana, Illinois and Colorado, where he remained for a number of years, engaged in mining. He was interested in mining property in several towns, some of which were undeveloped.

In 1894 he went, with two comrades, on a prospecting tour in Central America, intending to return and develop his Colorado property later, but he was accidentally drowned by the overturning of a row boat.

"In the death of SEYMOUR L. STEBBINS the Ulster bar has lost one of its most eminent and honored members. To great natural talent and instinctively scholarly tastes, he added a profound knowledge of the law, of literature and the arts. The study of our profession was to him that of the science of jurisprudence and not the cultivation of a money-making trade. He was a man of broad sympathies, and cherished a lofty ideal of personal and professional honor. His manners were ever gentle, his speech was always kind, his wit although caustic, was never perverted to the base purpose of ungenerous ridicule. His bearing was that of a chivalrous gentleman and his dealings with his fellow men and his professional brethren were irreproachable. A great lawyer has died, a distinguished citizen has gone from among us."

"A number of excellent addresses were made by lawyers. These addresses were invariably eulogistic of the deceased, who, indeed, as a man and a lawyer might be said to have no enemies. MR. STEBBINS was one of the

- As a boy EBENEZER SCOTT WEBBER was very indolent and would not work, but the barn and walls bore evidence of his natural love of art. In the evening, with a piece of charred coal, he would decorate the bricks of the fireplace. A wealthy man, observing his marked talent, offered to pay the expenses of study abroad, but for some reason the opportunity was not improved.

However, he became proficient in his chosen work, and was well known in northern Illinois as a portrait painter, having painted, among others, portraits of the daughter of General Hurlburt and Mrs. George M. Pullman. Perhaps the best known of his works is a full length portrait of Chief Shabbona, whose friendship MR. WEBBER enjoyed. It was with difficulty and only after repeated endeavors that he was able to persuade Shabbona to allow him to make a sketch. This likeness of the celebrated Indian chief is the only one extant, and it was sketched only three days before his death. MR. WEBBER was very much attached to this picture and could not be induced to part with it, although he received an offer of one thousand dollars from the Chicago Board of Trade, and the State of Illinois also desired to purchase it for the state house. After his death his sons disposed of it and it is now owned in Peoria.

MR. WEBBER was a most interesting character. He was a very early riser and would walk miles before breakfast. He always carried a pruning knife and would pause in his walks to clip dead branches from the trees. Being possessed of a very social nature he was greatly beloved by old and young in all classes, and he was a welcome guest in many of the leading homes in the State of Illinois.

ABDIEL HESADIAH STEBBINS removed his family from New York to Illinois in 1835, making the trip with a team and wagon. He settled on some land belonging to his cousin, Abner Stebbins, but soon secured a farm of his own near Seneca, La Salle County, Illinois, on which he remained the balance of his life. He was never strong, but worked at his trade, that of stone mason, for a great many years. When he came through Chicago on his way west he was urged to remain there as stone masons were in great demand, and as an inducement was offered eighty acres of land where the court house now stands, but he refused to stay in what he called a "mud hole."

 4157. XIX. Catherine Rozina Barrus, born February 24, 1877; married Harry Watson.+

EMERY BARRUS emigrated from New York State to Jefferson City, Missouri, in 1839, and in 1840 he removed to Nauvoo, Illinois. In the spring of 1846 he started farther west because of the persecution of the Church to which he belonged. He wintered at Sheridan River, Iowa, in 1846-7, his stock living on the buds and limbs of small trees felled for the purpose. He built a log house and covered it with split boards, also making a floor of split boards. The next spring he again took up the line of march westward. He arrived at what was called winter quarters on the Missouri River too late to accompany the pioneers of the Mormon Church to find a home in the great American desert, so he again built a house and fenced a farm on which he planted and harvested considerable produce. Here he remained until the spring of 1853, when he started west, arriving in Salt Lake Valley in October, 1853. He settled where Grantsville is now located. It was then a barren desert, producing nothing but greesewood and sage brush, but the intelligent use of the small streams of water enabled him to cultivate the land and make a very comfortable home.

PHILANDER HALSEY GRAVES left his New York home and went to Illinois when he was twenty-one years of age. He located near Marseilles, where he engaged in the agricultural business, afterward going into the insurance business. After his marriage he removed to Tonica, Illinois. He enlisted in Company A, 88th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, on August 9, 1862, at Tonica. While drilling near Louisville, Kentucky, he was sun struck and was sent to West End Hospital at Cincinnati. He remained in the hospital three months, at the end of which time he was given his discharge and declared unfit for reenlistment.

Shortly after returning from the war he entered the employ of a grain firm in Seneca, Illinois, as accountant. He subsequently engaged in the business on his own account, and became one of the largest shippers of grain west of Chicago, and one of the most prominent citizens of that section of the son of Rufus Stebbins and Clarissa Blandin, born February 12, 1827, at Brookline, Windham County, Vermont; married July 7, 1861, at Utica, Winona County, Minnesota, to MARIA SMITH (JAYNE) RANDALL, born November 19, 1835, at Smithtown, Long Island, New York; died November 27, 1897, at St. Charles, Winona County, Minnesota, who was a daughter of Joseph Brewster Jayne and Sally Smith. Occupation, farmer. Politics, Republican. Religion, Methodist. Residence, St. Charles, Winona County, Minnesota.

A man of philanthropic nature and of broad charity, his influence and purse were always actively enlisted on the side of progress and reform. While the adherent of no creed, all religious and philanthropic movements received his earnest moral and financial support. He was a delegate to all the Sanitary Canal Conventions, endeavoring to secure the enactment of the law authorizing its construction.

In 1894 he removed to Chicago and devoted himself to inventions, for which he had a natural inclination. In June, 1899, he removed to the suburb, Oak Park.

 4260. IV. Webster Jonas, born December 3, 1869; married Maia Winchell. +

JONAS BLANDIN STEBBINS was raised on the farm, on which his grandfather had settled when a young man. He attended the district school and had two terms at the Academy. When he was nineteen years old he engaged in the trade of making sash, blinds and doors, at Bellows Falls, Vermont, where he was foreman in a shop for four years. Leaving there he went to Hudson, New York, and worked there one and one-half years.

In 1855 he went west to Winona County, Minnesota, and worked at the carpenter trade. In the spring of 1857 he bought one hundred and sixty acres of land in Utica township and became a tiller of the soil. He now has a finely improved farm with buildings of his own construction.

In 1895 he rented his farm, consisting of two hundred and ten acres, and went to St. Charles, where he built a house on Richland street and had lived in it scarcely one year when MRS. STEBBINS died.

He was one of the members, who in 1857, formed the first Methodist Class at Utica. He was appointed Steward and held that office continuously until 1895, except one year.

MR. STEBBINS served as supervisor of the town of Utica in 1878, 1879, and 1880. He was district Steward of Winona District for a number of years, and was a delegate to a convention held at Rochester, to locate the Hamlin University, and to the Minnesota annual conferences at Winona and Red Wing. He was a member of the school of district number ninety-three of Utica for thirty-six years.

He was drafted to go in the army during the Civil War. He was to report at Rochester on Tuesday, but the Saturday before he had to go the welcome news came that Lee had surrendered to Grant and that no more soldiers were needed.

MR. STEBBINS is a man of strong character and unquestioned integrity.

His son, SIDNEY J., is a prominent business man in Morris. His son, WEBSTER J., is a graduate of Northwestern University of Evanston, Illinois, and is now principal of the high school at Wheaton, Illinois.

MARIA SMITH (JAYNE) STEBBINS was, through her grandmother, Ruth (Brewster) Jayne, a descendant of Elder William Brewster, who came to America in the Mayflower and settled at Plymouth in 1620. William Brewster's father was at one time secretary to William Davidson, one of Queen Elizabeth's ambassadors and Secretary of State.

MRS. STEBBINS was a woman of broad mind and generous heart, and was possessed of a large fund of general information, keeping in touch with the rapid progress of the times.

She was very much interested in the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and did much towards its advancement.

 4273. V. Celestie Juliett, born February 17, 1870.

WILLIAM P. STEBBINS resided on a farm, but worked a large part of the time at the carpenter trade, also buying poultry on commission. For twelve years he led the choir in the church, and gave instruction in the primary principles of vocal music. He represented the town in the General Assembly of Vermont one year.

MR. STEBBINS was a bright illustration of what a man in ordinary circumstances of life may be. As a citizen he was honest in the full sense of the word; industrious; frugal, but not penurious; generous almost to a fault; social and genial in company, but never given to evil speaking. None knew him but to respect and love him. As a son he was exemplary; and by his constant rendering of those (so-called) little attentions contributed in no small degree to the comfort and happiness of his aged parents.

He exercised firmness with gentleness, authority with simplicity, requiring and obtaining obedience in a spirit of love. In him was a rare combination of those qualities that constitute good government. As a brother he was all that the word implies, appreciative, generous, sympathetic, always doing kindly deeds; charitable towards the faults of others and abounding in unfeigned love.

As a Christian his life was almost spotless. Though his words were very few, he filled the measure of his days with acts of Christian living, freely helping to maintain the Church of God, relieving the needy, comforting those in trial, and turning none away empty when it was in his power to help them.

SOLOMON JOHNSON STEBBINS went to Watertown, New York, at the age of eleven to live with his sister, Mrs. Van Buren. He attended school until thirteen years old, then entered the hardware store of his brother-in-law, Mr. Van Buren. In 1856 Mr. Van Buren moved his business to Quincy, Illinois, MR. STEBBINS continuing in the store there until 1858, when Mr. Van Buren went out of business.

During the years 1859, 1860, 1861 and 1862 he attended the Dearborn public school and Hathaway's Academy in Chicago, working on a farm summers in order to pay his expenses during the winters.

On March 1, 1862, he accepted a position in the hardware store of H. O. Stone on the corner of Lake and State streets. In 1869 he entered into a partnership with Mr. B. C. Jones, who conducted a hardware store and tin shop on State street near 12th. In 1884 they removed their business to 231 State street. Mr. Jones died in 1885, and Mr. Stebbins purchased his interest in the business. In 1892 he removed to the present location, 74 Van Buren street, and in 1894 incorporated the S. J. Stebbins Company.

JAMES STEBBINS was born in a house on Main Street, near Clinton, where he spent his entire life. He tilled his ancestral acres on North Main Street until the advancing tide of population and business crowded him out. The "home lot" consisted of forty acres, running from Main Street west to the river, including about half of Hampden Park, all of which was owned by his grandfather. It also embraced some land on the east side of Main street and most of what is now Park Grove Cemetery, and various outside lots.

In his boyhood the large field just west of the present County Truant School, was the only open field in that region, and was called "The Continental Field" because it had been cleared to make barracks for the Continental troops.

MR. STEBBINS had in his possession the commission which one of his ancestors received nearly two hundred years ago, as ensign, and a musical clock made in London, believed to be more than two hundred years old.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN STEBBINS lived in Chester, Massachusetts, until 1841, where, in addition to farming, he was engaged in the manufacture of furniture, until the factory was burned. About the year 1842, he removed to South Wilbraham, where he engaged in farming until 1850.

At this time he was taken with a severe attack of California gold fever and went to California by way of the Isthmus, returning the same way in 1851, no worse off than when he started. Soon after his return from California he disposed of his farm, and from that time until his death was employed in some kind of mechanical work. For some time during and after the Civil War he was employed in the Springfield Armory and after that superintended the construction of iron bridges in different parts of Massachusetts and Connecticut.

CHARLES MERRICK STEBBINS and his brother George were apprenticed to Benjamin Franklin Smead, who had established a weekly paper in Manhattan, receiving for the first year their board and washing and $2.50 per month. In order to reach the "case" and learn to "set type" they were compelled to stand on empty type boxes. Early in 1840 Mr. Smead died and a butcher attempted to carry on the business, but soon gave it up. CHARLES then went to work in a printing office in Maumee City. In the fall of 1841 he and his brother George were sent to Lyons, N. Y., to stay with their uncle, Rev. Ira Ingraham, who undertook to see that they should receive an education. The boys made the trip to Buffalo on a steamer and from there to Lyons on a canal boat. Some months after reaching Lyons CHARLES went to live with the family of Mr. Taft, a deacon in his uncle's church. Mrs. Taft seemed to consider him too high minded, and in order to curb his pride set him to washing dishes and mopping floors. Naturally a boy rebels against being compelled to do a woman's work and he felt it all the more keenly because there were in the Taft family several daughters and a son about his own age, who were not required to do such work. He next went to work in the printing office of Morley & Cole, and from there went to live with the family of Mr. Harrington, whose wife thought she would like to adopt him; but, finding in him a boy too hard to manage, they were very glad to let him go home with Rev. John A. Murray, of Geneva. He went to Geneva with the understanding that he was to take care of the horse and cow, make the fires, and do all he possibly could nights and mornings, in consideration for which he was to receive his board and clothes and was to be allowed the privilege of attending school in the middle of the day. The principal of the Union school to which he went, Mr. Isaac Swift, was the greatest benefactor the boy ever had. Finding that he was anxious to learn, Mr. Swift offered to take him into his family, where he would have much greater opportunities for study than at Mr. Murray's, and the offer was gladly accepted. He was put into advanced classes, where he was forced to study hard, Mr. Swift helping him at home, in order to catch up with those who had had greater advantages, consequently he improved very rapidly. There was but one class in the school studying Latin and they were reading Virgil. One can imagine the efforts he was obliged to make in order to master the Latin grammar and at the same time keep up with the rest of the class in translating the Aeneid. However, he was more fond of mathematics than of the classics, and soon outstripped all others in arithmetic, algebra and geometry. At the age of fifteen he was prepared for college and on account of being the best scholar in the school was entitled to a scholarship in Geneva (now Hobart) College. Their rules, however, did not allow one to enter under the age of sixteen, therefore he was obliged to wait a year. To fill up this gap Mr. Swift proposed that he should act as his assistant at a very moderate salary, so he was installed in a little room adjoining that of Mr. Swift and was given all the advanced classes. At the age of sixteen he entered Geneva College, of which Benjamin Hale was president, and immediately took his place at the head of his class. Having but little money he was forced to resort to the most rigid economy in order to maintain himself and buy the necessary books. At the end of the first term in his sophomore year, being very short of funds, he found it necessary to earn some money. He obtained employment in the office of Mr. John C. Merrill, who was then publishing a daily paper and doing a general job printing business in Auburn, N. Y. He gave up this position in time to return to Geneva at the beginning of the next term in college, where a bitter disappointment awaited him. A young man from New York City (now Bishop Paret, of Maryland) who had had superior advantages had during his absence taken his place at the head of the class and had shown himself able to keep at the head. At the end of the term, being out of money, discouraged, and broken down in health from not having had sufficiently nourishing food, MR. STEBBINS gave up the struggle and left college. At that time this seemed to him the destruction of all his prospects in life, but in later years he concluded that it was the best thing that ever happened to him, since it sent him out into the world. He bought a recipe for making a chemical soap with which to take grease spots from clothing, and having made up a batch he started west on foot, peddling the soap in little cakes at a York shilling apiece. He visited Niagara Falls on his way home and not having had much success in selling his soap, he reached Buffalo, tired and out of money, but here fortune favored him, for one of the first persons he met was Benjamin Hale, Jr., son of the president of Geneva College, who lent him two dollars, with which he secured deck passage to Sandusky and thus escaped a long, weary trudge up the shore of Lake Erie. He made the rest of his journey on foot. The care of his mother and young brother and sister devolved mainly on him, so the need of economy was as great as before. As soon as he could get anything to do, he went to work. His first job was cutting and shocking corn. As he knew nothing about the business the first high wind blew the corn down, which fact he learned some time after he had received his pay for the work. After that he went to work on a machine for drilling wells in rock. As soon as possible he rented a house for his mother and bought her a loom, with which she thought she could earn her own living. Early in the winter he obtained a position in a country store as clerk, receiving six dollars per month and his board. In 1848 a telegraph line was completed from Buffalo to Detroit and an office was opened at Milan, which was then an important point for shipping wheat and other grain. Hearing that telegraph operators were in demand, MR. STEBBINS took advantage of the first holiday, July 4, 1848, walked to Milan and bargained with the operator, Mr. J. H. Wade, who afterward became president of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

to teach him telegraphy, at which he began about the first of August. He worked night and day and made rapid progress, being able in about three weeks to send and receive dispatches about as well as his teacher. This proved very fortunate for both, as just at this time (MR. STEBBINS had been studying it seventeen days) Mr. Wade was called to Michigan by the illness of his wife, and was able to leave his pupil in charge of the office. He transacted all the business to the entire satisfaction of the company, and on Mr. Wade's return he was given charge of the office which had just been opened at Maumee City. In October he, being considered a first class operator, was promoted and placed in charge of the office in Sandusky City, receiving the then munificent salary of $350 per year. Col. Speed, president of the company, was so well satisfied with his efforts that he voluntarily allowed this salary to date from the date on which he had taken Mr. Wade's place at Milan. Through the exercise of great economy while at Sandusky, MR. STEBBINS laid the foundation of a fortune. He put his savings into half dollars and piled them up in the office clock. When these amounted to something over one hundred dollars he bought a land warrant for one hundred and sixty acres of land, which his brother George located for him in Illinois, not far from Rockford. Not many years afterward a railroad was built close to this land and he sold it for five thousand dollars. Col. Speed and Mr. Wade completed a telegraph line from Cleveland to Cincinnati and gave MR. STEBBINS the position of chief operator in the Cincinnati office at a salary of seven hundred dollars per year. He made the trip from Sandusky to Cleveland by boat and from there to Cincinnati by stage, opening some of the offices and installing the operators, and seeing that everything was in proper order. They had invented and used in the construction of this line a new kind of insulator which, as was discovered on trial, did not insulate. The line worked spasmodically until the spring of 1850, when operations were suspended until a new insulator could be provided. Instead of being paid at the rate of seven hundred dollars per year, MR. STEBBINS was obliged to settle for his winter's work at the rate of about three hundred dollars, which, as living expenses were very high, left him scarcely anything ahead. He accepted a position in Portsmouth, Ohio, and later in the summer returned to Cincinnati. Soon afterward he was made inspector between Pittsburg and Cincinnati, it being his duty to go over the line with a wagon, carrying insulators, wires, and everything necessary for making repairs. He returned to Cincinnati as chief operator on the Morse line. The confinement of an office did not agree with him, so he decided to visit his brother George, who was living in Illinois. After remaining with his brother a short time he returned to Cincinnati and resumed his place in the telegraph office. The next spring he accepted a position on a new line from Louisville to New Orleans, which was managed by T. C. H. Smith. He took passage on a steamer for New Orleans, but landed at Vicksburg instead of going to New Orleans as he had intended. After several weeks had passed, not having been assigned to regular duty and not liking the prospect of having to keep a line in order in that sultry, swampy region, he accepted a position with the line running from St. Louis to Nashville, of which Mr. T. P. Shaffner was president, and was assigned to duty in the St. Louis office. In the fall the line was extended to St. Joseph and MR. STEBBINS was given the superintendency of that section at a salary of seventy-five dollars per month and all expenses. He resigned this position, and as he still retained a strong liking for the printing business he was induced to join Mr. W. H. Lapham in the purchase of the Milan Free Press. He sold out his interest in this and with Mr. H. Watkin, established a job printing office in Cincinnati, and succeeded in working up a good business. He was again persuaded to accept the superintendency of the telegraph line from St. Louis to St. Joseph and accordingly located at Booneville. In 1857 he bought the stock of Mr. Veitch, president of the company, and was elected president in his stead. He afterward sold the majority of his stock to the Western Union Company, whose competition he was not able to cope with, but still remained at the head of the company. About this time the civil war occurred and though he suffered losses MR. STEBBINS saved enough property from the wreck to enable him to start again. He removed North and as Congress had granted a subsidy of $40,000 per annum for ten years to the company which should construct and operate a line to California, MR. STEBBINS and the Western Union Company agreed to build it from Brownville, Nebraska, to Julesburg, the Western Union Company to build it from Julesburg to Ogden and a California company to build it the rest of the way. MR. STEBBINS finally sold out all of his stock in the company and devoted himself to the grocery business established by him and his brother, W. R. Stebbins, at Atchison, Kansas. He formed a partnership with H. M. Porter to run ox and mule trains for the transportation of freight overland to Denver. This proved so successful that they established a wholesale grocery business in Denver. They soon disposed of their ox and mule trains and concentrated all their efforts in the wholesale grocery business, MR. STEBBINS going to New York to live in order to make purchases for the firm. As soon as he could leave his business he went to Europe in order that his children might learn some foreign languages, sailing November, 1865. Leaving his family at Blois, he returned to America, expecting soon to rejoin his family in Europe. On account of business he was unable to return, so his family came back to America the next year. In 1872 he made another trip to Europe, taking with him his two younger children. Most of the time was spent in France, Italy, and Switzerland. In 1874 the exigencies of business compelled his return to America. In 1881 the way seemed clear for him to spend a term of years in Europe. He had always had a desire to learn various languages with the ultimate object of founding a school where young people having a desire for travel might have the opportunity of learning foreign languages free of cost, or rather by paying their expenses with their daily labor. With this end in view he undertook to learn Italian, French, German, and Spanish, in order to be able to judge of the ability of the teachers whom he should employ in his school. His idea was to begin with a small number of young men and women and experiment a year or two before erecting permanent buildings for the school. He sent to Italy for a teacher, and in the winter of 1889-90 published a short notice of the project in about three thousand newspapers, besides sending out prospectuses to a great number of people; but to his surprise the applicants for free education were so few that his plans were frustrated. He next took up the idea of founding an Orphans' Home, and has taken quite a number of orphans to his farm at Hartsdale, N. Y. He takes great pleasure in providing for the comfort and happiness of his little charges, with the full intention of leaving the greater portion of his estate for the founding of an Orphans' Home in Colorado, where the greater part of his property is located. MR. STEBBINS is the author of a book entitled "The New and True Religion," in which he sets forth his idea of what constitutes true religion. His version of the Golden Rule is, "Enjoy life all you can without abridging the right of another to his enjoyment." In this book he advances some interesting and worthy arguments.

HOMER PEASE STEBBINS gives the following recollections: "My father was, I believe, a rather early and continuous wanderer, more or less homeless, and his children have been little if any better, perhaps worse.

Four of us boys were born in Granger County, Ohio, and in 1836 moved to Manhattan, near Toledo, then surrounded by the great Black Swamp of thick timber and rich soil. We were soon scattered about—some, when hardly ten years old, at work for our board while attending the three months a year public school. My two older brothers began work in a printing office, when the older one was less than eleven years of age.

In May, 1846, before I was fifteen years old, I went alone by lake boat and canal from Toledo to Lyons, then on foot to Geneva, New York, to learn the printing business in the office where my brother George was at work; while Charles was attending Geneva College, now Hobart. I worked there nearly three years. Charles left in about a year, not completing his college course, and George left a year later.

In the spring of 1849 I went by cars to Buffalo and by boat to Sandusky, where my two brothers then were, my mother being twenty-five or thirty miles back in the country. After working at printing and at various kinds of employment for over a year, I went to Wisconsin to drill wells in the rock that underlies much of the southwestern part of that state, and also to help ventilate them, drilled down into the "drifts" in the mining region near Galena, seeing some rough life in those lead regions.

In the early fall of 1851 I returned to Ohio, and again earned some money in the printing business, to help support my mother, giving all I possessed at the age of twenty-one and then, earning more money for a few months, began studying at Oberlin. Going there in August, 1853, I stayed to complete a six years' course, the only one in the family graduating from any such institution. These years had no rest for me, since I usually set type two or three hours every day, recited three hours and studied six hours or more. After two or three years study I was given classes to teach for two hours a day, at the low rate of eighteen and three-fourths cents an hour.

After graduating in 1859, I came out and earned a little money in Leavenworth, Kansas; borrowed more of my brother and early in the following spring went over to Europe with a companion, yet was traveling alone several months.

After our tramp up into Scotland and over to Hamburg from Edinburgh and a summer's stay in Berlin, we made a sojourn of nearly six months in Paris, the fall and winter of 1860-61. We crossed the ocean while the Chicago convention was in session; but in Scotland all interest seemed to be centered in the Heenan and Sayer fight and not in the work to be done at that great convention.

Except about one hundred and fifty miles by cars, I went on foot (alone many days on the way) from Paris to Genoa, over and through the deep snows of the Juras and the Alps, visiting Rome, Naples, Vesuvius, Pompeii, Pisa and Florence; then across to Bologna, Ferrara, Padua, Venice, Verona and Milan; over the Simplon to Brieg, Lausanne, Bern, Fribourg and Basel; to Paris by rail; to London, Liverpool, and home, by the skin of my teeth and the most rigid economy.

During parts of the years 1862 and 1863 I edited and managed the Medina (Ohio) Gazette, and for two years, ending August, 1866, edited and printed the six column Union Sentinel at Hiawatha, Kansas, not paying out one dollar for help of any kind. I have been connected with various other papers and work."

4417. III. Alfreda, born March 11, 1899; died September 7, 1899.

HENRY ALFRED STEBBINS, with his mother and her family, removed from Lorain County, Ohio, to Rock County, Wisconsin, in April, 1851, when he was but seven years of age. They made the trip by way of the lakes from Cleveland to Milwaukee, thence by team to Newark, four miles northwest of Beloit. He lived in and near Beloit until December, 1856, when the family removed to Pecatonica, Illinois. There he went to school, and was also employed as a clerk in some of the stores, and partially learned the trade of wagonmaker.

On August 5, 1862, he enlisted in Company B, 74th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, in which he held the rank of Corporal. His subsequent experiences, as related by himself, were as follows:

"After camping at Rockford over a month we went south, arriving in Louisville, Kentucky, on the night of September 30, 1862, passing over the pontoon bridge by moonlight. We camped in the streets and vacant lots, perhaps a hundred thousand within and without the city. The next day at noon we started on the march after General Bragg and his army. Our division (commanded by General Mitchell) was with the force that advanced on the Bardstown road. On three other roads moved other divisions, and through the heat and deep dust marched what seemed endless lines of infantry, cavalry, artillery, ambulances, provision and baggage wagons, etc. To men from the north the heat seemed like that of mid-summer, and even to the natives it was severe, as also a drouth had continued long. To show what the march was I quote from the correspondent of the Louisville Journal of October 12, 1862. He wrote: 'Our army has marched through a country that has afforded but little water for either man or beast. Rivers and creeks are dried up, for there has been no rain for many weeks. For seventy miles I saw no running water excepting a little trickling over the gravel near Bloomfield. In the lowest places, in the beds of streams, were pools of impure water that smelled and tasted of the ordure of the cattle. Our horses and mules rushed in frantic haste to drink it, and, after they had done stirring it, where the shallow pools were rocky, the soldiers filled their canteens, even far into the night, and then carried it two or three miles to camp. Where there was gravel the poor fellows dug holes with their hands, and a long dark line of them waited patiently through the night for their turn to fill their canteens. * * * In this march of two great armies over the same road the horrors of thirst were aggravated by the conditions. Each column of troops could be traced miles away by the clouds of dust high in the air, and it was instep deep to the infantry. Day and night there was a living stream, the front moving on by day and the rear that camped by day coming up at night. Men and horses choked and strangled, and no relief of rain or water to check the suffering; it was dust, dust, everywhere. It was like a horrid nightmare. * * * It is over now, but I have the recollection of it that will last me to my grave.'

The writer of the above article failed to mention that many of us had rubber tubes to which were attached pieces of pumice stone, and these we put down into the mud holes and through them sucked the warm and filthy water until the mud became so thick it had to be scraped off before we could suck up more. Sufficient to say that the days were hot but the night were very cold, and, as nearly all the blankets and knapsacks had been left at Louisville as impediments to a hasty march, we suffered one extreme by day and the other by night, with only blouses and light other clothing, and no tents.

On the 8th Bragg and his army engaged us in battle near Perryville, Kentucky, and several thousand men fell on either side. We won on the right wing and they on the left, but that night and the next day they retreated towards the Cumberland mountains. Our army continued towards Nashville and the next real battle was that of Stone River. But marching was more deadly than battle to the untried volunteers, under such circumstances. Some days only sixteen or eighteen men of a company were marching in their order, the rest were straggling perhaps miles behind, and having to bring up in the night. Dysentery and other diseases set in soon, so that within two months there died from my own company fifteen men, some of them who never knew sickness when at home, and who had jested at the idea of not enduring the march. The sixteenth man was killed at Stone River. With others the strength and powers of endurance gave way within a few months, and the hospitals took them in until they died, or, by the slow process of examination and discharge, they were sent home. The latter was the result with me, and I returned to Pecatonica in the spring of 1863. For many months I was unable to work any, and for years it seemed like a living death, in continued illness and weakness, so that I often welcomed the thought of passing away. However, I began to work at my trade in 1864 and did more or less until 1868, for some time in Wisconsin and then in Atchison, Kansas. Likewise, I clerked in a drug store in Pecatonica for some months.

While in the army I had become deeply impressed with the idea of a future life to be prepared for, and had prayed that I might find the right way and walk in it. On my return home I sought for and, after various experiences, found it where I had least expected. I became convinced that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ held the most divine doctrine, and I united with it.

Becoming satisfied that it was my highest duty I entered the ministry, and in April, 1866, began my labors in Michigan. In 1869 my work was in Wisconsin and Minnesota. In 1870 I became presiding elder over the Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin district, occupying that office till April, 1876, when I was chosen as one of the board of publication and as assistant editor of the official paper of the Church, which was then published at Plano, Illinois. This place I held until October, 1880, when I removed to Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

In April, 1874, I was chosen as General Church Recorder, which position I still retain; and in 1875 I was chosen as Church Secretary, in which capacity I served until 1896. In 1875 I was selected as one of the three bishops over the financial affairs of the church, and served until 1882. Have also served in other capacities, besides traveling and preaching in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Texas, California, Colorado and Utah, principally in the first four states. During seven years was presiding elder over Decatur district, being portions of southern Iowa and northern Missouri."

In the following spring they arrived in Stephenson County, Illinois, and located in Silver Creek township, where he entered three hundred and twenty acres of land, which was his home until his death. He was one of the oldest pioneers of Stephenson County, and was the second man to settle in Silver Creek township.

At different times he was honored with nearly all the offices within the gift of the township and was one of the most highly esteemed pioneers.

To most of their neighbors MR. and MRS. STEBBINS were "UNCLE SIDNEY" and "AUNT JANE". They seemed happiest when their children and grandchildren were all gathered about their fireside. MR. - 4493. VII. Jane Minerva Hollister, born November 22, 1849; married William H. Parkin.+

DELANA STEBBINS HOLLISTER after her marriage removed to Bristolville, Ohio, where they remained one year, then moved to Fulton County, Illinois, where she spent the remainder of her life. At the age of sixteen she became a member of the Congregational Church of Hamilton, New York, but after her marriage identified herself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which she was an active member until her death. She was an affectionate companion, a tender mother, and a quiet and peaceful neighbor.

CHANDLER HOLLISTER lost both of his parents when he was a small boy, but soon determined to make himself self-supporting. His efforts were attended with such success that he was able to accumulate sufficient means to start each of his children in life. He was a citizen of Fulton County for nearly forty-five years, having purchased from the government some land two miles south of Avon, where he lived the greater part of the time after coming to Illinois. For three years he kept a hotel in Ellisville. He early identified himself with the Methodist Church, and was a substantial and faithful member. His integrity could not be challenged.

ELIJAH H. STEBBINS removed with his parents to Clymer Township, Tioga County, New York, when about eight years of age. He attended the district schools of his neighborhood. After attaining manhood he followed farming and lumbering until 1872, when his father's property was divided and he received as his share a general store and part of the homestead farm. In 1875 he formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, George Roberts, and they built a steam grist and saw mill, which was destroyed by fire in 1877. In the autumn of that year he rebuilt the saw mill, which he continued to operate until his death.

About the year 1860 HIRAM WILSON STEBBINS went to Minnesota and engaged in farming in the township of St. Charles, where he remained until 1869, when he was appointed chief clerk and cashier of the post office in Winona, a position which he occupied continuously for sixteen years. His business accuracy and general probity of character were there well proved, for during all his long term of service, though entrusted with the custody of many hundred thousands of dollars, not a single penny was ever lost or unaccounted for, as the result of mismanagement on his part. Naturally very diffident in disposition, he made but few intimate acquaintances, but those who knew him best had reason to know and appreciate something of the stern integrity and character, as well as the comparatively wide range of his general information.

For ten years Mr. STEBBINS resided in Rochester, Minnesota, returning to Winona a few months before his death occurred.

Occupation, dry goods merchant and oil operator. Politics, Republican. Religion, Episcopalian. Resided at Cussawago, Erie, Albion and Titusville, Pennsylvania, and Denver, Colorado.

CHILDREN:

4538. I. Amanda Eliza Clark, born March 29, 1846; married October 14, 1868, Clayton W. Lytte. She died July, 1871.
4539. II. Florence Lucinda Clark, born November 21, 1849; married Oliver Spencer Underhill.+
4540. III. Orson Eliphus Clark, born July 12, 1854 (or 1853); married Kittie Coe.
4541. IV. Lillie Lorene Clark, born November 22, 1862; died September 6, 1867.
4542. V. Silas Clark, born April 15, 1865; married Nellie Brazier.

When SILAS CLARK was six months old, his parents removed from Greenwich, Washington County, New York, to Sadus, Wayne County, New York. In 1832 they removed to Pittsford, near Rochester. He received a common school education and was assisted greatly at home by his father, who was well educated.

The family, in 1833, removed to Dearborn, Wayne County, Michigan, where MR. CLARK found employment on a farm. He worked chiefly at farming until about twenty years of age, and then went to school three months to prepare himself for teaching. During the next four years he taught in winter and worked on the lakes during the summer as a hand on freight boats. An attack of malarial fever then incapacitated him for any kind of work for a year. He went to Mosiertown, Pennsylvania, for the benefit of his health, and was greatly improved by the change. While there he became acquainted with LORENE STEBBINS, who afterward became his wife. He opened up a small country store, and started an ashery for the manufacture of pearl ash and saleratus, which he marketed at Pittsburg.

In the autumn of 1855 he removed to Albion, Erie County, Pennsylvania, where he continued the same business successfully; and in 1860 moved to Erie, though still continuing his store at Albion, which he left in charge of his brother-in-law, Alfred B. Carr, who was a partner in the business. In the spring of 1861, they moved their merchandise to Corry, Pennsylvania, which was then in its mushroom existence. Two and one-half years later he dissolved partnership with Mr. Carr and moved the stock to Erie, where he formed a partnership with Warren A. Booth, one of the foremost dry goods men in that part of the country. For six years they conducted a strictly dry goods business at Erie with success, and then moved their stock to Titusville, Pennsylvania. About a year afterwards, in April, 1869, MR. CLARK moved his family to Titusville, where he purchased the McGuire farm on Church Run. He began operating in oil, in which field he was very successful.

In 1873 he sold his interest in the store, and moving to Erie, retired from active business. In June, 1874, he made a trip to Colorado, where he invested in mines; and in the fall of the same year he removed his family to Denver.

His mining investments proved unsuccessful, and in 1878 he had to begin all over again. He went to Pueblo in February, 1879, to sink an oil well, having the previous year prospected around Canon City without success. On the first of January, 1880, he struck artesian mineral water, which proved

The histories of the lives of ROBERT LEMUEL GREENLEE and RALPH STEBBINS GREENLEE are almost identical. At the age of ten they began to assist in the active duties of farm life by carrying milk from the yard into the cheese house, in that way helping their mother with her milking. At the age of twelve each of them milked ten cows night and morning, and became very expert milkers. A year or two afterwards they learned to make the cheese and butter, and were able to attend to that while their father was engaged in other duties on the farm. After their father had invented a machine for the manufacture of his cheese boxes and butter firkins, the boys helped him in that department, thus learning the cooper's trade.

They were given the best educational advantages afforded in the common schools, and later attended Allegheny College at Meadville, Pennsylvania, although neither of them completed the college course.

While working for their father their mechanical skill was developed. They became acquainted with Mr. Drake, the first discoverer of oil, and furnished him with barrels. They also manufactured oil barrels for Oil Creek, but this did not prove a successful venture, as the price of barrels became very low, and the flow of oil was so great that it became of little value. When they could not sell their barrels they bought oil at twenty-five cents a barrel; but the difficulties were so great in getting it from the field that they lost money on it. At that time Oil Creek was practically a wilderness, except here and there a clearing with a small farm house. They were well acquainted with "Coal Oil Johnny," and at one time stopped over night at the home of his fostermother, "Widow McClintock."

They purchased their father's patents for keg and barrel machinery, giving him their notes for six thousand dollars in payment, and went into the business of manufacturing cooperage. They met with so much success that they were able to meet the notes at the end of the first year.

In 1863 the brothers decided to go to Chicago, and continue the manufacture of cooperage on a larger scale, having their machinery constructed in Erie, Pennsylvania. They made a contract with Samuel M. Nickerson & Company for the manufacture of barrels for the distillery, which was then using one hundred and sixty barrels per day. They little expected opposition from the coopers, and were not aware of the existence of a Cooper's Union—probably the first union ever established in Chicago. It was soon decided by the Union that it was not to their interests to allow the Greenlee machinery to run. At that time none but woodbound barrels would do for high wines, and they were not prepared with machinery for the splitting, shaving, and setting of hickory hoops, as the oil barrels which they made in Pennsylvania were hooped with iron, for which they had machinery. Consequently it was necessary for them to employ coopers to do that work. It was one of the rules of the Union that no one but a cooper's son should be allowed to learn the trade. The Union decided that the only way to drive out the machinery was to finish only as many barrels as they could have made by hand, so it would cost just as much for merely hooping a barrel as it would to shave the staves and heading by hand, joint them, truss them, and finish the barrel. In this way the Greenlees would receive practically nothing for the work done by the machinery. Not only that, but the coopers would make the barrels leak if possible, either by putting hickory chips across the joints under the hoops, or by making holes in the joints from the inside. It finally became necessary to discharge all the union coopers and hire green men from the street, whom they were able to teach to split, shave and hoop a barrel. In that way they became independent and as a result practically broke up the union, although it required a great deal of money, perseverance, and energy. They were at their place of business from five and six in the morning until eight or nine at night, in that way preparing the material for work the following day. They made a success of the cooperage business, and finally organized a company which was known as the "United States Barrel Company," and sold out their patents.

In 1864 they became members of the Board of Trade, and remained members for three or four years. They did not meet with success and decided that they were not adapted for a speculative business. At that time the Board of Trade was located on South Water street, and the membership fee was twenty-five dollars.

In 1866 they formed a co-partnership with their father-in-law, Mr. William Brooks, and under the firm name of Greenlee Brothers & Company, entered business for the general sale of machinery and railway and machinists supplies, in addition to cooperage, which they carried on successfully for a few years. They then purchased Mr. Brooks' interest and engaged in the manufacture of special lines of wood-working machinery for the manufacture of sash, doors and blinds, and special machinery for railroad car building. They were the first to adopt and make a success of mortising timber by the use of the hollow chisel; or, as it was called, boring a square hole. They have taken out a number of patents on machinery for use in that connection and other special wood-working machinery. They have been constantly adding new inventions and methods until the Greenlee machines have become famous with manufacturers in wood all over the world. Immediately after the great fire of 1871, they removed to their present quarters on West Twelfth street.

In 1882, in connection with the wood-working machinery business they engaged in the manufacture of repairs for all stoves and ranges, which has grown to such an extent that they now have patterns for the burning out pieces of over one hundred and fifty thousand different stoves and ranges, being the largest concern of the kind in the world. Their trade extends practically over the whole country. The same year they built a foundry for the manufacture of castings for their wood-working machinery and stove repairs. In 1886 Greenlee Brothers & Company were incorporated, and they also incorporated the Northwestern Stove Repair Company and the Greenlee Foundry Company, and in this way were enabled to divide their personal property. They have since added to the manufacture of wood-working machinery, the manufacture of auger bits of every description. They now give employment to about four hundred persons. When they came to Chicago they had very little money and have never received any financial assistance. They have always been in business together, their interests being equal, and their success can be attributed to their perfect confidence in each other and their unity of action. If one is away the other acts independently, each having full power of attorney from the other, to do anything necessary with their property, both personal and real.

Some years after their removal to Chicago, they bought the old home-stead in Crawford County, which remains the home of the Greenlee family in Pennsylvania. They married sisters (both of whom were twins, but not of the same pair), daughters of William Brooks, who for many years was a resident of Sherbrook, Canada, and one of the leading spirits of the conservative government of the Dominion; but later became a resident of Chicago.

As will be seen by their photographs, the brothers very closely resemble each other, and they are as much alike in character, disposition and thought, as in looks. They have always taken a lively interest in the welfare of the city, and both are members of the Union League Club. They have been extensive travelers; and, with their families, who always accompany them, have visited most of the foreign countries, making trips around the world, and going into the interiors of China, Japan, and other oriental countries. Their fortunes have been fairly gained, and stand proud monuments of their sturdy manhood and genius.

Residence, Meadville, Pennsylvania, and Bay Ridge, Florida.

CHILDREN:

- 4616a. I. William, born 1856; died in 1857.

After his father's death (1846) EDWARD E. STEBBINS went twelve miles below Franklin, Pennsylvania, to work in a blast furnace which made iron from the ore. He had been working about six months when the furnace failed on account of free trade, the tax having been taken off iron imported from England, which robbed the workmen of their hard earned wages. From the furnace, he walked home, some thirty-five miles, having to beg his food on the way. After remaining home for a short time he started for Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he obtained work in a cabinet shop.

In December he enlisted in the United States service in the war with Mexico, and was honorably discharged on July 5th, 1848. He returned to his home at Meadville, Pennsylvania, where he remained about a year, and then settled in Cleveland, Ohio, where he remained until the Rebellion broke out. He enlisted in the 7th Ohio Volunteers, May 20th, 1861, and went through many hardships until discharged at Cleveland, July 5th, 1864. With the 7th Ohio Volunteer Infantry he was pushed forward from Camp Denison in June, 1861, into Virginia (now West Virginia), under Colonel Tyler, who, previous to the breaking out of the Rebellion, had been a fur dealer and knew every part of the country and nearly all of the inhabitants. Therefore this was made the Pilot regiment in Virginia (now W. Va.). They were in camp not more than three days at any one time during the first year of service, so we may know that no grass grew under their feet.

Their first fight was in the following August. With only six hundred and eighty men, they fought Floyd and Wise with their force of seven thousand men, for about an hour. The fight commenced just as daylight was dawning. MR. STEBBINS had gotten off his track in some way and found himself mixed up with a rebel regiment. He used all the Yankee ingenuity he could think of to get out of the fix and finally started on the run with the bullets whistling around him. He reached his regiment on the hill of the church, safely; but, on examination, found seven bullet holes through his cap, pants and coat. A very close call, but he felt the truth of the old saying: "A miss is as good as a mile." After joining his company on the hill, he saw the rebels surrounding them in the shape of a horse shoe. As the regiment was inexperienced they did not realize their peril, until Private STEBBINS shouted, "——— you, get out of here," and they got out lively.

The companies on the hill landed in Charleston, W. Va., one hundred and fifty miles distant, in three days, which was the best marching done during the war. During the skirmish MR. STEBBINS became separated from his regiment, but he picked up twelve lost men and guided them in the direction of Gauly Bridge, where General Cox was stationed. They traveled all that day and as night came on, the men said it was too dark to travel. They were tired out and lay down to rest. All fell asleep but MR. STEBBINS. Just at daylight, he awakened one of them to go with him to hunt something to eat. They were gone about two hours and returned to find that their comrades had been captured by the Confederates. They pushed forward and lived upon blackberries for three days, having several narrow escapes from being captured. Finally MR. STEBBINS' partner (whose name was George) was taken sick, and they were obliged to secrete themselves in a barn. In the morning he notified the planter and his family of their condition. It happened that the family was loyal and they did everything possible for the sick boy. They remained in the barn until the fight of General Rosecrans and Floyd, at Carnifax Ford, Gauly River, twenty days after the fight on the hill. In the morning he sent little Johnny (the nephew of the old man) on horse back, to find out how the battle terminated. He was not gone long before he came flying back, bareheaded (he had lost his cap on the way), rushed up to the barn and said, "Come on, boys, Rosecrans whipped them." So MR. STEBBINS got George out of the hay mow, went to the house, and slept there that night. The following morning, with George's arms around his neck, he walked to the camp, three miles from the house, where George was placed in care of the hospital corps and on the next morning was sent to Charleston, W. Va., where he died the third day after.

At the time MR. STEBBINS went into Rosecrans' camp, there could not be produced in the confederate army one who could eclipse him in regard to uniform, his U. S. uniform having been completely torn from his body in passing through brier bushes, with the Johnnies in hot pursuit. His pants were gray with white cotton patches, puckered up blouse, dyed with black walnut shucks; chip hat with rim tied on with strings, and toes out of shoes. One side of his face half shaved (or beard torn out by the roots, his razor having been whetted on a scythe stone, he had to postpone the shave).

Immediately after delivering George to the hospital corps, he went in search of the Cleveland company of the 23rd O. V. I., commanded by Captain Mackelrath. He found him and grasping his hand said, "How are you, Cap." The captain looked at him seriously, then said, "Who in —— are you, anyway?" He told him, and the Captain yelled for the boys to turn out. He was never so tossed and twisted in his life as he was for the next few minutes. Colonel Hayes, afterwards President of the United States, came up while the circus was on and asked the Captain who MR. STEBBINS was. The Captain took him to the Colonel and introduced him. Smiles were all over the Colonel's face when he looked him over. His generosity was aroused, and he told the Captain to take STEBBINS to the commissary and get him a uniform and have it charged to him. They started to the commissary's and when passing by General Rosecrans' tent, were hailed by the General, who stood in the doorway, "Captain, who have you got there?" The Captain replied, "One of the 7th O. V. I. boys." The General, with a smile on his lips, said, "Do you know whom you remind me of?" MR. STEBBINS answered, "No, Sir," and asked him of whom he reminded him. General Rosecrans said, "Thompson's Artillery," that he had captured the day before. MR. STEBBINS replied that he had done a good job. The General smiled and asked him if he was acquainted with the roads about there. When he told him that he knew every road and path for miles around, the General asked him to come into his tent, where his maps were on a rude table. He told MR. STEBBINS that he was sorry that he did not get all of Floyd's army, and asked if there was any road by which he could have headed them off from the ferry. MR. STEBBINS told him that there was a private road three miles north, that crossed to the ferry. The General called his orderly, who stood waiting; and, after MR. STEBBINS had given directions, the orderly started to investigate, and was soon back from a ride of about eight or nine miles, and reported to the general that the road was good to the ferry, and could be used for getting artillery and all branches of the army safely over. The atmosphere was getting blue. MR. STEBBINS said he never saw a man so mad before in his life as the General was. He kicked over the table and maps; threw a camp stool, and if MR. STEBBINS had not dodged, it would have hit him. The General saw this and said that he did not throw at him and added, "If I had only known of this private road I would have given everything I have in the world. I am sorry, sorry."

After MR. STEBBINS had received his uniform, he received transportation, and soon joined his regiment at Charlestown, W. Va. They were surprised to see him, as he had been reported killed. His regiment was transferred to the Army of the Potomac, after the possession of West Virginia by our troops. Then came the battles of Port Republic, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg, with other minor fights. It was then transferred to Sherman in the south, and had its share of fighting at Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Buzzards Roost, Reseca, and in several smaller fights. At Reseca, MR. STEBBINS was one of the men who carried horses, cannon, etc., up a steep bank, at an angle of forty-five degrees, to gain a position that commanded the Rebel fortifications, and then made it hot for them. He was with General Sherman on his march to the sea. "Sherman's Bummers," as they were called, came across a big flock of chickens on a plantation; and in no time each of the "Bummers" had from one to three chickens apiece. MR. STEBBINS ran after an old rooster and chased him for over an hour, around the barn, under the barn, and finally towards the house. Both were played out. Just as they reached the corner of the house, MR. STEBBINS' foot caught on a board sidewalk and over he went. In falling, he reached and caught the rooster by the tail, little knowing that General Hooker and General Sherman were sitting on the front steps, not over three feet from him. General Hooker said, "Well done, young man," and they both broke out in laughter and kept it up until he was out of sight. When he cooked the rooster it was too tough to eat and he threw it to a dog. The dog gave it up, too tough for him. At that time the soldiers had orders to live on the country.

When they were within twenty miles of Atlanta, the time of enlistment having expired three months before, the officers waited upon General Hooker, who immediately wrote out their transportation papers for home. One not placed in their position (three years from their loved ones at home) cannot fathom the joy in their hearts as they marched to the railroad station to take the cars for home, but how sad the thought that, out of eighteen hundred, only two hundred and fifty returned. The brave boys who were left behind are buried all over Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama. God bless them!

After remaining in his old home for many years, MR. STEBBINS removed, in 1881, to Florida, for the benefit of the health of his wife and himself, where he located a homestead and set out orange trees. They grew to bearing and yielded rich harvests, until the heavy frosts of December, 1894, and February, 1895, cut them to the ground. He planted again, and the trees were full of bloom, when the frost of February, 1899, again blasted his hopes. He has a good home and likes the climate, so will probably end his days there.

We append some reminiscences of his early days, written by him in his sixty-ninth year.

"In my young school days, one of my favorite companions was Sammy

Magan, a small red haired boy, plucky as could be. I became his favorite friend through a fight between him and a larger boy by the name of Johnson, a brother of the late Henry C. Johnson, Commissioner of United States Customs. Johnson had little Sammy down and was pounding him unmercifully, and I could not stand it any longer. I hit Johnson a powerful blow between the eyes, which settled him on that occasion.

In time Sammy and I parted. Sammy to take a position in the United States Navy and I to go west. During the war I was taken to a hospital at Alexandria. While convalescing, I was appointed postmaster of the hospital, and had occasion to go to the general post office on official business. In going down the Potomac on the boat I saw two officers attached to the flotilla of the Potomac, which Sammy Magan, as Lieutenant, was commanding. I approached them with the customary salute and asked them where I would be likely to find Commander Magan. They looked me over from head to foot, and then in answer said they did not know and looked at me as if it made little difference whether I knew or not. However, I found out at the Navy Yard that Com. Magan's headquarters were at the Willard Hotel. I called at the hotel and asked the clerk if Magan was in. He told me that he was and asked me for my card. When I told him that I had none he asked me my name, which I told him. Magan was standing at the head of the stairs and heard the conversation. When he heard my name he yelled "Admit him." Magan met me at the head of the stairs and pulled me into the room and down into a chair. Down came two or three decanters of brandy, etc., with a box of cigars, and we drank to old times. While smoking, with our feet upon the table, there came a rap at the door. Magan called "Come in," and in came the same officers I had met on the boat. They saluted and were astonished to see me taking things easy and in a manner they dared not do. I paid no attention to their salute. Their orders were soon given them and out they went. Poor, miserable, proud fools! Sammy wanted to transfer me to his flagship, as one of his clerks, but I loved my regiment (the 7th Ohio) too much.

Sammy's father made a visit to his ship to see him, but he was at Washington. The sailors, not knowing him, got him into a game of cards. The son came on board and found his father sitting on the forward deck playing. "Why, father, what are you doing?" "Oh! just amusing the boys," said the father, who was full of fun. They were astonished to find out who he was.

While I was visiting a Meadville company, guarding the White House, and talking to Lieutenant Dickson, who should come walking down to the Company's tents, but our dear friend, Abraham Lincoln (lamented and honored as long as history can be carried). God bless him! Dickson introduced the President to me. He asked me many questions in regard to my regiment. "Yes, yes," was his reply to me. He knew the history of every regiment in the army. On retiring he said to me, "Now when you come to Washington, come and see me." Shaking his hand, I promised to do so, but it was the last time I ever saw him, the one who became a martyr because he loved the whole people—North—South—East and West. What a warmth of love he had for his native country. Again, God bless him!

I enlisted in Milwaukee for the Mexican war. While bent over blacking my shoes, one of the Company, a Dutchman, pulled the bench from under me, which hurt me some. While he was blacking his shoes, I tricked him the same way. He jumped to his feet and struck me. At that I landed him one on his face full length, which loosened some of his teeth. Just at that moment the second sergeant grabbed me by the throat and was choking me. I wanted my breath, and let him have it between the eyes and left the print of my knuckles there. Just then the orderly came in and placed me under arrest, to be court-martialed. In those days it was death to strike your superior. I was tried, but the evidence given in proved that I was not the aggressor. The chevrons were cut from the sergeant's arm and transferred to mine. Promoted from drummer to sergeant, pretty big jump! I got tired of office, got back my drum and was contented.

While in camp on the Tennessee River, my Colonel made the remark that he wished he had a good drink of whiskey. I hunted up a negro who knew the country and found that there was a distillery about fifteen miles in the rebel lines. I started alone through the woods, and found the distillery, but had to hide under the floor until the rebel cavalry departed. Then I popped in with a gold dollar and got two canteens full of corn whiskey. He wanted to know what I was. I told him I was one of Hood's Scouts, but I got out of there as soon as possible and got safely back to camp in the evening. I astonished my Colonel when I told him of my going through the rebel lines. Well, the Col. got happy over the canteen, and of course I felt sort of funny, too."

"MY SIXTY-EIGHTH BIRTHDAY.

Another year has passed! Upon the shore
 Of Life's expansive ocean still I wait
 The coming of that craft predestinate
 For all mankind, now and forevermore:—
 Nor can I say that the unceasing roar
 Of Time's relentless tide has been so great
 As would the coming sounds obliterate
 Of songs celestial sailors brave outpour.
 The waiting is not tedious; for the glint
 Of sunshine on the crystaled-bosom sea
 Doth charm my eye while dallying here with Time,
 And seems the way to point to heaven's blue tint,
 Beyond which, well I know, remain for me
 A fairer sunshine and a lovelier clime.

August 21st, 1899.

son of Sarah Bliss Stebbins and Samuel Knight Foster, born September 18, 1845, at Springfield, Massachusetts; married June 5, 1872, at South Deerfield, Franklin County, Massachusetts, to JULIA MARIA ARMS, born June 28, 1853, at South Deerfield, who was a daughter of Charles Arms. Occupation, visitor State Board of Charity. Politics, Republican. Residence, Springfield, Massachusetts.

CHILDREN:

4659. I. Walter Arms Foster, born April 26, 1875.
 4660. II. Robert Arthur Foster, born October 3, 1881.
 4661. III. Charles Daniel Foster, born October 22, 188—.

WILLIAM WILBERFORCE FOSTER enlisted on August 29, 1864, in the 30th Company of Massachusetts Unattached Heavy Artillery, Captain Samuel R. Bingham, to serve one year or during the war. Immediately after the company was sworn into the service on Court Square, Springfield, Massachusetts, they embarked on a train for Boston, where they were taken on board a harbor steamer and landed at Galloups Island. There they remained some two weeks, and received their uniforms, guns, and equipments. They then embarked on the steamer "Hudson" (an English blockade runner captured by the Government), and reported at Fortress Monroe, then were landed at the Navy Yard wharf at Washington, D. C. They were quartered for the night at Fort Lincoln. Before entering the Fort, the men were halted, and President Lincoln, who was accompanied by his personal staff, coming from the Soldiers Home, made a short address to the Company. The next day they marched over Maryland Heights, through Washington and Alexandria, across the Aqueduct bridge, to Fort Barry. After remaining several weeks in this fort, they were quartered at Fort C. F. Smith, their service being entirely on the defences of Washington. During this time MR. FOSTER was off duty but once, and that was when he and one other ran away to Washington. On his return he was given a "knap-sack drill," standing on a barrel for two hours. The Company performed the service allotted it, but saw no active engagements with the enemy. On June 16, 1865, the Company was mustered out of service at Fort C. F. Smith, Virginia.

MR. FOSTER'S discharge stated that he was "five feet, nine inches high; light complexion, hazel eyes, brown hair." Occupation, an armorer.

son of Aaron Warner Stebbins and Lucy Doolittle Chapin, was born August 4, 1828 (or 1829), at Vermont; died February 6 (or 13), 1885, at Camden, Madison County, Mississippi; married April 4, 1854, at Camden, Madison County, Mississippi, to RACHEL JEMIMA FLEMING, born December 20, 1834, near Camden, Madison County, Mississippi, who was a daughter of George Anson Fleming and Mary Moore. Occupation, school teacher for a number of years; farmer; lawyer. Politics, Democrat. Religion, Cumberland Presbyterian. Resided at Madison County, Mississippi, and Cattaraugus County, New York.

CHILDREN:

4679. I. Anson Warner, born February 10, 1855; married Emma E. Hart.+
4680. II. Edwin Marion, born February 2, 1857; married Mary Area.+

EDWIN ADONIS STEBBINS left his Vermont home and went south some years before the Civil War. He first stopped in the State of Tennessee, where he was a Daguerrotypist; and afterwards went to Mississippi, where he followed the same occupation. He taught school for several years and became one of the noted teachers of Madison County. He intended to build up a school to fit boys and girls for college, but the war destroyed his plans. When he went south, the Slavery question was at its greatest agitation, and northern men were looked on with suspicion. However, he soon won the confidence and respect of the people and was held in high esteem until his death. He was opposed to the secession of the south, but when it came he determined to stay with the people among whom he had married and cast his lot.

On account of poor health and his being a teacher, he was not forced into the army, as was every able bodied man who did not volunteer. Before the close of the war, however, he resigned his school and joined the state troops, going into active service.

After the war he was elected administrator for Madison County, and was removed by the military governor. Before the war he was a whig in politics; but after the reconstruction, joined the democratic party. In 1875 he was elected to represent Madison County in the state legislature. He practiced law for a number of years, principally in the county courts. Before the war he wrote several poems which were published in the Watchman and Evangelist.

 4682. II. William Theodore, born June 10, 1869; unmarried; electrical engineer; lives at Homestead, Pennsylvania.

THEODORE C. STEBBINS owned a farm of seventy or more acres, five miles east of Battle Creek, Michigan. The soil was very sandy, and it is still a wonder to his descendants how he managed to make enough money off it to erect the fine large house which is now the residence of his son, Frederick D. Stebbins.

WILLIAM THEODORE STEBBINS graduated in 1890, at the Battle Creek High School. He afterwards took a four years' course at the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, graduating from that institution in 1896, with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Electrical Engineering. He is now employed in the Carnegie works at Homestead, Pennsylvania.

 4687. V. Charles Aaron, born February 21, 1881; died September 3, 1882.
 4688. VI. Myrtie Philena, born February 9, 1886.

HARLAN CHARLES STEBBINS lived on the farm on which he was born until he was of age. Soon after reaching his majority he started for Camden, Mississippi, where he remained until February, 1861, when the war breaking out made it too hot for him to stay longer. He returned to his native town and the following September he started for Michigan, which he made his home for ten years. In January, 1872, he went to Grassy Cove, Cumberland County, Tennessee, and about the year 1879 he removed to Grandview, Rhea County, in the same State, where he still resides. He went south in the hopes of having better health, as he is a great sufferer from Asthma, but the change of climate afforded him very little relief, so he has been practically an invalid for the most part of his life. He has held the office of President of the Board of Trustees of Grassy Cove Academy.
